

WOMAN AND THE HOME—SEWING ADVICE—QUERIES

IS THE 'CLOTHES CENSOR' A BOON OR JUST AN IMPERTINENCE?

Recent Action Taken by Certain Large Companies Makes One Wonder Whether an Overdressed Damsel Is Necessarily Incompetent

SHE got in a No. 42 car the other morning, bound for her daily toil, she was short and slender, almost childlike in her delicate contour. Her big blue eyes were accentuated by arched brows of a beautifully penciled brown tint, properly placed to the fashionable hair lines. A lip stick had lent its freshness to the mouth, turning the petulant Cupid's bow into a burb of scarlet on a chalk-white background.

Company thinks so. They have put the ban on what the eloquent Mr. Sunday calls "frizzy-headed Lizzyes." To prove that they mean what they say, they have an official censor, a woman whose duty it is to hire none but girls whose appearance is satisfactory. Every big company whose business requires girls in the aggregate—large flocks of them—may soon be yelling for a "censor."

The reason is not entirely the attitude of the girls themselves. It lies also in the fact that the men in the offices with them are distracted from their work by these modern Queens of Sheba. Isn't this a confession of weakness on the part of the men? If their caliber is such that a well-turned ankle and a baby stare attract their wandering glances in the office, isn't the same thing likely to occur outside the office, too?

I remember hearing of a well-known New York publisher, owner of a famous newspaper syndicate, who hated fat men so bitterly that he would go around and "fire" every fat man who happened to enter his employ. This censorship seems to me to be similar in principle. You can't stop girls from powdering and painting any more than you can reduce the paucity of fat man by "firing" him.

And is it quite fair to judge a girl's abilities by her looks? I have seen "dolled-up" girls whose sole ambition was to succeed in the career they had chosen. And I have seen demure, quiet little misses whose only object in entering the business world was to get a husband.

There's no such thing as something for nothing in the business world. And the ability to hold down a job is irrespective of appearance—you just have one, or you haven't. Is censorship really necessary?

SEEN IN THE SHOPS

SATIN FROCK FOR AFTERNOON WEAR

The sketch shows the new jacket effect and drapery at the side of the skirt. The gown comes in sizes from 14 to 44. It is made of heavy satin and has a fold of white georgette crepe at the neck. The same fabric forms the collar. The waist closes in surplus fashion and is finished with a handsome silk ornament. The sleeves are attached to the lining—one of the fall fashions—and are made of satin. They terminate in a bell at the wrist and form a deep cuff which fastens with silk buttons. The skirt hangs in graceful lines. This may be had in navy blue and black. Other colors may be ordered. Price, $37.50.

The name of the shop where these articles may be purchased will be supplied by the Editor of the Woman's Page, EVENING LEDGER, 608 Chestnut street. The request must be accompanied by a stamped self-addressed envelope, and must mention the date on which the article appeared.

GEORGE LONG WILL TELL EXPERIENCES WITH DOPE

Inasmuch Mission Head Inspired by Evening Ledger Series

George Long, head of the Inasmuch Mission, 1011 Locust street, will tell of his experience as a "dope" fiend in sermons entitled "Dope" at services this evening and tomorrow morning at the Inasmuch Mission, 1011 Locust street. The series of articles in the EVENING LEDGER, detailing increase of the narcotic drug scourge in this city, has inspired Mr. Long to unfold his experience in the hope that the public will see the need of an immediate remedy for the evil.

For twelve years Mr. Long was a smoker of opium; for three years he used morphine and for three years he was a cocaine addict. He was converted at the Galilee Mission several years ago, and cured himself of the "dope" habit without medical aid. His cure is considered one of the marvels of the medical world in this city.

Mr. Long contends that a "dope" fiend cannot hope for a permanent cure unless he accepts Divine aid. During the year that Mr. Long was undergoing his cure he tested and strengthened his will power by sleeping each night with a bottle of cocaine within easy reach.

"At any time," he said, "I could have stopped the hellish pains that tortured my body by reaching out and uncorking that little bottle. But I fought it through until I no longer craved for the drug. Now I could handle morphine, heroin and cocaine without feeling the slightest desire to use the stuff."

DEATH OF DR. E. R. FELL

Physician, Broker and Veteran of Civil War Dies

Dr. Edward Reese Fell, physician and broker and a veteran of the Civil War, died last night at 10 o'clock at his apartment in the Clinton, Tenth street below Spruce. He had been ill for several weeks. Doctor Fell was born in Philadelphia September 18, 1839. He received an academic education at Union Academy, in this city, and later was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. He received his degree as a doctor of medicine from the University of Pennsylvania.

During the Civil War Doctor Fell was an assistant surgeon in the Union Army. After the war he became resident physician at the Episcopal Hospital. On the death of his father, in 1866, he gave up his medical practice and became associated with his brother in the brokerage business established by his father, Reese D. Fell. They were first located at 303 Walnut street and afterward at 305 Walnut street.

