Nancy Wynne Attends the Charity Ball—She Regrets the Death of Mrs. Charles Da Costa—And Comments on Various Happenings in Society

I MUST say the ball last night, with the tableaux and artistic dancing, quite came up to my expectations and it was a gorgeous sight. I just loved the costumes. They really were awfully good, so picturesque and true to my idea of the heroes and heroines of drama and fiction.

It certainly was a beautiful sight last night at the Charity Ball. You know they had the stage set as if it were a library of books. In the center was the largest, marked "Bookland," and then arranged round this largest book were smaller ones, "drama" and "opera," from which the dancers came forth. I do not think there has ever been a more picturesque pageant before any of the balls. And as for the silhouettes, it would have been hard to find a better set of dancers, it seems to me. Of course, Alva Seeger, Theo Lillie, Brice Blinn and Jon Kennedy took the prize.

My, but weren't they all fun, when they did the "shimmy"? Some of the dresses were very pretty, didn't you think? And as for Catherine Cox and Mary Norris's evening cloaks, they were simply lovely. They came in late and simply looked on the floor to watch the tableaux and dancing. Catherine's was a rich turquoise blue velvet trimmed with white fur and Mary's was that exquisite shade of crushed pink made with a gray fur collar.

Sarah Dolan looked very well in an extremely rich shade of blue green and red and Nancy Dunning, another debutante, looked simply sweet in old rose panned velvet. Eleanor Wirtz wore a pretty frock of pale lavender-colored taffeta and Gloria Villon looked very charming in watermelon pink and gold lace.

After the tableaux and pageant the books were taken from the stage and the familiar latticed and rose-tinted background of the ball was with us once more. Charity burned high in the air in electric lights, and with two orchestras going up to 2 o'clock and the music of the light fantastic way into the morning.

I DON'T know what was the matter with a lot of us on Wednesday night, but we all seemed mixed up in the Elizabeth Bords. There are two debutantes of that name you know, and when we reached the George H. Evans for Elizabeth Noyes Boyd, the daughter of the late George W. Boyd, who was general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad for many years, not the Elizabeth Boyd, daughter of Dr. George Boyd, who came out last week.

It is true that Elizabeth Noyes Boyd, the one for whom the dance was given, always uses the Noyes, but somehow we just didn't stop to think, and lo! behold it was for her. And yesterday after the dance, formal announcement was made of her engagement to Paul Reed, of Lancaster. Elizabeth's father died summer before last you remember, and she has only just lightened her mourning. Her mother did not give a formal tea to introduce her; in fact, the first affair of any size was given by the Evanses on Wednesday night.

You know there is another Boyd family, the Kuekerbacker Boyds, and they have a daughter to come out next year or the year after. Fortunately her name is Lyseth, not Elizabeth, and did not give a formal tea to introduce her; in fact, the first affair of any size was given by the Evanses on Wednesday night.

THE death of Mrs. Charles Da Costa came as a terrible shock to us all. It is true that she had been ill for nearly a week, and on Tuesday they had little hope of her recovery. On Wednesday morning, however, the doctors said she had a fighting chance, and so we all began to hope, but that afternoon she suddenly grew worse and the end came.

Mrs. Da Costa had been prominent in social and charitable affairs for many years. She was Miss Juliet Biddle, a sister of Miss Mildred Biddle, who married Williams Cadwalader, and a daughter of the Henry Williams Biddles, of Paoli, with whom the Cadwaladers live. She married Charles Da Costa, a son of the late Doctor Da Costa, who lived for many years at Seventeenth and Walnut streets, and whose reputation as a specialist was international.

Mrs. Da Costa was one of the committee of the Saturday Evening Dancing Club, and, by the way, the other committee members have called off the meeting of the class, which was to have been held tomorrow night, as a mark of respect to Mrs. Da Costa's memory.

Mrs. Da Costa used to shapone a smaller class on Friday afternoons at Asher's, and all the smart children went to that until they were old enough to attend the Wirtz class and the committee class. The Da Costas had three children—Jessie, who is a subdebutante; Isabel, who is also very ill with pneumonia, and a son, Alexander Da Costa.

DID you know the St. Francis Juniors have started in again on their work of collecting and filling stockings for the little poor children. They are going to send the goods today and tomorrow on Broad street and on Chestnut street to receive donations for their work. A nice feature of this good work is that those who wish may buy a filled stocking and give the name of the child to whom they wish the stocking sent, and it will be delivered to that little one the day before Christmas.

They fill the stockings with candy and toys and add a useful article, either warm gloves, muffler, a cap or a little flannel petticoat. It sure is a dandy charity, don't you think so? Mrs. William King, of the Sorbonne Apartments, is chairman of the Juniors.

FRIENDS of Lieutenant Phillipus Miller will regret to hear that he had a fall on Wednesday in the hospital at Carlisle, Pa., and broke his wounded arm. It certainly is "bad luck," as both he and his family had been looking forward to his spending the winter holidays at home, and now this has happened. He had accepted invitations for so many dances during the holidays, and will be so disappointed.

How boy I feel so sorry for him; he has had to go through so much since he was wounded in France and has been so patient through it all. Just once in a while let us speak the week-end at home with his family. I hope he will soon be better.
