

THE WEATHER
Generally cloudy tonight followed by fair Wednesday; little change in temperature; fresh westerly winds.
TEMPERATURE AT EACH HOUR
8	9	10	11	12	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30

Evening Public Ledger

NIGHT EXTRA

VOL. VIII.—NO. 66

Entered as Second-Class Matter at the Postoffice at Philadelphia, Pa., Under the Act of March 3, 1879.

PHILADELPHIA, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1921

Published Daily, Except Sunday, Subscription Price $6 a Year by Mail, Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company.

PRICE TWO CENTS

FATTY, COOL ON STAND, RECITES NEW VERSION OF MISS RAPPE'S HURT

Comedian Merely Aided Girl, Then Called Friends, He Swears

FOUND HER WRITHING ON BATHROOM FLOOR

Locked Door Because He Wanted to Dress and Shave to Keep a "Date"

"IMPOSED ON" BY OTHERS

"Why Didn't You Tell All This Before?" Prosecution Ironically Asks

By BART HALEY

of the Evening Public Ledger Editorial Staff Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger Company. San Francisco, Nov. 29.—Quite an exclusive narrative of the Labor Day party which sent Virginia Rappe to her death and him to jail—it was a glittering novelty among all earlier versions, a gin-Scotch-pajama festival—was the aspect of the case when the big comedian tramped perspiring from the witness stand.

Hints and intimations that have filled the air since the trial opened have tended to make drab trifles of the moral reputation of the dead girl. Some of the medical experts took the stand with the manner of men about to reveal terribly significant things in Virginia's past. They did nothing of the sort.

And when the defense closed its case, there was nothing discernible in all the record of direct testimony to indicate that the girl had ever done anything worse than drink more gin and orange juice than was good for her and answer an invitation to the party at which Fatty danced in a dressing gown and pajamas.

Defies Defense to Proceed

At the last minute the Arbutuckle lawyers spread before the eye of the court three depositions recently made in Chicago by a nurse and a doctor and implied very broadly that there was much in these documents that would prefer to withhold in order not to seem over-zealous in the interest of their client.

Smilingly the State's attorneys virtually defied them to proceed. The depositions were not read.

District Attorney Brady is preparing this morning to prove by a commission of medical experts which is now making microscopic tests of the organs of the dead young woman that the victim of Fatty's party was in perfect physical health when she went to the St. Francis on Labor Day, and that even the inherent organic weakness, to which the defense attributes her death, was of negligible importance, if it existed at all.

Moreover, the State made it known that the witnesses summoned from the film colony at Hollywood will be called to prove that Miss Rappe, whether she drank gin and orange juice, or whether she didn't behave normally on most occasions, was not subject to the prostrations out of which Fatty's lawyers have been building their alibi.

Fatty Makes Good Showing

Fatty himself, when he was summoned to the stand, astounded everyone. It is barely possible that he astounded even himself. His lawyers delivered him into the man of the cross-examiners with fear and trembling.

His two-hour grilling as a witness and tenderly as birds watch their fledglings take the air for the first time.

And similarly their collective mood changed slowly from wild anxiety to admiration and confidence. Fatty was permitted to testify only after a stormy conference of his lawyers. One of the leaders of the group threatened to quit the case if the accused was not permitted to tell his own story to the jury.

Meanwhile Fatty's financial associates were insisting that he keep silent. But the presence of an audience may have helped the big man. He shook terribly at first and tightened his grip on the arms of his chair until his hands went white. But his voice was round and steady.

He revealed himself in his narrative as the most pitiful of fat men, the most tragically used of all good Samaritans, an amiable individual whose rooms were invaded by uninvited guests, who ate his food and borrowed his motorcar, and ran up a big bill on him and got him into a pit of trouble with the hotel management before they finally started him on the way to jail under a charge of murder.

Tells New Version

At memorable points his version of the story of Virginia Rappe differed from the stories of all other witnesses. In it he, himself, always appeared the most innocent and best intentioned of men. When he said that, going un-

Mr. Haley has been sent to San Francisco to transmit accurate reports of the trial of Rocco C. Arbutuckle each day. He will continue to do so until the trial is finished.

suspectly into his own bedroom from the sitting-room of the suite, he found Virginia Rappe ill and suffering in his bathroom and merely tried to relieve her with a glass of water before he carried her to the bed and called her friends. Mr. Friedman, the Assistant District Attorney, seeing him with ironic humor, asked if he had never told of all this before.

