

CONGRESSMEN INSIST ON ACTION

Eleven Call Conference of Republicans to Fight Against "Red Tape"

NOT REVOLT, THEY ASSERT

By the Associated Press Washington, June 28.—Representative Anson, of New York, issued a statement today asserting that the new Republican members of the House were dissatisfied with the progress made by Congress at the present special session and disclosing that he and ten others had joined in a call for a conference tomorrow night of the approximately 100 new Republican members to discuss the situation.

"We are not meeting in any spirit of revolt," said Mr. Anson, adding that the new members wanted to cut some of the "red tape" and "substitute action for delay."

Mr. Anson said none of the objects for which Congress is called into special session had been accomplished.

"Nor is there definite promise as to when they will be," he added. "There are upwards of a dozen different bills in the House and they all feel, as I do, that we have not been permitted to make our influence felt."

Called for Definite Purpose "Congress was called into special session for certain definite purposes, namely, for revision of the cumbersome and unwieldy and inequitable system of taxation, the passage of a fair protective tariff and the passage of a peace resolution. None of these objects have as yet been accomplished, nor is there any definite promise as to when they will be."

"Nearly three months have passed since the calling of the special session and we want to see action, spelled with a capital A."

"We believe, with the Republican party, that it is best for the country to impress that thought on some of the older members. Many of them have been here so long they seem to have forgotten it."

BLIND CAN STEER SHIP WITH NEW RADIO DEVICE

Coils Depend on Ear in Running Ships Safely Through Fog

New York, June 28.—The time was when a navigator had to be a man of good eyesight, but today on board the lighthouse tender Tulip, far out at sea, it was proved that the navigator of the future may be blind as a post as long as he has fairly good hearing.

At the same time it was demonstrated that a blind man in a part of the sea passing rapidly into the same category as sea serpents.

Standing with back to the windows of the Tulip, upon after uniform land lubbers whose experience in steering was limited to lawn mowers, put the trim little tender on her course toward Ambrose lightship and otherwise comported themselves as if they had passed a decade or two as pilots on the Atlantic Coast.

It was, of course, a radio stunt. The experiment marked a decided step in the process.

A coil, consisting of ten turns of insulated copper wire, mounted upon a frame which can be rotated, is the heart of the radio direction finder. When the plane of this coil is parallel to the direction from which a radio signal emanates, the intensity of the signal received will be greatest. In other words, it will be heard most loudly. As the coil is revolved, the operator diminishes until a minimum is reached, when the plane of the coil comes to a position at right angles to the direction of the signal.

Thus a navigator in the thickest fog on the darkest night can instantly, without moving from the wheel, determine the bearing of a vessel or station from two or three stations and marking his place on the chart.

Minneapolis, June 28.—More than 1500 motion picture theatre owners were present at the opening of their annual convention here yesterday, with hundreds more arriving on late trains.

Under the chairmanship of Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, they began the discussion of the principal topic before them, the question of opposing producers who attempt to exhibit their own films.

The plan outlined by the Executive Committee was before the convention today for consideration. Envoachment of some motion-picture producers into the exhibition end of the business was responsible for the action taken by the exhibitors, members explained.

The plan calls for the raising of a $2,000,000 fund on a percentage basis from every motion-picture theatre owner and every independent producer in the country. Charges were made at the convention that a "movie trust" controls 90 per cent of the motion-picture business of the United States.

CHAS. BONAPARTE DIES AT BALTIMORE

Secretary of Navy and Attorney General in Roosevelt's Cabinet

KINSMAN OF NAPOLEON

By the Associated Press Baltimore, June 28.—Charles J. Bonaparte, Attorney General during the Roosevelt Administration, died at Bell Vista, his country home near here, today.

Mr. Bonaparte had been in poor health for about a year suffering from a heart affection which became complicated with kidney trouble. He was seventy years old. His widow, who has been an invalid for many years, survives.

Upon his return to private life at the end of the second Administration of President Roosevelt, Mr. Bonaparte resumed the practice of law, in which he continued until he began failing about a year ago. At that time he suffered an acute heart attack, which was followed by several others of a less severe nature throughout the last twelve months. He went to his country home in April. Since then he had been gradually losing ground. Last Thursday he entered the heart attack which resulted in his death.

