Nancy Wynne Chats About the Debutantes Slated for Next Season—She Mentions Forty-two Girls. Other Matters

AFTER the large number of debutantes who came out last season, it will be quite a let down in the fall not to have more than forty-two girls. But to date I cannot account for more than that number; in fact, some of them may not make their debut after all, while others may be announced later.

Circumstances change things often, you know. For instance, we all heard positively that Helen Hope Montgomery would be introduced in Paris also. Well, now that's changed and she is not to come out till the following year. And, indeed, I think it is very wise. Helen Hope is very young to come out. Then Mary Geary, why "Bunny" she will not come out for a year, possibly two years at that.

Ellen Douglas Lloyd is coming out for certain. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stacy Lloyd and went last year in positive to come out, too. She is the daughter of the late Dr. Benjamin H. Reath and Mrs. Reath and a grand-daughter of Mrs. Albert Pancoast. Ellen McMichael is another debutante of the coming year. She is the daughter of the Emory McMichaels and has been in school in Paris, as have Ellen Lloyd and Albert Reath.

Christine Cadwalader, daughter of the Williams Biddle Cadwaladers, is to be introduced at a tea and will have several dances and balls given in her honor.

Alva Sergeant and Katherine I. Oden on Chestnut street yesterday. Alva nearly lost an eye, and walked into a lamp post, and fell over a man.

Alva is so fair and graceful and Katherine is so dark. They looked stunning. Miss straight nose, her hat was of dark blue turned up elegantly at the back and trimmed with a soft bow of the material of which the hat was fashioned. They were a decided delight to the eye.

YOU had better keep your eyes well open and your ears cocked these days, because very soon, oh, boys and girls! I'm going to tell you of a nice, pretty engagement, and you will be pleased about it, as I am. The girl is very pretty and has an awfully pretty married sister and they don't live so far from town that it takes an hour to get there. And the man is very, very nice.

They were a decided delight to the eye. NANCY WYNNE.

MISS BUTHERFORD Pearson, of the Bellevue-Stratford, who has been spending the last few days in this city. Mrs. Pearson will leave for some time, if you think a bit perhaps you won't be surprised when the news comes out about it all.

MISS STUART Bullivant, of Spencer, Mass., is visiting her parents, Dr. and Mrs. M. MacCuen Smith, at their home, Mrs. Bullivant before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth MacCuen Smith.

MISS EDWARD Evans Denniston and her daughter, Miss Arthur H. Denniston, of Springmead, Germantown, are spending the summer at their cottage at Stone Harbor.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

THE fairies had answered for her in a little song. "Pretty wings, Mr. Legs; pretty wings for pretty Peggy." But that wasn't the answer Peggy had intended to make, so she spoke up quickly.

"Please, Mr. Legs, I would like wings that are both pretty and strong," she said.

"That answer pleased Legs, the wing-maker, and he gave a funny little chuckle. "You are a sensible girl for telling what you want," he declared. "You maker, to Peggy and Billy as he looked at the fat flies the fairies had brought to pay him and his web-work."

Peggy did not fancy going close to Legs, for he was a spider, and, like little Miss Muffet who sat on a tuft of grass, he had a fear of spiders.

"Don't be nervous," laughed Fitter-Flash, the handsome young fairy. "Legs the wing-maker is a greedy spider, but he never harms the fairies or their friends. We are good customers of his wing shop, and we pay him well with the flies we bring."

"Do you want strong wings or pretty wings?" Legs asked, as he measured Billy.

"I want strong wings, so I can fly high and far," replied Billy.

"You shall have wings that will carry you as high as an eagle soars, and as far as a boat can sail in a day," replied Legs. Then he turned to measure Peggy.

"And what kind of wings do you want, pretty wings or strong wings?" he asked her.

Before Peggy could open her mouth, shall have the kind of wings you desire. They shall be pretty and they shall be strong enough to carry you wherever Billy goes."

Legs and his workmen set busily about making the wings. Legs himself made a pattern of silk. The workmen found tough leaves from which they stripped wiry fibers. These fibers were shaped to fit the edges of the pattern, forming a framework for the wings.

Over this framework the spiders wove fine silk gauze, spinning the threads out of themselves as they went along.

This fine silk gauze made wings that were so pretty, very light and very strong. Over the gauze the spiders spread a thin coating of glue which hardened quickly. This glue made the surface of the wings smooth and solid so the air could not go through.

Legs and his workmen were skillful, as Fitter-Flash had said, and the wings were finished in a very short time.

Peggy's wings were tried on first and they fitted her perfectly. Legs fastened them securely to her body with tiny but very strong stitches.

Then Billy's wings were put on him and they proved to be just as well-fitting and as pretty as those of Peggy.

"There you are," said Legs, the wing-maker. "There are two of the finest pairs of wings I ever have made. I hope you will take good care of them and use them in a way that will be a credit to me."

Fitter-Flash and the fairies clapped their hands with joy when they saw how splendid the wings were.

"Now you can frolic and dance with us in the air," cried Fitter-Flash. "Come and we will teach you how to fly."

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES Flitting With the Fairies By DADDY CHAPTER V Making the New Wings

YOU shall have the finest wings I can make," said Legs, the wing-maker, to Peggy and Billy as he looked at the fat flies the fairies had brought to pay him and his web-work.

"Come close to my web so I can measure you."

Peggy did not fancy going close to Legs, for he was a spider, and, like little Miss Muffet who sat on a tuft of grass, he had a fear of spiders.
