CHESTNUT ST. GETS SHOCK! GIRL'S EAR REDISCOVERED

New Coiffure Permits Shell-Like Stranger to Peep Out and Means End of Puff Fad

A peculiar smallish object was seen late yesterday afternoon on Chestnut street.

In shape it was most unusual; curved and at the same moment oblong and auditory. Persons who saw the phenomenon at close range say that it was pink in color and slightly transparent.

A gentleman interviewed who had witnessed the phenomenon, but just too late to call the attention of passers by to it, said it closely resembled a sea shell.

But an elderly man, who asked that his name be withheld, said he could swear the thing he saw was a woman's ear.

Bystanders were inclined to disagree with the opinionated stranger. But he was firm, asserting that he had not only a good memory, but a family snapshot album. In it he said were snapshots taken six years ago just before women's ears disappeared. The album had been hidden in the attic by his wife, he said, but if necessary he could look it up and prove that a woman's ear looked just like what had gone up the street.

Argument Wasn't Warm The argument became heated. Only one class of persons who have known where women's ears have been for the last six years could settle it. They did and do.

Hairstresses of Philadelphia say that the thing is true. It would be perfectly possible for an ear to make its unobtrusive way down Chestnut street for this very simple reason.

Ears after the most complete disappearance ever recorded in the history of fade-aways are authentically in style again.

The ear, it is said, began to peek out shyly a couple of months ago. Then, unabashed, it would retreat. Moral support, however, has been steadily pouring over from Paris, and now.

"Yes, it is quite true that ears are the mode again," explained Miss Minnie Fulton, of a smart hairdressing establishment on South Thirtieth street.

"It has been the fashion for women to wear their hair a little off the ears for several months, but now the tendency is to show more and more of the ear, until it will be entirely shown. Some are showing it now.

Change to Be Gradual "It will seem strange for a while, of course," Miss Fulton continued, "but every one will get used to it in time. The hair will not be worn as severely back from the ears as it was when the fashion of dressing the hair off the ears was in vogue before. There is more grace and softness about this new style. The knot at the back is worn a little higher than formerly.

The advent of the ear, Miss Fulton explained, sings the swan song of the ear puff, which has been slipping in popularity for the last few months. To make up for it to the woman who rejoices in ornate hairdressing, however, there is a style of wearing the

BABY BURNED TO DEATH

Father and Mother Seriously Injured in Attempted Rescue

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 3.—A whole family is in the Norristown Hospital, one dead, as the result of a fire in a Swedesburg home last night.

The fire was caused by the explosion of a coal oil lamp. Those in the hospital are Stanley Nobilinsky and wife and their infant son, Joseph, two months old. All were badly burned and the baby died a few hours after it was admitted.

The mother was burned trying to save the baby and the father was burned trying to rescue his wife. Neighbors saved the daughter of the family.

The explosion occurred in a room downstairs where the two children were sleeping.

STORE SPRINKLERS TURNED ON

Crossed wires are believed to have opened the automatic sprinklers in a section of Spellenburg's store, at the Eleventh and Girard streets side, at 6:30 this morning. A fire alarm was automatically given. Firemen turned off the sprinklers before serious damage to stock was caused.

MEADE SOLDIERING STARTS IN EARNEST

Philadelphia Recruits Among Those to Hear First Reveille. Pershing Visits Camp

IMPRESSED WITH PROGRESS

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger Citizens' Military Training Camp Meade, Md., Aug. 3.—A sound note to the ears of most of the 1400 men here for a month's training under Uncle Sam's care and supervision to prepare them for military service was highly elated over the showing made, and commended them on their spirit.

In speaking to the men in the Liberty Theatre just before the review, the General outlined to them the future work to be done in the series of civilian camps, when the successful candidates, after three years, will be given commissions in the officers' reserves.

They were highly pleased with these words, and a great determination is running around the camp that the confidence of the "big boss" is not going to be violated, and they are going to bend every effort to get those commissions.

In speaking with some of the officers of the camp prior to the meeting with the men themselves, the General prophesied that next year there would be from 30,000 to 50,000 men in these camps. He declared that the great number of applicants this year, far above the amount that could be handled due to lack of funds, had proved to be an inspiration, and he expressed confidence that Congress would appropriate enough money to further this work.

NO TRACE OF MISSING GIRLS

Clues Lacking in Disappearance of Misses Crowther and Finkler

No trace has been found of the two North Sixth street girls who disappeared from home Sunday. Several clues are being investigated by railroad and city police.

Violet Finkler, fifteen years old, 2157 North Sixth street, and Laura Crowther, sixteen years old, 2157 North Sixth street, went for a walk in Fairmount Park Sunday afternoon, planning to meet their mothers at a picnic at Strawberry Mansion later. Neither has been seen since. Their parents are distracted.

It is now thought the girls probably left the city. Two answering their descriptions were seen in Broad Street Station Monday night and early yesterday morning by Special Railroad Police Sgt. Singsler. The girls Singsler believes to be the missing ones were not dressed as Miss Crowther and Miss Finkler were when they left home, but he believes that they are the same ones from the published picture.

The girls, one a blonde and the other a brunette, were seen coming from the restaurant in the station shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning.
