OVERHEAD BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF NORTHWESTERN SECTION OF PHILADELPHIA, LOOKING TOWARDS THE DELAWARE RIVER, AS A BALLOONIST SEES IT
 The picture was taken from a height of about a mile. Beginning at the lower left-hand corner of the view, the most prominent objects are the old Athletics' ball field at 26th and Jefferson streets, now a recreation centre; reservoir; Girard College and grounds, lying like a long rectangle almost in the centre of the picture; and on the extreme right, the Eastern Penitentiary. Just north of Girard College is the Church of the Gesu. Between Girard College and the reservoir, on the right, are the German Hospital and the Mary Drexel Home. In the middle of the distant river is Petty's Island. The picture illustrates clearly how the Girard College grounds bottle up the section to the northeast of it and make long detours necessary for traffic.

YOUNG RECRUITS AID OLD KING PETER ON HIS WAY TO EXILE
 The photo shows the pathetic feature of a King on route to his exile. The youngest recruits of Serbia's army, who are from 15 to 17 years of age, are shown here emptying a cartridge wagon and hitching oxen to it in order that their King may at least go to his exile in some sort of vehicle.

REMNANTS OF SERBIAN ARMY IN RETREAT TO ALBANIA
 Tattered and exhausted infantrymen have sunk down in the ditches alongside the road to rest what rest they can get while weary cavalrymen sleep. Virtually all of Serbia's 1,000,000 men are now in a state of panic.