Fatty admitted that he had told his lawyer, Mr. Dominguez. The Assistant District Attorney, expressing modest astonishment that the witness should have waited so long to tell the truth, reminded Fatty that at the time of his arrest he had stubbornly refused to tell what went on in his room before Virginia was found there in a delirium.

"He's cleared himself," whispered Fatty's counsel jubilantly when the cross-examination ended. "We'll see," said Brady.

Great Day for Fivco

San Francisco has known some great and memorable days. There was the day of the great earthquake in 1906. And there was the day when the Fin Sing Yin Universal Peace and Poker Club substituted white Iowa corn flour for chrysanthemum wine at the feast of the forty lanterns. And there was the day when Bull Mooseism blew up in Chicago.

These were days when the bright skies of these parts seemed to warn and grow dark and when men had to be strong to survive. The day on

Continued on Page Five, Column One

LIVERIED CHAUFFEUR WAITS AS WOMEN ROB FUR STORE

Well-Dressed Thieves Walk Off With Costly Garments

Three fashionably dressed women helped themselves to furs valued at $275 yesterday from the store of Jacob Katz, 573 North Fortieth street. They escaped in a limousine driven by a liveried chauffeur.

Katz told police he was on the second floor of his establishment when he heard the shop door bell ring. He said he was busy at the time, but that he went downstairs about a minute later.

A woman about forty years old and two girls about twenty years old were entering a limousine when he reached the store, Katz said. The girls each wore a fur wrap and the woman a fur coat, part of Katz's stock.

The furrier said he chased the motorcar about a quarter of eight, but was distracted and failed to get the license number of the car.

BOY HERE FOR OPERATION

Panama Youth to Be Taken to Hospital This Afternoon

Mammal Salones, the Panama boy sent here for a delicate operation at the University of Pennsylvania, has arrived in the city. The boy was first taken to the Spanish Consulate at 114 Spruce street, and will later be removed to the University Hospital, where the operation will take place.

The boy was brought here on a hurry trip from Panama in the hope that Dr. Frazer, noted as a specialist in operations on the lower extremities, would save his life. All preparations have been made at the hospital for the life-saving operation and it will be performed as soon as possible.

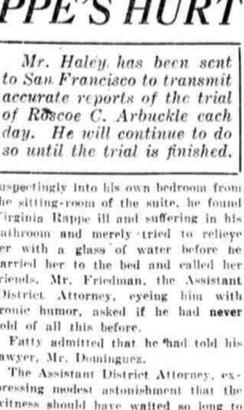

HE'S IN AGAIN

Daniel's Vacation From Jail Only Lasts One Day

Daniel Dombowski, thirty-three, 3275 Cedar street, had a short spell of liberty yesterday after being released from the House of Correction and then started back there again today.

Daniel has a way of letting the world in general, and Mrs. Mary Weissman in particular, know when he has been drinking too much. Yesterday the gates of the House of Correction swung open to release him after he had served three months for being drunk and disorderly. This morning they swung open again to admit him to serve another three months for the same offense.

Coming to America

MME. EMMA CALVE

The French operatic star will soon leave Paris for New York. She will also visit Canada and Mexico.

WOODBURY CONVICT CAUGHT IN SLEEP

Jail-Breaker Recaptured at Gibbstown, N. J. While Taking a Nap

1 MORE PRISONER AT LARGE

John Fossile, nineteen years old, Bristol, Pa., one of the prisoners who escaped from the county jail at Woodbury, N. J., last Saturday, was captured just after midnight last night in Gibbstown, N. J. He is the third of the men to be brought back.

Fossile was found asleep in the railroad station by a guard from the power plant nearby. The guard, together with all other authorities around Gibbstown, had been looking for Fossile since Sunday night, when an attempted robbery of a store made police believe one of the escaped prisoners was nearby.

