Nancy Wynne Talks of Debutantes—She Sees Miss Sewell in Charming Costume—A Son Is Born to the Persifer Frazers

I HEAR that Ellen McMichael is leaving today for Upper Saranac in the Adirondacks to visit Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Lloyd and their daughter, Ellen Douglas Lloyd. Ellen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Emory McMichael, of 2941 Walnut street and will be present at a ball on Friday, November 25. Both Ellen McMichael and Ellen Douglas Lloyd attended school in Paris last winter. Ellen McMichael returned to Europe with her parents for the greater part of the summer.

Ellen Lloyd will also make her debut in the fall at a tea to be given by her parents on Saturday, October 1. Her parents will be at the home of Mrs. Lloyd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edingham B. Morris, at Ardmore. They are very attractive girls and I am sure they will have a gay season.

I SAW Helen Sewell the other day luncheon at the Ritz. She has been at Cape May for a great deal of the time this summer and has been having a fine time. Helen has personality and is extremely popular. She has a beautiful tan from her days by the sea and she was wearing a frock of dark blue made of simple lines. Her hat was a small, dark blue model, trimmed with gray feathers.

I WAS interested to hear of the birth of a daughter to Count and Countess Stegried Raben-Lebetan, of July 26, in Denmark. Countess Raben-Lebetan was Countess Pauline Pappenheim before her marriage a year ago, and a daughter of Countess Pappenheim, who is a daughter of Mrs. Charles Wheeler, of Pembroke. Her parents are Mrs. George C. Thayer, Richard McCall Elliot, Mrs. Henry Norris and Mrs. Philip Wainman, Charles Wheeler, Jr., is an uncle. They all live in this city except Mrs. Wainman, whose home is in England.

Another little stranger has come to town. He is the son of Ellen McMichael and her husband, Mr. E. B. Lloyd. His name is Robert J. Lloyd. He was born on August 17, at 2200 De Lancey street. This makes the second child they have. I believe, and they surely are proud parents. She is the daughter of the Robert Sturges Ingersoll, of Pennlyn.

JIMMIE, aged five, had been playing hard in the garden all afternoon. He had been digging into the earth and entering his head into the holes. When supper time came it was a dusty and much smeared little lad who trudged into the house. He washed his grimy hands and face and rushed into the room to his place, when mother happened to glance down at his knees. "Jimmie," said she, "you really must not come to the table with your knees so dirty. Go upstairs and wash them."

"Oh, dear," said Jimmie, "I wish I was a grown-up man." And mother who was always interested in his wishes, told him on his return to the dining room why he wished he was grown up. "Oh," said Jimmie, "cause I'd have long pants on then and if my knees was dirty I wouldn't haf to wash 'em 'cause nobody'd know they was."

MAN, 65, JILTED BY GIRL, 26, IS THROUGH WITH WOMEN

John Carver, of Lebanon, Says He Wants Gifts Returned, Too

John Carver, of Lebanon, as spry as a colt for all his sixty-five years, who went to Pottstown to collect the presents he had given his young sweetheart, has returned to Lebanon. His dream of love is shattered, and he told Squire Hobart, before he left Pottstown, that he is through with the women.

John Carver, of Lebanon, is mad clear through. There is a handsome near-gold ring that cost him $9.50 which he gave Miss Emma Hunsberger, who lives near Pottstown. Now Miss Emma has gone and thrown him over and won't give back his ring. He gave her a Victoria that cost $100, and she won't give that back either, and then there is the gold wrist watch, nifty but not loud, that cost $27, and John Carver says Miss Emma is clinging to that, too.

He told Squire Hobart that his fiancée—that was it twenty-six years old and as pretty a girl as ever walked down Main street. Now she has gone and broken the engagement.

To make matters worse, John Carver is out the $2.50 he spent yesterday for the bunch of American Beauty roses he was going to present Miss Emma after she had given all his gifts back, and refunded him his expenses, just to show her he was a good sport. She failed to turn up at Squire Hobart's office. So John Carver departed—but he carried the wilted roses with him.

PETTING PARTIES PLEASE NANTUCKET BEACH BATHERS

Staid New Englanders at Resort Take Entirely Different View

Nantucket, R. I., Aug. 25.—"Petting parties" on the beach are absolutely the last word in social innovation here. They are the abomination of the staid old folks, who make them the subject of censure and criticism. But with the younger set they are a source of almost daily delight.

A "petting party" consists of one girl and as many male admirers as will pay her court on the sands. They crowd about her—all in their bathing tops, of course—and complete with one another for the privilege of pilloving their heads in her lap. Some girls will manage to "pet" as many as four or five young admirers simultaneously. As might be assumed, all the petting is not done by the girl.

Many of the old-fashioned mothers and fathers, who have protested in vain against the epidemic of "petting parties," are hoping an order may be issued against them by the authorities. They see hope of social reform along other lines in an edict at the Police Breese Hotel against "cutting in" on the dance floor.

For some time the girl who has the largest number of dance partners "cut in" on her has been considered the most popular at the resort. The result has been contests in this form among the young folks.

The "cutting in" custom had progressed to a point where more young men were dishing about the ballroom, seeking to take partners from the embraces of others, than the floor could comfortably accommodate. The consequence was vigorous protests from guests.

Another occurrence that has reached the ears of the staid New Englanders has to do with the finding of six pairs of corsets in the upper hallway of a cottage during the progress of a dance. It was discovered that six girls had deliberately doffed their stays for comfort's sake and had retrieved them from the "parking" place after the dance ended.
