

NANCY WYNNE FINDS THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS PERVADEING ALL

Many Charities for the Poor and Deserving Are Interesting Persons in Society—Philadelphia Girls to Attend Northfield Conference

As the week advances the Christmas spirit grows and glows with greater splendor, and it seems to me every day I hear of some beautiful thing some one has done to help another. It is a great thing to aid others. It makes us appreciate our own blessings more than ever, and it gives a broader, kinder knowledge of the joys and sorrows of others, which can only be brought about through experience. There is an unexplainable feeling of peace about Christmas; it is in the air about the season, a sort of hush and expectant waiting for the coming anew of the little Christ Child in the hearts of His people.

Only yesterday I heard of a woman who is all know, rich and yet so glad to share her riches with those who have not. She has undertaken to look after the Christmas joy of 200 poor families, who will never know their benefactress is, for it is only on that condition that she will do this good work. Look at the kindly work in the hospital, too. There is the Abraham Lincoln Entertainment Committee at the University of Pennsylvania, named after dear old Professor Abraham Lincoln, who has been so long a prominent figure in Philadelphia life. The women on this committee go personally to the University Hospital on Christmas Day and entertain the patients. Then those poor, sick people out at Blooming: Who can tell the joy which is brought to them by the number of ladies who go there every Christmas Eve and distribute fruit, candies, gingernuts and ice cream.

This latter work has been going on for nearly 50 years, the Christmas celebration being only a tiny part of it, as week in, week out these same good women visit the sick and suffering at the hospital all the year round. There is so much good done in the world if we only stop to look for it.

I was interested to hear at the Butcher-Renshaw wedding reception last week that Doctor Butler, Ethan Flagg Butler, you know, was in Serbia during the typhus plague, at the head of the surgical force, and was the only one who did not contract it. He endured all manner of sufferings and received a number of medals for his bravery at that time. He and Margaret Renshaw were married last Saturday, in Germantown, and are now on their wedding trip.

It was so amusing last night at the Lyric to see Ruth and Standley Stokes chaperoning a small party. They were evidently going to the Penrose Ball afterward. Among others I noticed Jean Bullitt, who by the way is looking very smart these days. I saw her at a tea last week in a stunning gown of white broadcloth trimmed with wide bands of black fox fur. She had a black muff, too, and a white silk beaver hat. I don't know when I have seen her look better. Ruth seems so very young to be a chaperon; only this time last year she was preparing for her first Assembly, a timid little debutante. But so the world wags on.

The Philadelphia Northfield Committee will hold a midwinter conference about January 10; that is, the girls who are going up to attend it will have here on January 10 for Northfield, Mass. The conference will last four days. Mary Clayton, whose engagement to Ralph Earle was announced this morning; Elizabeth Deana, Esther Howell, Isabel Howell and Eliza Reath are going from here. About 100 girls altogether from the various cities of the Union will attend. Each city has named its head delegate and several additional guests. Mary Fay will be the Boston delegate, and Mrs. Harper Sibley and Caroline Clark, of Rochester, N. Y., will represent that city. The conference is held on local missionary work, in which all these young girls are interested.

Members of the Main Line Branch of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild met last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. John Harvey Gordon, on Elliott avenue, Bryn Mawr, to pack a second case of relief supplies for the Allies. Mrs. Gordon's husband is fighting in France, and, of course, she is greatly interested in the sufferings of the Allies in the trenches. She was Margaret Thouron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Thouron.

This last box will be sent on the Minnesota, which will sail from Philadelphia tomorrow, and it contains gause, sponges, bandages, mufflers, trivets, knit socks and all manner of things. St. James Palace, in London, has been turned into a warehouse for clothing and hospital supplies, and the box will go straight there and its contents be put to immediate use.

Mrs. Gordon holds the meetings at her home every Tuesday, and she and her fellow workers are very glad of any assistance, as they hope to ship a case every month, as long as the war continues.

So Molly Bally and Brewster Koons have announced their engagement. Every one has been so sure of it I cannot be very well surprised, but I am glad, for they are so happy and Molly is a dear, and I wish them joy with all my heart. They are both so small I was thinking when I saw them at the Charity Ball they danced in the May set, by the way, that they looked like a pair of children.