While Mr. Bonaparte was known to be in indifferent health, his death came as a great surprise.

Scion of the family made illustrious by the great Napoleon, grandson of the latter's youngest brother, Charles Jerome Bonaparte received his early education in private schools and under the care of private tutors, and entered Harvard in 1860 as a junior.

He was graduated two years later, and remained at the university one year as a resident graduate.

In 1872 he took up the study of law in the Harvard law school, finishing the course in 1874. Since his admission in the same year to the Maryland Bar he practiced his profession principally in the Federal and State courts.

Mr. Bonaparte was one of the trustees of the Cathedral Church of Baltimore, and a warm friend of Cardinal Gibbons. He was president of the Civil Service Reform Association of Maryland and of the National Municipal League. Besides these offices he was connected with many other reform and charity organizations.

As a member of the United States Board of Indian Commissioners from 1902 to 1904 he was selected by President Roosevelt to investigate Indian frauds, which he did in a fearless manner, and later to make inquiries into the activities of the United States Trust Company.

As Secretary of the Navy Mr. Bonaparte was an advocate of a large fleet and through his efforts several ships were added to the Navy. He was referred by Roosevelt to the Navy to the Justice Department, and as Attorney General was active in prosecuting trusts. In his reform campaigns in Baltimore he was called "Charlie the Crook Chaser," and several grafting officials, prosecuted by him, were sent to prison.

Bonaparte's paternal grandfather, Jerome, was only nineteen years old when he passed through the United States on his way to Paris. While in Baltimore he met Elizabeth Bonaparte, the daughter of a wealthy ship owner. The young couple fell in love, and after a very brief courtship were married with great pomp and ceremony.

Young Bonaparte delayed his journey to Paris for two years, but finally sailed for France, capital in obedience to a peremptory command from Napoleon, a command which was accompanied by a stern order to leave that young person behind. The latter part of the message was ignored by Jerome, but a French frigate prevented the young wife from landing at Lisbon and later at Amsterdam. "Betsy" was forced to seek refuge in England, where she gave birth to a son, Jerome and "Betsy" never met again after their separation at Lisbon, although he lived until 1890 and she until 1879.

Through the insistence of Napoleon, Jerome got a divorce, married Princess Catharine, of Wurtemberg, and was created King of Westphalia.

For fifty years or more the Bonapartes fought for recognition as the wife of Jerome for the sake of her son who was also named Jerome.

When this son, the father of Charles Joseph Bonaparte, reached a marriageable age, his mother endeavored to make a royal alliance for him, but the young man preferred to manage his own love affairs, and married Miss Susan My Williams, of Roxbury, Mass.

Mr. Bonaparte was born in Baltimore, June 9, 1851.

She wore a black tailored suit, blue hat with black plumes and blue gloves. She immediately assumed a posture with her chin resting on her right hand, the elbow resting on the arm of the chair. She looked straight forward at the floor.

Long before 9 o'clock the time set for the opening of the trial, a crowd began to congregate in front of the old courthouse and jail. Some hoped to gain admittance to the courtroom; others wanted merely to catch a glimpse of Mrs. Kaber as she was taken from the jail to the courthouse. Official Gives Answer William Towers, manager of the transportation and housing division of the United States Shipping Board, who assumed that office following the sale of the department here from Washington, said when the meeting before Mr. McAvoy was brought to his attention.

"I know absolutely nothing about the meeting, and it is a surprise to me. Out of the 1980 houses in the Elmwood section, which are known as the Hog Island houses, some 1400 have been sold and 140 houses, and we are now contracting for the sale of these."

"When the Shipping Board gave up title to the buyers a long time ago, that department was discharged from my naturally out interest in these houses. The charges that there was collusion between the syndicate and several employees may be true, and one of the men in that department was discharged a long time ago. I was not in charge of the department when the sale was made, but I am sure that should an investigation be made, the truth would be clear to the alleged charges, if there are any," Mr. Towers concluded.
