

GOSSIP OF THE STREET FINANCIERS FIND IT DIFFICULT TO PROPHECY MARKETS' FUTURE Many Things of Vital Importance Depend on Outcome of Steel Conference to Be Held Wednesday.

FINANCIERS as a rule find it difficult to express an opinion on the prospects for the present week. Last week in many instances previous calculations were upset. So many matters of vital importance depend on the outcome of the conference of the steel manufacturers' committee, to be held in Washington on Wednesday, that even those usually considered as the best informed are chary of expressing any decided opinions as to the immediate outlook. They claim that European matters do not look any too promising for an early peace settlement, and that market conditions will continue to be more or less swayed by reports from Paris.

Opinions of Bankers and Brokers

Butcher, Sherrerd & Hansell—While the reconstruction from a war to a peace basis sometimes seems very slow, we are nevertheless making steady progress day by day. Many big issues are being settled in less time and with less disturbance than would have been possible before the war. It has in the past always paid in the long run to be a bull on the United States. We believe in this policy still.

Edward B. Smith & Co.—Increasing activity in the stock market is so marked that it encourages a belief that large improvement in business conditions is to be expected. With this in view, investment should be made in high-grade railroad stocks that are selling below panic prices and in public utility stocks, which will be directly benefited by lower costs of materials and labor.

Thomas Newhall, a member of the firm of Edward B. Smith & Co., commissioned a lieutenant commander in the United States naval reserve force, returned to his desk today. Mr. Newhall served for about a year in active service abroad and later was attached to the Fourth Naval District. During the last month or so he has been resting up with his family at Palm Beach.

Frazier & Co.—It is a well-known fact that Wall street is ordinarily about six weeks ahead of the rest of the country in anticipating business conditions. Hence the "common citizen" is now wondering what the bull market means—whether it is discounting a great turn in the tide in business or an artificial inflation to enable the large operators to unload. A survey of many lines of business shows many inquiries but few orders. Pig iron, one of the greatest barometers, is almost unsalable and steel mills are closing down all over the country. On the other hand, a 50 per cent increase in freight rates to England points to a new movement in exports.

We believe, therefore, that speculators and business men should practice a little caution until such time as they see inquiries turning into orders—then wait in and bet on the future of the United States.

MacMeekin & Williamson—In our opinion a long view of the stock market would call for decided optimism, but we think the substantial advance in the price of nearly all stocks (excepting the coppers and a few railroads) has for the time being met with some impediments.

Undoubtedly the public has participated to some extent in the recent rising market, but it is doubtful whether the present advance is to be regarded as a permanent one. The coming spring, combined with the Liberty Loan campaign, may not impose certain difficulties in the way of any runaway bull market. On the other hand, should there be announcement of a constructive move for the relief of the railroads or the calling of Congress for this purpose in the next few weeks, it would give a decided stimulus.

Liberty Bonds, with their comparative exemption from taxation, are by far the most attractive bond investment, making an immediate advance in the general market for corporation bonds somewhat improbable. However, we think the prices of the latter will be maintained fairly stable in view of the attractive rates of return and high degree of security afforded by standard issues.

Chandler Brothers & Co.—There never has been such an enormous expansion of credits, and therefore purchasing power, in the world before. There, however, great readjustments in progress affecting labor, production, disposal of accumulated stocks, world-wide unrest, in many instances unrestrained, stabilization of nervous prices, the overhanging determination as to the return of commandeered properties to their proper ownership, such as the railroads, telephones and telegraphs, the regulation of sane conditions concerning state and federal commissions, which instead of protecting the alleged abused public have really persecuted and hounded corporate interests upon unfeeling and political reasoning.

The disposition to develop a constructive and helpful attitude is undoubtedly developing, but it is a large question and much work is ahead before substantial assistance may be rendered. These conditions naturally suggest the question as to whether present advances are to go forward to much greater heights at once or whether it will be occasional material recessions. The upward view seems to us the most reasonable, and we suggest that increased commitments on any further advance should be most carefully considered, and also that securing the generous profits already offered should be at least partially effected.

Henry L. Doherty & Co.—Reports from the producing oil fields of the United States show that consumption of oil is still far in excess of production and that the drain on stocks of crude oil in storage continues at an alarming rate.

At the close of business on January 31, 1919, there were 73,377,377 barrels of crude oil in storage in the principal eastern and western fields, comparing with 74,041,245 barrels in storage at the end of November, 1918, and 74,530,477 barrels at the end of December, 1918. Stocks of oil in storage were reduced 1,796,070 barrels in January, 1919, and 2,867,757 barrels in December, 1918.

Another large drain on the stocks was made in January, the reduction for the month being 1,796,070 barrels. This was wholly of mid-continent stocks, as those held in eastern lines and by the Illinois Pipe Line showed an increase. The reports from midcontinent showed a loss of 2,253,488 barrels for the month, while the stocks held in the eastern lines increased by 431,539 barrels and those of Illinois made a gain of 25,793 barrels. All the grades held in the eastern lines made fair increases, though none of them large. The greatest gain was in the crude received from the midcontinent, which was larger at the close of January than at the end of December by 293,650 barrels.

H. M. Bylesby & Co.—There is always a tendency among utility investors to become nervous when the fanfares of the public ownership doctrinaires are blown with vigor, and the talk about the railroads and telephones and telegraph systems is a present-day example. Whatever it will be the outcome of the railroad and wire line controversies—and it will hardly be government ownership and operation—there are several movements taking place affecting electric and gas companies of profound significance.

One of these is the rapidly widening distribution of utility investment securities among the people—not the citizens of wealth, but among the wage earners, the laboring men, the storekeepers, the farmers, professional men, executives and workers.

CORN HITS NEW TOP PRICES FOR SEASON

Probable Heavy Purchases for Germany and Heavy Rainfall Among Bull Factors

Chicago, March 17.—Probable heavy purchases of foodstuffs for Germany, difference on the part of farmers in shipping their grain, lack of contract stocks here and torrential rains in parts of the belt led to a resumption of the rush to buy corn today and the market displayed pronounced strength, new high records for the season being made. March was almost unobtainable. Much excitement attended the dealings, which were on a big scale. Cash firms sold heavily on bulging, but the pressure proved to be only a temporary check on the tendency of values to move upward.

It had been thought that shorts were being shut out of the market today, Saturday, but the action of prices today suggested that a large outstanding short interest remained. Eastern houses were impatient factors on the buying side. Cash advances were being made by commission houses and in sympathy with corn. Trade decreased after the start. Cash offers were stronger, but the advance in the market of the East. Bulls forced a sharp acreage. Receipts were disappointing and offerings from the country were light.
