

THE DAY'S VARIED HAPPENINGS IN PHILADELPHIA GRAPHICALLY PORTRAYED BY PHOTOGRAPHS

EMOTIONS MINGLE as "the boy" departs for the training camps; pride, willing sacrifice and the pain of separation, all struggle in the faces of the "home folks."

BY ITS DISTINCTION this faun afternoon suit, liberally trimmed with wolf fur, commends itself to the fashionable dresser.

CHESTNUT STREET pedestrians - think of France and gas masks at the sight of this helmeted workman operating a sand-throwing machine used in the laying of trolley tracks.

SCARCELY A DAY goes by without some sort of neighborhood celebration marking the departure of selected men. Above, celebration in the Ninth District.

THE SALVAGE OF UNIFORMS engages the services of many patriotic women at the army repair shop, 202 South Ninth street.

"SAVE YOUR PEACH-STONE" signs greet you everywhere now. The Independence Square Auxiliary of the Red Cross, 608 Chestnut street, guards over one of the "peach-stone" barrels.
