

CARRANZA FACES BIG PROBLEMS OF FINANCE; U. S. TO AID MEXICO

New Government Must Meet Claims Aggregating $250,000,000—Must Rely on Natural Resources

AWAIT FOREIGN CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—With Carranza established as head of the de facto government of Mexico, the United States and the other Powers responsible for his selection are now carefully considering how the new government shall be financed. Mexico is absolutely bankrupt. Its industries are almost completely ruined. Many of its cities have been practically destroyed. In order to obtain the means needed to restore the republic to its place in the family of nations enormous sums of money must be supplied. And all that now is available as security on which to borrow the money—probably three-quarters of a billion dollars—from American bankers, are the natural resources of the country. It is now realized that the United States must finance Mexico for the next two generations.

Officials of the State Department very frankly admit that the claims which must be assumed by Carranza for damages sustained by American interests and the permanent government that will succeed him will exceed $250,000,000. And there are some officials who say that the figure will be double that sum. The Southern Pacific Railway, the Guggenheim smelting interests, the Greene Consolidated Copper Company and hundreds of other American corporations and individuals have claims that total well into the hundreds of millions. Then there are the death claims on behalf of the 250 or more Americans who have fallen victims to the Mexican bandits and the hundreds of claims on behalf of the American and other foreign ranchers whose establishments have been looted and buildings burned during the passage of the tide of rapine and robbery to and fro across the most prosperous section of Mexico.

British oil and railway corporations likewise have filed claims for millions. So have French, Spanish, German and Chinese manufacturers, when elected, and even when the legal claims are separated from those which are to be repudiated the sum total will be hard to raise.

To finance the claims it is expected that a bond issue, secured by the internal resources, customs duties, and a system of taxation to be devised by the new Mexican Congress, when elected, will be ordered. These bonds will have the unofficial guarantees, at least, of the United States and Latin-American countries.

BRYN MAWR GRADUATE TRAPS WHITE SLAVERS

Mrs. Joseph A. Bryant Rouses Court With Story of Detective Work

Mrs. Joseph A. Bryant, of Boston, widely-known sociological investigator and graduate of Bryn Mawr College, started even the hardened hangers-on of General Sessions Court in New York before Judge Murray, when she told her description of how she posed as the keeper of a disorderly house to trap white slave operators.

With Detective Enright, head of the New York white slave squad, Mrs. Bryant fitted up a flat. She went to Elmer's "Little Italy" as "Madam Wallace" and there met Ralph Guarano, Joseph Spotta and George Spicca. By arrangement the five met her later in the flat. Bryant painted the detective's eye black and he told them he had been in a fight.

Cigarette stumps were scattered about the floor, together with empty wine bottles. Mrs. Bryant told the white slavers she wanted to buy some girls. She testified that the three accepted $50 in marked money after bringing five girls to the flat. Spotta and Spicca confessed and pleaded guilty while Guarano, who was the evidence. The trial of Guarano, who pleaded not guilty, is continuing today.

Since her graduation, Mrs. Bryant has been a student of sociology. She has done considerable work for the Federal authorities in connection with the white slave investigation in Porto Rico and elsewhere. Deputy Police Commissioner Lord engaged her last May to collect evidence against the white slavers of New York.

It was denied at Bryn Mawr College today that Mrs. Bryant had ever attended that institution. The secretary of the college said that the lists of married alumni did not contain the name of Mrs. Bryant. She also said that the lists were complete.

DR. RICHMOND TO TAKE STAND

Clergyman Says His Testimony in Ecclesiastical Trial Will Be Sensational

The Rev. George Chalmers Richmond, rector of St. John's Church, 31 and Brown streets, will take the stand in his own defense at the session of his ecclesiastical trial, in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany on 13th street below Spruce street late today.

Mr. Richmond has promised that his testimony will be sensational. His attorneys anticipate he will fully substantiate their contention that their client was forced to do certain things, for which he is on trial, by the goading and persecution of certain members of his vestry.

