Williams Declares Mrs. Felch Shot Farmer With Former's Rifle

CHELSEA, Vt., June 22.—A sensational confession was introduced by the State to-day in the trial of Mrs. Anna Felch for the murder of her husband, Joseph Felch, on April 22, 1816.

The confession was made by Otis W. Williams, Felch's farm hand and the accused woman's alleged paramour. Wil-liams declared Mrs. Felch was guilty of improper relations with him within a month after he went to work for her husband. He swore she tried to bribe him with an offer of $1000 to "get rid of Felch."

Felch went to his sugar house on the night of the murder to ball sap. Williams declared Mrs. Felch followed her husband to the building, shot him dead with Williams's rifle and then returned and met him, Wil liams, in the house.
