Referee Navy Contest

Ward Brennan had expected to make his bow as a referee before Penn players and fans this evening in the game with the Navy. He received a wire from Manager Zimmerman yesterday, saying that he had been relieved of his duties at Reading tonight by President Scheffer so as to officiate in the Penn-Navy game.

Brennan worked at Trenton last evening and saw Scheffer, who informed him that he knew nothing of any such arrangement and that he was assigned to Reading. I

A PHILADELPHIA pair entered the final round for the national doubles racquets title at the local Racquet Club trying to pin the shoulders of the today when Jay Gould and Joseph W. Princeton team to the mat. The fresh-Wear played C. C. Pell and Stanley Mortimer, the national champions.

Pell and Mortimer hall from New York, and they hall from a school of racquets that believes in winning, willyfilly. In other words, the feature of their game is aggressiveness and, in the opinion of all the experts at the local club, the metropolitans will carry of the crown once more, ensily.

To those, however, who are getting their first acquaintance with racquets at the present matches, Gould and Wear are expected to give the champions a

In advancing to the final round the local pair ousted H. L. Dixon and E. H. Reynolds, of Chicago. The game scores were, for Gould and Wear, 15-Pell and Mortimer won the other semi-final match over F. T. Frehlinghuysen and M. Hecksher, New York, 18-13, 15-8 and 15-14. Neither of the winners was obliged to show his real strength yesterday. Jay Gould scored a number of service aces, but Wenr really carried the match, His timely shots saved the point time and again. In the opinion of the gal-leryites, Wear is one of the few players who could carry Gould to victory in a doubles racquets match. Gould is probably the greatest court tennis player in the world, but as a racquet player, well, they say he's still the world's greatest court tennis player.

None of the players in today's finals have shown much so far in the way of serving. Pell and Mortimer have advanced as they have by virtue of their telling shots just above the radiator line on the backwall and the speed of heir corner placements. Pell played Wear today, a canny shift that showed the New Yorker's feared Wear especially. New York pairs have always been famed for their agressive-ness and Pell is the better player of the champion pair. It was he, therefore, that was chosen to block, if possible, the aggressive tactics of Wear.

The champions were expected to play Gould as much as possible. The latter has acquired a deal of surplus poundage and does not star in a racquets court with anything like his brilliance on a court tennis inclosure.

The so-called "standard ball" is coming in for considerable criticism at the matches. This is a bal, which is made in a standard way in England and is designed as softer than the old ball. Formerly the ball was made in Eng-land. These balls were sent all over the world, and when they were worn out were sent back to be recovered. The older they got the harder and peppier they became. A ball that had been around the world several times rebounded from the racquets and cement walls of a racquets court with the flash and spark of a bullet. It was highly

It costs about $12,000 to build a racquets court, and this in itself has much to do against the game being popularized. It is a brick inclosure like an empty swimming pool, with solid brick walls and floor covered with a special black cement. The racquets cost close to $10 a piece for
