

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Giant's Lost Princess By DADDY Jack and Janet visit a circus side-show with Baby Sam, Jointed Mule and Wooden Elephant. There they meet the romantic fat lady and the handsome young giant.

CHAPTER I CLEAR and sweet above the noise of the show grounds rang out the call of a bugle. It told the circus folks their supper hour had come.

The afternoon crowd of visitors had gone—the night crowd had not yet begun to arrive. The freaks and wonders of the world, as the sidewalk people were called—gave a cry of joy when they heard the blast of the bugle. They climbed down from their platforms and hurried into the cook tent, from which floated delicious, hungry odors. Jack strode along with his friend the handsome giant, while Janet walked slowly beside the fat lady, who was so very-very fat she could scarcely waddle.

Baby Sam, Jointed Mule and Wooden Elephant didn't go into the cook tent. Instead Baby Sam had a big mess of corn and the stable tent. Jointed Mule had a dose of oil for his joints, and Wooden Elephant had touches of paint where he needed them on his worn wooden hide.

The giant ate a big meal—as was to be expected of a giant. And the fat lady ate even more than the giant, which was to be expected of a circus fat lady.

The giant as he ate kept telling Jack of his lost sweetheart, whom he had seen only once in a crowd and had been looking for ever since. "She was plump and lovely," said the giant, "but I am so lonesome that if I do not find the princess of my dreams I will have to wed some other charmer." And the giant glanced at the creepy snake charmer.

"I want to get this," whispered the fat lady to Janet. "I want to get this so the giant will look at me and see how charming I am."

Janet tried to comfort the fat lady. "I have three aunts, all of whom started to get fat, and all of whom are plump now," said Janet. "If I had a telephone I would phone to them and find out how they lost their fat."

"Oh, Tony, the clown, has a telephone," cried the fat lady eagerly. "Sure enough, Tony, the clown, had a telephone and thought it was just a toy telephone until she put it to her ear."

"Number, please," said a voice at the other end. "I want to talk to my Aunt Harriet," said Janet, and as quickly as she said it she heard Aunt Harriet saying, "Hello!"

"Aunt Harriet, how did you stop getting fat?" asked Janet. "I stopped getting fat by going horseback riding," answered Aunt Harriet's voice and Aunt Harriet rang off.

Next Janet called her Aunt Polly. "Hello, Aunt Polly," she said. "How did you stop getting fat?" "I stopped getting fat by running, rolling and swimming," answered Aunt Polly. Janet called her Aunt Prue.

"Hello, Aunt Prue, how did you stop getting fat?" "I stopped getting fat by not eating candy," answered Aunt Prue. Janet turned to the fat lady, her face glowing with gladness because she had learned how to make the fat lady thin.

"What you have to do is to ride horseback, roll, run and swim and stop eating candy," said Janet. "Aunt Prue, if I can never become thin, then for I am too fat to ride, run or swim, and my sweetest tooth will not let me stop eating candy."

But the giant was looking at the fat lady, and so were Janet and Jack. They put their heads together to think of a way to help her. (What they did will be told tomorrow.)

Adventures With a Purse THE great singer finished the mad scene from Hamlet, and the applause which greeted the conclusion of the song was long and enthusiastic. Finally, after bowing a number of times, she came forth again to sing—another. And it is of the encore I would tell you. First a soft, sweet little lullaby. It is, with a wistfulness and tenderness that in spite of your most heroic efforts will leave a lump in your throat. And when she had sung the last soft note of this for a moment the audience removed to applaud, sat silent. The lullaby is written by a young American, some of whose music I have already told you of. The accompaniment is not too difficult to play, and the melody—well, when you hear it you will understand.

For a woman who appreciates the value of a bright-colored scarf with more or less dark spots and who wears lovely Roman striped silk scarves of particularly good colors and quality. One shop has just a handful of them which are being sold at the bargain price of $5 each. If you are interested you had better see about them right away.

Oh, yes, and I'd better tell you right away about the velvet pillows, for there are not many of them left, either. And no wonder, for they are such excellent value for the money. They are those nice round fat ones, covered in pretty shades of velvet, some of them having a bit of tapestry in the center. If I remember correctly, they come in dark green, blue, tan and old rose, and I do know what an interesting bit of color one would give to the davenport. The price of one is $2.25.

PROUD OF THEIR BIKES

Winners in Subscription Contests Pleased With Black Beauties Two more proud winners of Black Beauty bicycles have written to the Pringle Lithograph Company of the district they have found in these easily earned possessions. "I think it splendid and I am certainly proud of it," writes Albert M. Charles, of 919 Green street, Allentown. "I am certainly enjoying myself," says John R. Flynn, of 140 Fifth street, Carneys Point. "And I feel well repaid for the work."

The bicycles are given to boys and girls who obtain thirty-five subscriptions to the Pringle Lithograph, Morning, Evening or Sunday editions. Fire Engines Have Useless Run A passerby detecting smoke coming from the windows of the Hardwick & Magee plant, Seventh street and Lehigh avenue, early today, hurriedly pulled a fire box. At the same time a telephone call was received by the fire companies telling them of the trouble. When the firemen arrived they found the janitor was testing out the steam apparatus of the plant, which caused the smoke.

