

And So They Were Married

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR Copyright, 1919, by Public Ledger Co.

START THIS STORY TODAY

IN novels one reads of queer things happening in offices. Ruth remembered having seen a play once where the employer thought more of the girls who worked in his office and what they looked like than the way they did their work.

She even remembered how it had shocked her and yet how unconsciously it had formed her opinion of the business world. She remembered the unfortunate little victim, pretty and foolish, who stepped into the trap and who was saved because the employer's son had fallen in love with her and wanted to marry her.

But nothing like that happened in real life, Ruth reflected. It happened only in books and in the movies. On purpose Ruth had ceased wearing tailored waists with four-in-hand ties. The high collars scratched her neck and she was not an efficient business woman.

Therefore she figured that she could wear exactly what she pleased. So she wore lace things, and she studied herself in the glass and tried effects with her reddish hair, and she knew she was nice to look at. If Ruth had been accused of trying to attract the men at the office she would have denied such an accusation, yet, after all, that was exactly what she was trying to do.

And still Mr. Browning pursued his even course of life, paying no attention at all to her ways. There were only two other men and both were uninteresting. It wasn't that Ruth wanted to have an affair with any one, but woman like she was piqued at indifference, and preferred feeling of one kind or another. She counted to some extent in her own world; but here in the business world she was a dull nonentity.

One day Mr. Browning's stenographer came out to her for a chat, after Mr. Browning had left for lunch. Her wholesome little face bore a transfiguring smile and she looked almost stily at Ruth. Since Ruth had been at the office she had grown to like this girl even against her wishes, for deep in her heart Ruth realized that Mr. Browning's stenographer counted for more in the business world than she herself did.

"I'm going to be married," she announced. Ruth wheeled about. "Really, how splendid!"

"I think so." "Will you tell me about him?" "Why, he was in France you know, and he's just come back. We're going to have the dearest little place up in the Bronx, and I'm going to have all the fun in the world keeping house."

Ruth thought this sounded stupid. "You'll be bored to death," she announced. "O, no, I won't. If you knew how tired I was with office work."

"But you're doing so well and you're counting in the world. How can you give up your position?" "Well, we've talked it all over and we've decided that it would be the best thing to do. At first I was going to keep on with my work, but Jim doesn't like the idea, and he's making good money. Besides I'm so tired of all this, I'll be glad to give it up."

"Do you think you'll like dish washing and house cleaning any better?" "O, I know I will, but that isn't what I wanted to speak to you about. I wanted to ask you something else. I won't be leaving for quite some time, and I thought that if you would take a course in stenography and typewriting at night in some school, you might jump right into my position."

Here in plain words was the fact that

Ruth's position with the New Idea Publishing Company was inferior to that of the editor's stenographer. Not that Ruth hadn't realized it before, but she had always kept the truth in the background by refusing to admit it.

She was suddenly furious at the suggestion although she knew that it had been meant in all kindness, and she was forced to keep silent for fear of saying something that she would be sorry for afterward. All Ruth's snobbishness was up in arms instantly and her manner was stiff when she finally spoke.

"O, I'm sure that I would never suit Mr. Browning for a stenographer," she said stily, "although I do appreciate your thinking of it."

Ruth's sarcasm went unnoticed for Helen Ware said quickly. "O, but you would, and you have so much that I haven't, a college education. Why you might work up to be anything."

Ruth was suddenly ashamed of herself, and quick to appreciate this girl's unassuming tribute. It was the first compliment she had received since she had been working.

"Did Mr. Browning say anything about it?" she asked suddenly. "No, it was my own idea," Helen Ware admitted. "But I do wish you would try."

(In the next installment Helen Townsend appears with a new suggestion for work.)

Please Tell Me What to Do

By CYNTHIA

The Girls Boys Like

Dear Cynthia—Just a few lines to your column. "Please Tell Me What to Do," for quite a spell, and in this my first answer to "Hoping," under the heading "Seems 'Vanps' Get Them All."

I wish to state I'm in the same boat, only of the opposite sex. Just a plain, ordinary girl—hard to find these days—as there are lots of flirts or "vanps," but none for this bird.

So, "Hoping," don't get disgusted. Now, I am coming to you for advice. I have been here six months and as loneliness as can be. Still, I'm not going to give up the ship until I've found her, just a "jolly ordinary girl," for mine.

"Every dog has his day"—a very truthful saying—but instead of "day" mine is "months."

LONESOME.

Answers Almost Nineteen Dear Cynthia—I am one of the enthused readers of your column pertaining to the ethics of life, etc., which I think is not only helpful but also interesting.

Availing myself of the invitation given to the readers by "Miss Almost Nineteen," I desire to submit the following: Your assertions about young men are dancing, smoking, etc., are very true. I think it is not only helpful but also interesting.

