HOG ISLAND RIVETER WINS HIS $10 WAGER

Jack Meyers Drove 1111 When He Only Needed 1100 to Succeed

Jack Meyers, a Hog Island riveter, is $10 to the good and doesn't know what to do with it. He is not taking any time off to spend anything, as when the war is over Jack may be commuting out of New York on that Wall Street bankers' special.

One of the men working on the Quilt-cock to finish her for delivery to the Emergency Fleet bet Jack he couldn't drive 1100 rivets into the superstructure in a given time. Jack put up the spot, apart on his hands and went to it. He drove 1111 rivets and collected the coin. Meyers learned the trade fifteen years ago in the Rumley shops, at La Porte, Ind., and returned around until the war started. "I'm sticking to this job till it's done," said he.

Hog Island at Oriole Park! In other words, the Hog Island ball tossers play the Baltimore Shipbuilding and Drydock team at Oriole Park, Baltimore, today.

A shipworker's nurse is like the open book, only it is opened a little more freely than the book. For instance, Hog Island employees gave $200 as a token of their appreciation of the attention they had received there following inquiries, while at work. The men requested that the money be spent for a label mender, one of the hospital and leaders Webster, one of the hospital menders, and one in the hospital.

Remember when you meet a Hog Island guard that he has been turned into a watch. An official order that he is "Hog Island Watch," or "Hog Island." The uniform is the same and watch also that a cop in any other name can run as fleet.

Bill Moulton, a driver of an emergency truck at Hog Island, has enlisted in the army and is at Camp Dix, near Philadelphia. His father is still working at Hog Island and he still works at Hog Island as enough there anyway.

John F. Schubeck, chief clerk of the Hog Island fire department since its organization, has gone over to the utilities department, but he wishes to be re-elected upon the fire department's utility.

Several hundred houses in Germantown are said to be available for Hog Island workers, and the Emergency Fleet Corporation will run the houses. The uniform and watchmen right into Germantown if the occasion develops.

Hog Island has a new office in Miss V. H. Lewis, at Paul Baker's office in Ways Administration Building, 171. Miss Lewis has just published a military watch song which she dedicated to "The Boys and Girls of the Shipyard."

They marched eighteen youngsters through the Chester shipyard yesterday to help fill the crew of the tank carrier recently completed there. One of them was Archie Street, a lad seventeen years old, of 8118 North Fitzhugh street, who was a member of the "Fitzhugh" team.

Jersey plate and angle shop, says only those who believe can appreciate a grandfathers' prize.

Mr. Nash, assistant chief hull draftsman at the Gloucester shipyard, and his wife are reported at Hightstown, N. J., and turning to come in for their honeymoon on account of the increased cost of honeymooning on Government railroads.

Seattle, of the drawing-room force, took all day to get his hair cut, and Ted Aker, of the same department, who only took a half day, declares he will not be touched that way.

Metzler and Murray, of the Pusey & Jones electrical department, went away with all their back pay for a vacation and have not wired home yet.

A whole quart of liniment for a three-day fishing trip was thought too much to carry, but Sam Griffin, of the Pusey & Jones Gloucester machine shop, carried it one way. It was all used up. Sam always takes liniment along for colds. This time he was cold all the time and he rubbed it in through the pores. Not a bad idea.

Chester Shipyard, tries to catch the 8th train for Philadelphia because he thinks the chance of getting a seat on it better.

With his hair and eye threshold and in the hair, Jimmie Maher, deputy chief of police at the Chester Shipyard, is back on the job. Three weeks on his farm at Oakview, Pa., were a nice change, but he doesn't care now how soon he gets back to work. He made some other, but if he makes the draft he'll not need it. Maher has been rejected by several branches of the service, but still has hopes.

Henry, attached to the British Naval Intelligence Office, on their way back to England, paused in Philadelphia yesterday long enough to permit Lieutenant Colonel James A. Blair to conduct them to Hog Island.

Rear Admiral Lee's comment on the shipyard was simple and comprehensive: "The most wonderful thing I have ever seen in the world, in the way of shipbuilding," said the English officer.