A prison guard rushed to Gibbstown and identified Fossile. He was lodged in the jail at Woodbury at 2:30 this morning.

The only one of the four men who got away Saturday after nearly killing the warden still at liberty is Howard Ayres, thirty-four years old, Westville, N. J. The authorities promise his capture within a few days.

Fossile was sentenced last Thursday for an attempted robbery in a Woodbury drug store. It was announced that nothing was to be done about the jail-break until the fourth man is caught. Then the Grand Jury will be called in special session. It is expected the men will be indicted for attempted murder and charged with conspiracy to break out of the penitentiary.

Arthur C. Redrow, County Prosecutor, spent several hours this morning quizzing the recaptured men in an effort to find out which of them struck the blow that was so nearly fatal to Harry Mager, the warden. All of them denied it, but Mr. Redrow said he believed it was Ayres, who has been the only man still at large, had been talking to the warden just a few minutes before the jail break was made and then he turned out with a box of new cigarettes. Mager is much improved and is expected to be back at his duties before the end of the week.

ONE STORM AFTER ANOTHER

Hail Adds to Destruction Wrought in Massachusetts

Boston, Nov. 28.—(By A. P.)—New England cities and towns are recovering slowly today from damage and confusion caused by storms of the last two days.

While efforts were being made to restore lighting, communication and transportation services, a new storm of hail set in in Eastern Massachusetts, the heaviest turned cold again and the warden that prostrated wires, poles and limbs of trees increased. Hope that lights could be restored tonight for nearly two score of trees and towns that were in darkness last night lessened.

The storm toll in life was two, both persons being killed by live wires; in property damage, the storm being among the worst in New England's annals.

THEY WORK QUICK IN PHILA.

Burgess Buys Car and Fifteen Minutes Later It Is Gone

Burgess, Walter J. Burgess, of Abington, Pa., paid $25,000 for the privilege of owning a brand-new coupe of a well-known model for the brief period of fifteen minutes today.

Mr. Burgess paid spot cash for the car at the street and Leigh avenue at noon. He climbed in and drove one square to 1545 High avenue. There he stopped to see his old friend, C. H. Weaver, and invited him out to admire his new machine.

But when they came out the car was gone.

VARE COUNCILMEN DROP CLEANING ROW ON TIP FROM 'BOSS'

Senator Vare

Visit of Senator to City Hall Brings Sudden Change of Front in Budget Warfare

CAVEN GETS ASSURANCES, BUT TRICKERY IS SEEN

Councilmen stand today temporarily dignified as supporters of the Mayor's program of city-wide street cleaning for next year.

This unique and paradoxical presentation was brought about by Senator Vare, the master strategist and stage manager of the Combine. For neither the Senator, the "largest street-cleaning contractor in the world," nor the Combine Councilmen are in favor of cleaning by municipal forces. They admit they are not.

But, as Councilman Hall, out of the depths of his fertile vocabulary would expressively describe the situation, "Combine Councilmen have been quizzing too many honours" in their zeal for the Combine.

Realizing that even his friends could be too far gone, Vare stepped into the limelight just before yesterday's session of Council for the consideration of the budget of the Department of Public Works. This department will have charge of the street-cleaning work for 1922.

Shifting Done Rapidly

Before the Senator left City Hall for the seclusion of the Lincoln Building, an entire change of scene was effected. The scene shifters worked so quickly no one would have dreamed there was ever the intention of Combine Councilmen to put Director Caven on the grill and rip holes in the street-cleaning program.

It was generally anticipated that yesterday's session was to be stormy, with Councilman Hall booming and Councilman Gaffney rising to heights of impetuosity before the speaker was thronged with jockeys who could hardly wait for the Combine to get into action. There was to be "dirty work" at the old crossroads.

Senator Vare spoiled all that. A few minutes before 1 o'clock, the hour for the opening of the session, the Senator strolled through the crowded corridors of the Council Chamber and entered Councilman Hall's clearing house for Vare Councilmen. A messenger called for Mr. Hall, who was in the chamber. With a genial remark about the "boss" Mr. Hall went post-haste to confer with the Senator. The door to Mr. Hall's office was shut. The Senator was in close conference with Council.