At the trial yesterday afternoon, after much wrangling between the lawyers, certain persons were allowed to testify that the trouble between the rector and members of his parish dated from the time that a protégé of Mr. Richmond's, E. Howard Kenner, announced his engagement to a young woman other than the sister of William T. Hamilton, to whom, it is alleged, he had been attentive. Hamilton is a member of the famous curbside vestry, and one of those who have been active in attempting to depose Mr. Richmond as rector.

Most of the testimony in the trial heretofore has been of a technical nature and involved. When Mr. Richmond takes the stand, it is expected his testimony will be more direct in his effort to refute or justify the letters he wrote to Bishop Rhinelander, which are on record as testimony in the trial.

truck at Ardmore by Mrs. James D. Winsor, Lower Merion suffrage leader. Among those who accompanied the bell in automobiles were Mrs. M. J. Ensign, Mrs. J. Howard Brown, Mrs. Clement A. Grierson, Mrs. Edward Y. Hartshorne, Mrs. Ferree Brinton and Dr. Bertha Lewis.

A large delegation of Philadelphia suffragists in the "Burnham winner" and other automobiles officially welcomed the bell at Overbrook, where it was shrouded. It was then brought to the city to be turned over to a corps of electricians for decoration with lights. Among those in the party were Miss Sarah Chambers, Mrs. M. D. Griffith, Mrs. Paul Kellogg, Mrs. Philip Hughes, Mrs. K. Halligan, Miss Gratta Eareckson, Miss Mary Rhinehart and Mrs. George A. Piersol.

Senator Clapp, of Minnesota, who will be the chief speaker at the rally at the Academy of Music tonight, was met at the Baltimore and Ohio station shortly before 2 o'clock by a delegation.

BELL BEING DECORATED.

The parade will be a picturesque and spectacular culmination of an unprecedented campaign of activity on the part of Pennsylvania suffragists to convince the electorate of the State of the need and justice of woman's enfranchisement.

Starting at Broad and Mifflin streets, thousand of women, on foot and in motor, together with hundreds of men sympathizers, will comprise a torchlight procession that for sheer beauty and artistic effect is expected to rival any pageant ever held before.

With its clapper tied to symbolize the voiceless condition of women, and accompanied by its escort of State suffrage officers and the suffrage pioneers, Mrs. Charlotte Pierce, Mrs. Jane Campbell and Miss Anna Heacock, the bell will head the procession, its truck drawn by a cohort of 50 young suffragists.

DAY OFF ENDS IN HOSPITAL

Man Gathers "Mushrooms," Eats 'Em and Has Toadstool Poisoning

William Brester spent a delightful day in the country. He frolicked among the woodlands and, as the poets say, drank in with rapture the inspiring autumn breezes. Incidentally, William picked "mushrooms." He is now doing nicely in the University Hospital.

Brester, who is a trolley car conductor, living at 653 Woodland avenue, got tired of car bells and nickel fares and decided to spend a day gathering mushrooms. Through the hills and dales of Darby he gambled, picking the innocent mushrooms hither and thither. They grew few and far between and he returned home at night tired and weary. His mother cooked them for him, and three-quarters of an hour later he was resting on a comfortable hospital cot, suffering from toadstool poisoning. Doctors said it was good they did grow few and far between, as if Brester had eaten a few more he would have died. Brester says he intends to spend his next day off in the city.

G. W. POST AGAIN INDICTED

"Retired Banker" Whose Arrest in 1910 Caused Stir on Main Line

George W. Post, the well-mannered "retired banker," formerly of Wynnewood, whose arrest here in May, 1910, on charges of swindling caused a stir in Main Line society, is again under arrest in New York on an indictment found in 1915 accusing him of illegally securing $400. He may be brought to this city to answer charges of jumping a $25,000 bail bond.

Post, who posed as a wealthy retired banker here, was released from the Federal Prison at Atlanta, Ga., a few months ago. He served a sentence of three years on a charge of making more than a million dollars through mail fraud schemes. His partner, E. A. Starkle, who was arrested with him in Broad Street Station five years ago, has never been captured.
