

18 MORE JUDGES URGED BY TAFT

Tells Senators Federal Courts Are in Danger of Being Swamped

PLANS FOR SUPERVISION

By the Associated Press
Washington, Oct. 5.—Chief Justice Taft, appearing today before the Senate Judiciary Committee, urged creation of eighteen additional district judges as a means of relieving congestion in Federal court dockets. "Something must be done immediately," he declared, "to keep the courts from being swamped."
Present also at the hearing were Attorney General Daugherty and a committee of Federal Judges and Congressmen.

Attorneys which has recommended an increase in the number of district judges.
The Chief Justice expressed approval of legislation pending before the committee, which would authorize creation of eighteen judges, two to be assigned to each of the nine circuits. These judges, he said, should be able to "make a great hole in overloaded dockets."
The Volstead act, Chief Justice Taft said, "added greatly to the jurisdiction of Federal courts." He added, however, that prohibition was only one feature of court congestion, and was responsible for only 8 per cent of increased court business.
With a chuckle the Chief Justice remarked that a "district judge is a power in his community."

"He is apt to become a bit indifferent," he declared, "and to think people are made for courts, not courts for the people."
With a comment that "after all, judges are human," the Chief Justice said there was need for annual supervision of their court activities. Legislation before the committee which the Chief Justice approved would provide for the annual meeting of the nine senior Federal Circuit Judges with the Chief Justice and Attorney General, at which reports would be made as to the state of court business in each circuit.

SOVIET BREAKS RELIEF PACT

American Courier Seized in Violation of Agreement With U. S.
Riga, Latvia, Oct. 5.—(By A. P.)—An American relief administrator, on his way from Petrograd to Riga by way of Reval, was searched and some of his personal effects seized by the Russian Soviet frontier authorities at Yanburg, near Narva, Estonia, on Tuesday, he reported on his arrival here today. He brought a sealed pouch containing relief administration correspondence, which he designed by Walter Lyman Brown, of the relief administration, and Maxim Litvinov, chief representative of the Soviet Government, representing the Soviet Government. This violation of the agreement, has been reported to Colonel Haskell, head of the relief administration work in Moscow, and Captain John Miller, chief representative of the relief administration in Riga.

Half Billion Feet of Lumber Used Annually in Anthracite Mines

SUPPOSE you owned an anthracite mine. Suppose, also, that to sell coal at fair prices you cut off every avoidable expense. While looking over big cost items, the lumber bills would attract your attention. Try as you might, you couldn't reduce them. They must be added to mining costs.

As with lumber, so with other supplies and equipment—all must be represented in the price of coal at the mine.

Approximately 500,000,000 board feet of lumber are used annually in anthracite mining—seven board feet to the ton of coal, or a fair-sized tree to a winter's home-supply of coal.

To supply all the timber required in anthracite mining involves the cutting of approximately 150,000 acres of forest every year.

Compared with the charge of approximately $4.00 per ton for mine workers' wages, the lumber bill seems relatively small. That's because the wage expense is bigger than any other single item in anthracite mining costs.

Why not mine without lumber or use less of it? you ask. It can't be done. Passages must be protected from falling and caving rock. Roofs and sides of tunnels must be carefully timbered. Surface subsidence must also be guarded against.

"Timbering", as it is called, continues ceaselessly as the miner goes forward, and to replace the rapid decay. It means a never-ending but necessary expense. It adds its quota to the heavy cost of producing anthracite.

This is No. 4 of a series on hard coal facts presented in an effort to help you decide for yourself whether anthracite mine prices are fair. Watch for future advertisements in this newspaper.