Barley addressing Mr. Hall, forgotten the staff about going after Caven. Let him have what he wants for street cleaning, but make him tell how much each branch of the work will cost. When we get the figures, when the time comes, that contract work is cheaper. There's no use believing about municipal street cleaning. We have to stand for it, and we might as well do it gracefully.

Hall Gets His Orders

Then the session began. Caven, who had expected to be denounced, was surprised to find himself praised. Several times Mr. Caven had been a fainting man, would have swooned, if Charles Hall sniled at him and called him "Frank," and was extremely collected when asked to buy him some cigarettes. Councilmen Devlin and Cleaver, who on occasion have been obliged to stand up for municipal cleaning, were successful. Their job had been taken away from them.

Administration Councilmen heard Hall say that he favored giving Caven the money needed for a street-cleaning program. But they felt that surely there must be some "trick" about it somewhere. Charles Hall was in such a felicitous mood that he emphasized the point.

Continued on Page Twenty, Column Four

SINGLE CONTESTED VOTE MAY CAUSE TRIPLE TIE

Too Many Marks on Ballot Causes Upper Gwynedd Suit

Around the legality of one little vote stands the problem of which of the candidates in Upper Gwynedd Township will have the office of school director this year. This one vote gave one candidate 102 votes, and the other candidate has 101 votes each.

J. M. Reed apparently was the successful candidate at the elections. But the Montgomery County Court asking his name to be set aside on the ground that an illegal ballot was counted for him.

This particular ballot was marked with a cross in the Republican square, another in the "Expatriates" square, a cross opposite the name of each of the public for State and county offices and numerous other crosses. Twenty-eight votes of the district and a judge of the election signed the ballot.

U. S. BARS HONEYMOONERS

Californian With Jugo-Slav Bride Is Held at Ellis Island

New York, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—Honeymooning couples, usually given the right to pass the world over, must figure on such substance problems as immigration quotas when entering the United States from foreign lands. This fact was being pondered here today by Vukob Ratkovic, a resident of San Diego, and his bride, to whom he was recently married in Jugo-Slavia.

Ratkovic, who asserts he came to America twenty years ago and has three out of his first citizenship papers, went to Jugo-Slavia recently to wed his bride, a sweetheart and bring her to the United States.

On reaching Ellis Island, the couple found no more immigrants from their native country would be admitted at present.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR HELP? PERHAPS THE BEST PERSON TO CONTACT IS ADVERTISING UNDER THE NAME OF THE PUBLIC LEADER.

Vare Says He Is Keeping His Hands Off Council

Senator Vare asserted today he is not interfering with Council and does not expect to interfere.

Phil. Youth Carries Hysterical Co-ed Down Ladder as Blaze Attacks Dormitory

YOUNG WOMEN CLIMB DOWN ESCAPES TO REACH STREET

Girls' students of Ursinus College, at Collegeville, Pa., were driven out by checking smoke that penetrated to the dormitories of Shreiner Hall when fire started in the basement at 9:15 o'clock this morning.

Clad in night clothing or dressing gowns, the girls fled from flames and smoke by stairways and fire escapes. When the fire-gang in Collegeville was running, the boys from the men's dormitories nearby rushed to the aid of the smoke and led the frightened girls to safety.

Although none of the students were in danger, there was one thrilling rescue, in which a Philadelphia figure.

PHILADELPHIA YOUTH SAVES GIRL

Miss Irene Jones, of Slatington, Pa., became frightened and confused by the smoke and leaped screaming from a third-story window.

Arthur Leaning, of Wyndover, Chestnut Hill, an Ursinus student, went to her aid. He placed a ladder against the side of the dormitory and clambered to the top. Miss Jones was not too frightened to venture on the ladder under his guidance, and he helped her slowly to the street. A neighbor took her in and the boys got her belongings from the dormitory.

The fire damage is estimated at about $500. The fire also was confined to the basement and to a music room on the main floor. The dormitory floors were damaged by water, but the personal belongings of the students were virtually unharmed.