Gwan-to-Bed Stories : By J. P. McEVROY

David and Gollath (in American) ONCE upon a time, dear children, there was a big stiff named Gollath and there was a well little fellow named David. (Johnny, get off the piano.) Gollath was a big bully and he belonged to a gang that was continually beating up David's gang. David ran with a nice bunch. They were no match for Gollath and his gang because they were hard boiled. One day David's gang got together to talk things over. "We gotta do something about this Gollath," they says. "He is acting up something fierce. He is getting terrible cocky. What are we going to do?"

"I'll leave him to me," says David. "Why, he would make eight of you," says one of David's pals. "Better lay off him or he will knock you for a goal," says another. "Oh, I guess not a goal," says David. "I'll take him on." "Well, good hunting," says all the rest of them. "Have you any message you would like to send back to the folks?" "I will bring it back," says David. "And I will bring Gollath's head with me." (Dorothy, stop licking the baby in the face. Those are your new shoes.)

THAT night they threw a big party. Everybody had a gaudy time. And now, gwan to bed, dear children.

WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S WANAMAKER'S

Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store

The Distinctive and the New in Women's Suits and Dresses Low prices count a great deal. Good materials and reliable tailoring count for much. But style distinction ranks first with most women. It is the combination of all four that has caused more and more women to look to Wanamaker's Down Stairs Store for their suits and dresses.

A Group of Fine Suits, $38.50 Savings of a third on many of the suits! Handsome suits of velour and fine bolivia are elaborately embroidered or trimmed with fur or both! Suits of good tricotone are especially well tailored. They have character and distinction far beyond their price.

Wool Jersey Suits With Sleeveless Dresses at $16.75 The jackets are tailored and the sleeveless dresses are in slip-on style with narrow belts. Copenhagen and brown heather mixtures. $25 and $35 Interesting selection among suits of tricotone and velour, quite plainly tailored or trimmed with silk embroidery. Some with fur collars and fur pockets, according to the model.

New Tailored Wool Dresses for Street and Afternoon Wear, $20, $23.50, $25 Poiret twill dresses, some with charmeuse foundations; Broad satin girdles finish dresses of tricotone that are trimmed with iridescent beads; Good heavy crepe de chine and Canton crepe dresses are in the fashionable severely plain models or are beaded; Tricotone frocks embroidered with silk or wool; Such are the dresses, and in charm, smartness and becomingness they speak for themselves.

Several Hundred Frocks at $15 and $16.75 are the types for which one expects to pay considerably more. Canton crepe, crepe de chine, tricotone, Poiret twill and velour (plain or combined with charmeuse) are trimmed with wool or silk embroidery, many rows of braid, beads and so on.

Women's Pleated Skirts A Third Less at $5 Two smart, fashionable models! One is in Sorrento blue, black and gray stripes forming the plaid. Its box pleats are stitched down about six inches. The other is a lovely prunella cloth, and almost the same skirt was last year three times this price! It is box and side pleated in most attractive manner. In brown and tan tones with touches of blue.

A Choice of 3 Black Pumps, $7.50 A lower price than in quite some time for pumps of black dull leather, patent leather or satin. They have turned soles and high French heels. Some have the new slight wider and shorter vamp. Women's Brogue Oxfords, Extra Good $7.50 Black or brown calfskin Oxfords have thick welted soles outlined with white stitching and very low heels—splendid for sports, walking and street wear. They have simulated wing tips, rounded toes and perforations.

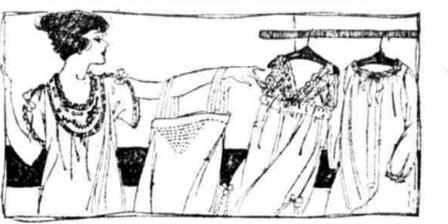

Fudge Aprons, 45c A bit of unbecoming muslin stamped for a few touches of cross-stitch embroidery and beaded—a faded apron—irretrievably attractive! Just the thing for gifts or parties. Cotton Huck Towels, 25c Hemstitched ones, all stamped and ready for the distinctive touch a little embroidery always gives. Five designs and models to suggest possible color combinations.

Women's Warm Polo Coats at $15 and $16.50 Several models from which to choose in various leather mixtures. Some are half-lined, others fully lined. Young girls as well as women will be interested. Canada-hair polo coats, fully lined with silk, are in the soft, black tan or in the popular blue shades, $14.50 and $17.50. Desirable Black Coats Without Fur $25, $38.50 to $62.50 A great many women are making for well-tailored black coats. Here they are, of velour, broadcloth, bolivia and Normanish cloth in various attractive styles. Many are wearing them to set off the beauty of their faces or with very bright buttons, yet again—with plain black hats.

Beautiful Furs on Coats at $58.50 These unusual coats are of the best bolivia coatings and handsomely lined. Some are also embroidered. The furs, which are so generously used, are wolf, mink, squirrel and nutria. Many other handsome sample and other one-or-two-of-a-kind coats and wraps have large collars and occasional cuffs of a white, beaver, nutria, mole, Australian opossum and taupe or brown wolf. $69 to $125.
