

PHILADELPHIA GIRL HELD IN BALTIMORE

Glady Welling, Arrested With Male Companion, Accused of Bank Robberies

MOTHER ALSO IN CUSTODY

Glady Welling, of Broad street near Indiana avenue, is being held by the police in Baltimore, with George Massey, of New Castle, Pa., who is charged with being implicated in bank robberies at Little Falls, N. Y.; Frederick County, Maryland, and other places.

The girl is also known as Helen Green and Mrs. George Massey, according to reports on file in the office of the Maryland Automobile Commissioner.

The girl, Massey and her mother were arrested as they were motoring through Baltimore last night when police recognized the license tags of the car used in the robbery of the Mercantile Bank in Frederick County. Officials of the bank, however, failed to identify Massey, who is being held without bail for a further hearing June 22.

At first the girl claimed to be the wife of Massey, who, police say, is also known as Edward Welling, in the car with her. She was not, however, Massey's home is said to be in Dayton, O., but Baltimore police say that recently he and the girl have been living in Philadelphia.

After their arrest the three were taken to a police station where Massey was searched and police found bills aggregating more than $2700. In the car was found a long pinbar, curved on one end.

Massey's companion is the same girl, Baltimore police believe, who attracted attention in Erie in 1921 when she went to that city with Earl Frits, alias Edward Barton, alias Ritchie, alias Stone, alias George Massey.

Massey is also wanted, Baltimore police say, in Pittsburgh and Baginaw, Mich., for bank robberies.

Following the robbery at Little Falls, N. Y., it is said, Massey passed a number of bank notes of large denomination in Pittsburgh in payment for furniture.

The girl said that she met Massey about a year and a half ago in Erie, Pa., and admitted accompanying him to Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Harrisburg.

SAVIOR OF BETSY ROSS HOUSE TO BE HONORED ON FLAG DAY

Annual City-Wide Celebration in Honor of Old Glory Is a Double Event

Charles W. Smith, Now 80, Kept Famous Home From Being Wrecked for Factory

CHARLES W. SMITH

Flag Day is to be observed tomorrow throughout this city, where the first United States flag of thirteen stars and stripes — was made. The fourth annual celebration will be held under the auspices of the Patriotic Order Sons of America tomorrow evening with a street demonstration.

Exercises will be held at the Betsy Ross House, 230 Arch street.

Particular impetus is given to the celebration by the fact that today is the eightieth birthday of the man who saved the Betsy Ross House, Charles W. Smith, of the Tracy Hotel.

In 1802, when Mr. Smith, a retired coal dealer, heard that the Betsy Ross House was to be torn down to make room for a factory, he visited the historic spot and found it occupied by a saloon and a cigar store. He awakened the interest of patriotic men and women, and saved the house, which today is one of the shrines of Revolutionary history in Philadelphia.

Mr. Smith is a member of the Union League, the Sons of the Revolution, the Masonic order and many other organizations.

At the Betsy Ross House a stage has been erected for the performance by Charles W. Weisberger, a member of the P. O. S. A. An invitation has been extended to every organization by the P. O. S. A. to join in the celebration.

The exercises are to be presided over by Mr. Helms. Addresses will be delivered by Richard Weiglin, president of Council; State President Oscar B. Wetherhold, of Reading, and the ex-State chaplain, the Rev. W. E. P. Haas, pastor of the Wharton Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church. Another ex-State chaplain, the Rev. Charles L. Hunter, will give the invocation and benediction.

The Americanization Committee of the Chamber of Commerce has requested every industrial establishment in the city to display the national colors.

Today, Noonday meetings are being arranged in various plants, when speakers will explain the significance of the day. The salute to the flag will be part of the exercises.

The Elks will hold Flag-Day services in the evening at Philadelphia Lodge, No. 2, P. O. E., at the Elks' home, 1820 Arch street. Judge John M. Patterson is to be the orator.

Various schools throughout the city will hold Flag-Day services.

Tipsters for Attorneys Are Kept From Central Station by Order of Magistrate

A special detail of City Hall guards was posted in the east corridor on the sixth floor of City Hall today to keep lawyers "runners" on the move.

Magistrate Ronshaw ordered his attaches to refuse admittance to any one suspected of being a runner or a runner's tipster.

As a result there were fewer representatives of lawyers on the sixth floor than in years.

The magistrate today reiterated his purpose to give Mayor Moore and Director Cortelyou charge made in an anonymous letter that police and detectives were in the pay of criminal lawyers and brought them business.

"I believe the two detectives who made the arrests in the Hammer case which was before me yesterday should be found to explain how they got on the job so quickly," he said. "If they can establish a clean bill of health, all right; otherwise, they should be punished."

Detectives Niedenthal and Engel, who made the arrests, denied vehemently that they had any part in the case other than that of making the arrests when they heard some one yelling "murder."

John T. Keyser has leased the Collegeville Hotel building to a Masonic organization of Philadelphia. The building will be used as living quarters for aged members of the fraternity from the home in Philadelphia while the new building is being constructed on North Broad street, work on which was commenced yesterday.

The furniture and furnishings of the hotel were disposed of at public sale on Saturday to make room for the aged Masons, who will occupy the building this week.

Charles F. Maltby, the class president, conducted the ceremony.

In the regular exercises the salutatory was given by class president Shedy and the valedictory by William J. MacIntosh. Franklin W. Kohler read the history of the class and Charles A.

"BOLSHEVIK" ENDS LIFE

Hotel Worker Couldn't Stand Chiding About Appearance

Because his associates called him a "Bolshevik," Anthony Bolakey, who roomed at 1312 Wood street, killed himself in bed last night. His body was found this morning, with a pistol and a prayer book lying beside it.

His landlady, Mrs. Mary Polsky, told police that for some time her boarder, who was employed at a hotel in the city, complained to her that the other employees mocked him because of his Russian extraction and his appearance.