The fire is ascribed to a defective fuse in the heating system. A college employee who keeps up the fire escapes in the basement has given instructions for the immediate enrollment of 700 whole-time "specials" and 5000 part-time "specials" to complete the establishment of its forces.

London, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—While it is thought here that Premier Lloyd George's statement before the Labor Party today will leave the deadlock in the Irish peace negotiations virtually unchanged, the political commentators in the morning newspapers view the situation with unusual gloom. They appear to adopt the view ascribed to official circles, that even though the peace negotiations are a setback now, they will ultimately reach a satisfactory conclusion based on mutual concessions.

Not only is a breach of the Irish truce, which has endured five months, unexpected following a possible cessation of negotiations, but the newspapers generally imply the belief that all the interested parties recognize the importance of maintaining the truce. So far as to say that a tacit understanding already exists between the British Government, the Sinn Fein and the Irish Government, the latter broken and thus enable the resumption of the negotiations at any possible moment, should they be suspended at the Christmas and New Year holidays.

These hopeful accounts regarding the probable maintenance of peace in Ireland, combined with many fresh rumors of a meeting between Lloyd George and the Irish Government, have led to speculations to depart for the Washington Conference at an early date.

DIPLOMAT, LATE TO DINNER, SLIDES TO SEAT AT TABLE

"Out or Safe?" He Asks on Floor. Arm Hitched to Hughes' Chair

Washington, Nov. 29.—White House diners in these days of conference diplomacy are apt to be a bit awkward, especially if non-English-speaking guests are placed beside monolingual Americans. This occasionally is necessary, in order to make the seating arrangements conform to protocol. Sometimes, though, the hostess may count on fortunate accidents that dispel all formality.

At one of the most "doggy" affairs recently given, an Assistant Secretary of State arrived late. As he stepped into the dining room he was in the midst of a conversation with the hostess, so that he had to ask her to repeat the name of the man who had been invited to dine with him. He then turned to the hostess and asked her to repeat the name of the man who had been invited to dine with him.

PROCLAIMS EDUCATION WEEK

Washington, Nov. 28.—(By A. P.)—President Harding issued a proclamation today setting apart the week of December 4 to 10 as American Education Week.

U. S. BARS HONEYMOONERS

Californian With Jugo-Slav Bride Is Held at Ellis Island

New York, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—Honeymooning couples, usually given the right to pass the world over, must figure on such substance problems as immigration quotas when entering the United States from foreign lands. This fact was being pondered here today by Vukob Ratkovic, a resident of San Diego, and his bride, to whom he was recently married in Jugo-Slavia.

Ratkovic, who asserts he came to America twenty years ago and has three out of his first citizenship papers, went to Jugo-Slavia recently to wed his bride, a sweetheart and bring her to the United States.

On reaching Ellis Island, the couple found no more immigrants from their native country would be admitted at present.

URSINUS GIRLS FLEE FIRE IN NIGHT GARB; BOYS FIGHT FLAMES

Phil. Youth Carries Hysterical Co-ed Down Ladder as Blaze Attacks Dormitory

YOUNG WOMEN CLIMB DOWN ESCAPES TO REACH STREET

Girls' students of Ursinus College, at Collegeville, Pa., were driven out by checking smoke that penetrated to the dormitories of Shreiner Hall when fire started in the basement at 9:15 o'clock this morning.

Clad in night clothing or dressing gowns, the girls fled from flames and smoke by stairways and fire escapes. When the fire-gang in Collegeville was running, the boys from the men's dormitories nearby rushed to the aid of the smoke and led the frightened girls to safety.

Although none of the students were in danger, there was one thrilling rescue, in which a Philadelphia figure.

PHILADELPHIA YOUTH SAVES GIRL

Miss Irene Jones, of Slatington, Pa., became frightened and confused by the smoke and leaped screaming from a third-story window.

Arthur Leaning, of Wyndover, Chestnut Hill, an Ursinus student, went to her aid. He placed a ladder against the side of the dormitory and clambered to the top. Miss Jones was not too frightened to venture on the ladder under his guidance, and he helped her slowly to the street. A neighbor took her in and the boys got her belongings from the dormitory.

The fire damage is estimated at about $500. The fire also was confined to the basement and to a music room on the main floor. The dormitory floors were damaged by water, but the personal belongings of the students were virtually unharmed.