Here I want to fully impress upon "Mr. Nineteen" that character and appearance and speech also are the greater part of life's gamble, and a subject which is not mastered in a certain degree will not act as a hindrance, rather than an asset in the narrow path of a young life.

Taking into consideration the question of love: Girls are human as well as boys, and they do not want to be nagged around just to please another. If you are in love, and smoking, and hardly above the standard of a high school, I was bound to be somewhat of a figure. Yet, despite this, I never made many friends. It must have been my fault, for all the other fellows, even the subs, were having good times with the girls in the neighborhood town.

I was just the opposite, hardly making enough to pass me. Once in the days of my prep I won a medal, so my brains (?) went on a strike and they have been on it ever since.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

ing to give up the ship until I've found her, just a "jolly ordinary girl," for mine.

"Every dog has his day"—a very truthful saying—but instead of "day" mine is "months."

LONESOME.

Answers Almost Nineteen Dear Cynthia—I am one of the enthused readers of your column pertaining to the ethics of life, etc., which I think is not only helpful but also interesting.

Availing myself of the invitation given to the readers by "Miss Almost Nineteen," I desire to submit the following: Your assertions about young men are dancing, smoking, etc., are very true. I think it is not only helpful but also interesting.

Here I want to fully impress upon "Mr. Nineteen" that character and appearance and speech also are the greater part of life's gamble, and a subject which is not mastered in a certain degree will not act as a hindrance, rather than an asset in the narrow path of a young life.

Taking into consideration the question of love: Girls are human as well as boys, and they do not want to be nagged around just to please another. If you are in love, and smoking, and hardly above the standard of a high school, I was bound to be somewhat of a figure. Yet, despite this, I never made many friends. It must have been my fault, for all the other fellows, even the subs, were having good times with the girls in the neighborhood town.

I was just the opposite, hardly making enough to pass me. Once in the days of my prep I won a medal, so my brains (?) went on a strike and they have been on it ever since.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

enable you to join. Then, now listen Mike, when you meet a nice girl ask if you can ask her and keep on calling and asking other nice girls if you may call. Take them to the movies and to the theatre once in a while, and be especially courteous and kind. Make them like you. And they will—because I've known it to happen. How about it, girls, and other boys who've found this out?

The Woman's Exchange For a Minstrel Show To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—We are arranging an entertainment for the benefit of our church. Do you think it would be all right to include minstrelsy? If so, what costumes could we wear so as to be dressed uniformly? It is to be given by girls, also a few boys. Please suggest something inexpensive.

READERS OF THE EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER: It would be quite all right to include minstrelsy in the entertainment. In fact, a good jolly minstrel show is lots of fun and healthy amusement. Let the girls wear dark skirts, rather tight-fitting dark coats, plain white waists and broad white collars that can be made out of cardstock. They are the sort of collars that stand up and have broad flaps that flare out at either side. You can wear red ties with them or any other color that will add gaiety to the party. The girls ought to fix their hair back plain in order to look as much as possible like the boys. The boys wear their suits with white shirts, tight-fitting coats and the broad collars described. The two end men ought to be dressed a little bit more festive than the others, ridiculous looking flowers in their button holes, polka dot ties, etc.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

enable you to join. Then, now listen Mike, when you meet a nice girl ask if you can ask her and keep on calling and asking other nice girls if you may call. Take them to the movies and to the theatre once in a while, and be especially courteous and kind. Make them like you. And they will—because I've known it to happen. How about it, girls, and other boys who've found this out?

The Woman's Exchange For a Minstrel Show To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—We are arranging an entertainment for the benefit of our church. Do you think it would be all right to include minstrelsy? If so, what costumes could we wear so as to be dressed uniformly? It is to be given by girls, also a few boys. Please suggest something inexpensive.

READERS OF THE EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER: It would be quite all right to include minstrelsy in the entertainment. In fact, a good jolly minstrel show is lots of fun and healthy amusement. Let the girls wear dark skirts, rather tight-fitting dark coats, plain white waists and broad white collars that can be made out of cardstock. They are the sort of collars that stand up and have broad flaps that flare out at either side. You can wear red ties with them or any other color that will add gaiety to the party. The girls ought to fix their hair back plain in order to look as much as possible like the boys. The boys wear their suits with white shirts, tight-fitting coats and the broad collars described. The two end men ought to be dressed a little bit more festive than the others, ridiculous looking flowers in their button holes, polka dot ties, etc.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

enable you to join. Then, now listen Mike, when you meet a nice girl ask if you can ask her and keep on calling and asking other nice girls if you may call. Take them to the movies and to the theatre once in a while, and be especially courteous and kind. Make them like you. And they will—because I've known it to happen. How about it, girls, and other boys who've found this out?

