FOOTBALL CONTESTS TODAY SHOULD DRAW RECORD ATTENDANCE

Estimated That 190,000 Will See Five Big Games in East-Large Gatherings Well Handled by

Collegiate Officials

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL Sports Editor Evening Public Ledger

BECAUSE of the unusually attractive list of games today all attendance records are likely to be shattered before the san sinks over the housetons this P. M. Never before have there been so many big, important battles on an October afternoon and, with thousands of gridiron funs all dressed up and looking for some place to go, the turnstiles well click merrily, the box offices will do a large and strictly cash business and the college managers will cease to worry about the expenses of running the football teams.

Football has drawn big crowds thus far. The opening games on September 24 were well attended, and the attendance has increased as the season rolled on. Out at Penn there have been two crowds of more than 20,000 and other colleges have played to enpacity. However, nothing can approach today's figures. For example, take the Yale-Army game at New Haven. The Bowl will be filled to overflowing, and that means a crowd of at least 70,000, Penn State and Harvard will enuse a big jam on Soldiers' Field, and there's no telling what will happen at Princeton when the Tigers meet the University of Chicago. This is a very big intersectional contest and there

Syracuse also will have a but of people looking at the contest, As a conservative estimate. Yale and the Army will draw 70,000; Harvard and Penn State, 35,000; Princeton and Chough, 35,000; Pitt and Syracuse, 25,000, and Penn and V. M. I. 25,000. This totals 190,000 for one afternoon, or an average of 28,000 for his game. Baseball or no other sport should be at least 35,000 in the stands when the whistle blows. Pitt and

Football is popular and draws such huge gatherings for two reasons. First, the sport is purely anusteur and the players on each side always are playing their best. They will stop at nothing to gain a victory, risking life and limb for the glory of their college. They also play fair and the exhibi-tions are thrilling from a spectator's viewpoint.

The other reason is the manner in which the crowds are handled and the huge stands which can accommodate the crowds. At Princeton, George Murray, graduate manager, sees that everybody is well taken care of and the spec-tators get their proper seats. Fred Moore at Harvard, Ed Bushnell at Penn and Karl Davis at Pittsburgh also have the interest of the public at heart. There never is any trouble in getting sents and no prohibitive prices are

THEY say at Yale that more than 225,000 will attend the home games this year. If such is the case, the Borel will sent more people in eight games than some of the big league ball clubs in their hame season of seventy-seven games

Independents Gaining Favor

WHILE the colleges are handling the overflow crowds, the independent sea-W son will get under way in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Quakers, which is the name of the old Union A. A., will meet Shenandeah at the Phillies' ball park. For an independent contest, it will be hard to improve on this one. The Quakers have in the line-up many famous college stars of the past, notably Captain Heinie Miller, Lad Wray, Lou Little, Johnny Scott, of Lafayette, and Stan Cofall, the great Notre Dame star. They played great football last year and should do the same in 1921.

Shenandeah wen the changements of the hard-coal helt last year and had a great team. The players did not have the advantage of previous college training, but put up a great battle and showed a wenderful knowledge of the They might be stopping out of their class in meeting the Quakers, but at this time of the year the teams should be almost equal.

Independent football is very popular up the State and has an extremely large following. Heretofore the teams have been forced to play among themselves, but with the Quakers in the field the schedules have been arranged differently and the games are more important.

After the Shenandoah game the Quakers will go to Couldale next Saturday and play the team representing that town. This, too, will be a good contest, and will be played in connection with the celebration of Mitchell Day. In 1902, when the big anthracite cont strike ended, the day was set aside for union rallies, parades and the like. A couple of years ago football was played on that day, and the inhabitants seemed to enjoy it better than following the band and listening to speeches.

This game should be interesting. On one team are eleven men, a majority from the leading college elevens. On the other are eleven huskies who work in the mines every day, who play the game for the pure love of it. Uncoached and untutored in the finer points of the game, they climb out of their working clothes at night, go out on the street under un electric light and hold their hurt and not be able to play in the game

THEY have supreme confidence on them alors and believe that they • can teim Yale, Harvard, Princeton or any torns in the country. That's the spirit up the State. And it is the reason for the popularity of the game. Every confest is a hard-our.

Passing Now an Art

ONE of the bardest positions to play in these modern rames is center on a football team. In the older days some rig. slow-moving, busky person was chosen, not for speed, but for weight. All he had to do was try to bend over the ball, snap it back to the quarterback and then lose faterest in the play. If he could mivance, so much the herter; if not, he was supposed to guard the territory he assumption Now the center has to use his brains on the uttach. The quarterback seldom gets the bull on a direct pass and, after giving the signal, stands brek with the other halfbacks. The ball is passed to the man who is to run with it, and passing has become an art. If the run is to the right, the center passes not directly at the man, but a yard in the airms on he is to run. This must be timed perfectly or a familie results. On take kicks, when the kicker is ten or fifteen yards back, the same thing is done. Therefore the center must be an all-around, snappy, quick-thinking places, who knows as much, if not mere, about the plays than the quarterback more. He has been playing for three years and has shown a wonderful imsovement this year. His work was especially good in the Penn game and his ling passes were perfect. There was one pay in the third period which was discussed, for it booked as if the centre had seried in getting the bail to Asplundh. They say a signal was given for you end run, and after the ball. had been passed a comple of varies to the right, as it should have been the big fullback either misinterpreted the signal of devided to blok. Therefore, he fumbled the ball and the senter was commed

British Champion to Take Whirl at Classic Jersey Links. Breaks Pottstown Record

LOWERS MARK WITH 71

By SANDY MCNIBLICK

They have all taken a fling at it, but today should be the treat of treats, as they say these days, at the nineteenth Willie Bunter, amateur champion of Great Britain, will play the Pine Valley golf links this afternoon. It is the first time an honest-to dness champion of Great Britain has played this classic golf test lately and here should be a shot entertainment that conis will really want to sec. Tomorrow Hunter wil play at Gulph Malls, another of our best local golf

The now-famous Briton made his first been appearance at Tredyffrin this week and the fans there were startled at the accuracy of his from and his putting, but apparently they got a false impression of his wooden shots which lagged rathe budly there some mes before the territo bitting of Jesse Guiford, Francis Odiset and Max Marston.

But it was a different story somewhat Pottstown yesterday where Hunter ayed in an exhibition foursome for the edification of the Hill School boys, who have had more than a couple of fingers in the honors of the interscholastic pie A terrific gale swept the cours elevated high over the surrounding countryside, and into its teeth Hunter oked them out many times the bes of the lot.
