

NEW FRANKLIN BANK BUILDING SEEN FROM ABOVE
The new marble and bronze home of the Franklin National Bank, Chestnut street above Broad, was "unveiled" to public gaze a short time ago when the high fence was removed from around it. The view here reproduced is one not so well known.

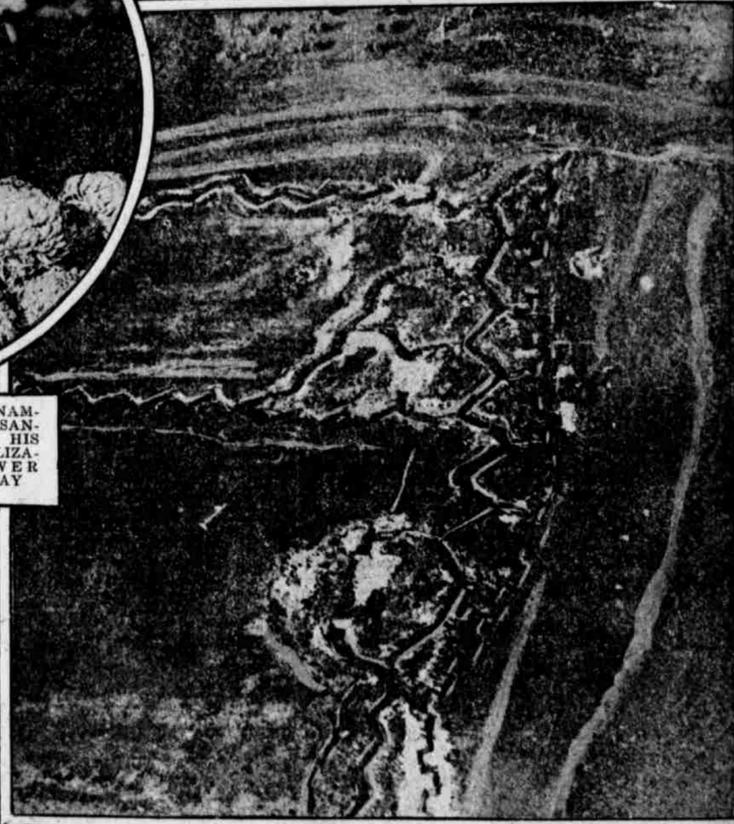

McTAMMANY'S DONKEY COMES BACK INTO HIS OWN
When it appeared virtually certain that Woodrow Wilson was re-elected President of the United States, "Jimmy" Byrne gathered as many of his Democratic cohorts as he could find around the famous "McTammany's Donkey" and paraded through Port Richmond.

MAYOR SMITH NAMING A NEW CHRYSANTHEMUM AFTER HIS DAUGHTER ELIZABETH AT FLOWER SHOW YESTERDAY

SUNKEN BARGE DETROIT RAISED OFF KAIGHN POINT
The old scout cruiser Detroit, more recently a barge, rested on the bottom of the Delaware from early in September until yesterday. The Detroit was sunk in a collision with the Clyde liner Delaware.

WHAT THE AVIATOR SEES OF TRENCH FIGHTING
Photo by Central News Service.
The loop in the lower half of the picture is a machine-gun redoubt, from which the gunners enfilade invaders.

MAYOR'S DAUGHTER LOVES TO FEED THE PIGEONS
Elizabeth, for whom her father named the chrysanthemum yesterday, has no difficulty getting into the executive chamber at City Hall. However, she much prefers to spend her time feeding the flocks of pigeons. The birds have come to recognize her as a friend.

GREAT JEWELRY FIRM MOVES TO MAGNIFICENT NEW STORE
Gold and silver and gems worth millions were carried through Chestnut street today when the house of J. E. Caldwell & Co. started its removal from their old store near Ninth street to their new quarters in the Widener Building.