Doctor Fell was a member of the Art Club since its incorporation and was deeply interested in the Philadelphia Home for Incurables. He had been a member of the advisory finance committee of that institution since 1893 and was its chairman for many years. He was a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Address all communications to Editor of Woman's Page. Write on one side of the paper only.

Dear Madam—If my question is in your line, would you kindly refer me to the charge of the lunch room in the West Philadelphia High School? An answer would be thankfully received. Miss Emma Smoley is in charge of all the lunch rooms in the public schools. You can find her at the Boys' Central High School after school opens. A letter sent to her at that address will reach her.

MARION HARLAND'S CORNER

Helped Little Girls

Many thanks for giving my address to Mrs. H. and Mrs. J. W. My two little girls have taken up German in school. They were much pleased. It saved at least a couple of dollars for school books. Maybe some day I may be able to help somebody. I only wish there were more good teachers in our world. My little girls say, "When we are big we will always have what we don't want and give it to others."

All communications addressed to Marion Harland should include a stamped, self-addressed envelope, with the name of the article in which you are interested.

Gets Generous Supply

Thank you for getting me shoes from Mrs. S. I received a pair of white and a pair of pumps and a pair of slippers. They were much better than the ones I had. I can't say too much for the shoes. I may be able to help somebody. I only wish there were more good teachers in our world. My little girls say, "When we are big we will always have what we don't want and give it to others."

tention of objecting to the rule which our valued member enunciates—that there are two sides to the prepayment of postage when large articles are forwarded. Until a parcel is weighed at the office the sender does not know how much she must pay for it, and cannot therefore appraise the prospective recipient as to the amount of postage due her. And there is always the chance that the negotiations will fall through or that the gift may miscarry.

Gave Silk Pieces

In reply to your letter I will say I am writing to M. C. and sent her silk pieces. G. O. T. Brief and pertinent I may add and characteristic of the writer of living the golden rule. To hear of an opportunity of helping another, means with her swift discharge of the duty and letting talk of it end there. But we are pleased that she let us catch the chime of the bell!

and incites what she thinks it may cost to the time she receives it. This applies to cases like the foregoing. When, as often happens, the donor expresses before-hand a willingness to pay postage or freight, the way is clear. We must do our utmost to accept the gift. We are glad to see that children. And a real toy for the younger boy would not be amiss.

Fond Hopes Realized

I have just received a most beautiful camera from Mr. S. I have been thinking of it for all the trouble it has gone to get one for me? I can't say too much for the camera. I may be able to help somebody. I only wish there were more good teachers in our world. My little girls say, "When we are big we will always have what we don't want and give it to others."

An echo in which there is never a dissident note. It is pure joy throughout, and should gladden the soul of the noble man who conferred the great happiness. One does not get a camera every day or every year! We congratulate all the parties to the transaction, and also the Corner, which has had the privilege of acting as agent and coworker.

Foreign Stamps to Give

I include a few stamps for Arthur S. If these are boys who would like to get Indian, Japanese, and other stamps, they may want to see them. If they write saying what kind they wish, I will send them. I am sending Mr. S. a few stamps. I hope they will be of some use to him. I wish I could send more. I am sending Mr. S. a few stamps. I hope they will be of some use to him. I wish I could send more.

The foreign stamps went for Arthur S. to lucky Arthur S. As lucky will be the collectors who make choice of any of the stamps named by our correspondent.

Must Live Out of Doors

I wrote before, offering magazine, novels, paper, ankle braces and a pair of crutches. You got the books and the crutches. I wrote, but did not get the ankle braces. I am sending you a pair of ankle braces. I hope they will be of some use to you. I wish I could send more.

Readers who desire help with their dress problems will address communications to the Editor of the Woman's Page, the Evening Ledger.

WHATSOEVER may be said of fashion's vagaries—whether it be furs in mid-summer and georgette crepe in mid-winter—she has at last distinguished herself by being wholly and consistently rational. For, in the shop windows, conspicuously displayed because of their attractiveness as well as their expensiveness, are the most fascinating woolen dresses for winter.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

can't help feeling all alone in nearly everything so far no one knows my inside self—the way too?

Dear Madam—I am making a Russian blouse dress of navy blue serge. I am in a dark light and inclined to be somewhat pale. I have some little bits of fur or collar that I would like to see. I am sending you a pair of shoes. I hope they will be of some use to you. I wish I could send more.

By all means have your blouse bonneted, with a deep yoke front and back, finished off by hemstitching. This is the newest of the many Russian blouse styles in dark material. Hemstitched tucks add charm to the skirt. At the bottom of the tunic have three bands of brown marabout, slightly wired. A soft chemise and collar of flesh-colored chiffon, beaded in pale blue, crystal and chartruse green beads, adds distinction. You can buy the beading designs and do the work, or have it done for you little.