The fire is ascribed to a defective fuse in the heating system. A college employee who keeps up the fire escapes in the basement has given instructions for the immediate enrollment of 700 whole-time "specials" and 5000 part-time "specials" to complete the establishment of its forces.

London, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—While it is thought here that Premier Lloyd George's statement before the Labor Party today will leave the deadlock in the Irish peace negotiations virtually unchanged, the political commentators in the morning newspapers view the situation with unusual gloom. They appear to adopt the view ascribed to official circles, that even though the peace negotiations are a setback now, they will ultimately reach a satisfactory conclusion based on mutual concessions.

Not only is a breach of the Irish truce, which has endured five months, unexpected following a possible cessation of negotiations, but the newspapers generally imply the belief that all the interested parties recognize the importance of maintaining the truce. So far as to say that a tacit understanding already exists between the British Government, the Sinn Fein and the Irish Government, the latter broken and thus enable the resumption of the negotiations at any possible moment, should they be suspended at the Christmas and New Year holidays.

These hopeful accounts regarding the probable maintenance of peace in Ireland, combined with many fresh rumors of a meeting between Lloyd George and the Irish Government, have led to speculations to depart for the Washington Conference at an early date.

DIPLOMAT, LATE TO DINNER, SLIDES TO SEAT AT TABLE

"Out or Safe?" He Asks on Floor. Arm Hitched to Hughes' Chair

Washington, Nov. 29.—White House diners in these days of conference diplomacy are apt to be a bit awkward, especially if non-English-speaking guests are placed beside monolingual Americans. This occasionally is necessary, in order to make the seating arrangements conform to protocol. Sometimes, though, the hostess may count on fortunate accidents that dispel all formality.

At one of the most "doggy" affairs recently given, an Assistant Secretary of State arrived late. As he stepped into the dining room he was in the midst of a conversation with the hostess, so that he had to ask her to repeat the name of the man who had been invited to dine with him. He then turned to the hostess and asked her to repeat the name of the man who had been invited to dine with him.

PROCLAIMS EDUCATION WEEK

Washington, Nov. 28.—(By A. P.)—President Harding issued a proclamation today setting apart the week of December 4 to 10 as American Education Week.

U. S. BARS HONEYMOONERS

Californian With Jugo-Slav Bride Is Held at Ellis Island

New York, Nov. 29.—(By A. P.)—Honeymooning couples, usually given the right to pass the world over, must figure on such substance problems as immigration quotas when entering the United States from foreign lands. This fact was being pondered here today by Vukob Ratkovic, a resident of San Diego, and his bride, to whom he was recently married in Jugo-Slavia.

Ratkovic, who asserts he came to America twenty years ago and has three out of his first citizenship papers, went to Jugo-Slavia recently to wed his bride, a sweetheart and bring her to the United States.

On reaching Ellis Island, the couple found no more immigrants from their native country would be admitted at present.

Likes Jury Duty

Mrs. Anna Gass, 2140 N. Camac St., Has Served on Several Cases. Jury service as a fresh contact with life was welcomed by Mrs. Anna Gass, 2140 North Camac street, who was summoned on her return from a honeymoon.

BRIDE LIKES JURY DUTY

Mrs. Gass was on the jury lists of Quarter Sessions Court as Miss Anna Haggerty, 5433 Kingsessing avenue. Her name was drawn from the big jury wheel early in May. May 18 she was married to Samuel Gass, a co-maker.

When the newlyweds returned from a New England honeymoon last month a jury summons was waiting for the bride. She reported for duty November 21 and has served over forty cases.

"I certainly like serving on a jury," Mrs. Gass said today after her case. She has been excused until Thursday.

"One can learn a great deal from the Judges and the lawyers. I never knew before just how cases were disposed of in the courts."

PICKETING IS STARTED

Garment Workers Act as State Troops to End Strike

Pickets were established today at the 108 factories affected by the garment workers' strike. No disorders were reported among any of the 600 picketers.

The State Bureau of Mediation is making an effort to settle the differences between the union and the Garment Manufacturers' Association.

</