The Woman's Exchange For a Minstrel Show To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—We are arranging an entertainment for the benefit of our church. Do you think it would be all right to include minstrelsy? If so, what costumes could we wear so as to be dressed uniformly? It is to be given by girls, also a few boys. Please suggest something inexpensive.

READERS OF THE EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER: It would be quite all right to include minstrelsy in the entertainment. In fact, a good jolly minstrel show is lots of fun and healthy amusement. Let the girls wear dark skirts, rather tight-fitting dark coats, plain white waists and broad white collars that can be made out of cardstock. They are the sort of collars that stand up and have broad flaps that flare out at either side. You can wear red ties with them or any other color that will add gaiety to the party. The girls ought to fix their hair back plain in order to look as much as possible like the boys. The boys wear their suits with white shirts, tight-fitting coats and the broad collars described. The two end men ought to be dressed a little bit more festive than the others, ridiculous looking flowers in their button holes, polka dot ties, etc.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

enable you to join. Then, now listen Mike, when you meet a nice girl ask if you can ask her and keep on calling and asking other nice girls if you may call. Take them to the movies and to the theatre once in a while, and be especially courteous and kind. Make them like you. And they will—because I've known it to happen. How about it, girls, and other boys who've found this out?

The Woman's Exchange For a Minstrel Show To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—We are arranging an entertainment for the benefit of our church. Do you think it would be all right to include minstrelsy? If so, what costumes could we wear so as to be dressed uniformly? It is to be given by girls, also a few boys. Please suggest something inexpensive.

READERS OF THE EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER: It would be quite all right to include minstrelsy in the entertainment. In fact, a good jolly minstrel show is lots of fun and healthy amusement. Let the girls wear dark skirts, rather tight-fitting dark coats, plain white waists and broad white collars that can be made out of cardstock. They are the sort of collars that stand up and have broad flaps that flare out at either side. You can wear red ties with them or any other color that will add gaiety to the party. The girls ought to fix their hair back plain in order to look as much as possible like the boys. The boys wear their suits with white shirts, tight-fitting coats and the broad collars described. The two end men ought to be dressed a little bit more festive than the others, ridiculous looking flowers in their button holes, polka dot ties, etc.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

enable you to join. Then, now listen Mike, when you meet a nice girl ask if you can ask her and keep on calling and asking other nice girls if you may call. Take them to the movies and to the theatre once in a while, and be especially courteous and kind. Make them like you. And they will—because I've known it to happen. How about it, girls, and other boys who've found this out?

The Woman's Exchange For a Minstrel Show To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—We are arranging an entertainment for the benefit of our church. Do you think it would be all right to include minstrelsy? If so, what costumes could we wear so as to be dressed uniformly? It is to be given by girls, also a few boys. Please suggest something inexpensive.

READERS OF THE EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER: It would be quite all right to include minstrelsy in the entertainment. In fact, a good jolly minstrel show is lots of fun and healthy amusement. Let the girls wear dark skirts, rather tight-fitting dark coats, plain white waists and broad white collars that can be made out of cardstock. They are the sort of collars that stand up and have broad flaps that flare out at either side. You can wear red ties with them or any other color that will add gaiety to the party. The girls ought to fix their hair back plain in order to look as much as possible like the boys. The boys wear their suits with white shirts, tight-fitting coats and the broad collars described. The two end men ought to be dressed a little bit more festive than the others, ridiculous looking flowers in their button holes, polka dot ties, etc.

I hope that you and some of your readers, especially the members of the forum, can give me some advice in this case, and what their opinions of a fellow of this sort are; also how to get acquainted with people and make friends.

BASHFUL MIKE.

A Breath of Bonny Heather To the Editor of Woman's Page: Dear Madam—Mrs. S., a friend of the EVENING PUBLIC LEDGER, asks where information can be found about the hymn in which this verse occurs:

As long as life its term extends, Hope's best dominion never ends, For while the lamp holds out its burn, The best of sinners may return.

Paraphrase fifteen in the end of Kings, James the I of England and the Sixth of Scotland version of the Bible. Are you of Scotch descent? I am from Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and sang the psalm and paraphrase in church instead of hymns. Often sang this one in church and at family worship in my father's home in Scotland. I remain a friend of the old school.

CHESTNUT HILL.

Other information as to the location of this verse was printed the other day in the exchange but I was so sure the reader who asked for the information would be interested in this very kind letter that I am printing it. Thank you, Chestnut Hill.

Things to Know For forty years Mrs. E. G. Townsend has been connected as a teacher with Baylor College, Texas.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that Italy has had schools for the higher education of women.

Many women in Texas and Oklahoma are reported to have developed into successful speculators in oil land leases.

All of the prominent universities in the United Kingdom, save Oxford and Cambridge, now confer legal degrees on women who duly qualify.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City has decided upon a strict boycott of butter until the price of the product is reduced.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of Salt Lake City