

Hooper Submits Plan to End R. R. Strike

Continued from Page One from his work and attacked by a crowd of men. Notices to Kansas mayors informing them their cities are liable for damages under the State "mob" law were forwarded by Attorney General Hopkins.

Mr. Jewell, commenting on President Harding's proclamation, said the way to end the strike was to call a conference of railroad executives and shop-craft leaders.

DON'T DELAY MAILS, PRESIDENT WARNS

Washington, July 12.—(By A. P.)—With continued reports of interference with mail trains by railroad strikers reaching the United States Department in the last twenty-four hours, President Harding has issued a proclamation directing "all persons to refrain from all interference with the lawful efforts to maintain interstate transportation and the carrying of the United States mails."

The President's proclamation says: "Whereas, the United States Railroad Labor Board, an agency of the Government, created by law and charged with the duty of adjusting disputes between railroad operators and employees engaged in interstate commerce; and

"Whereas, the United States Railroad Labor Board has recently handed down decisions, one affecting the wage of the non-craft employees, the other declaring the contract system of shop-craft work with outside agencies to be contrary to the intent of the Transportation Act, and therefore, that such practices must be discontinued; and

"Whereas, the shop-craft employees have elected to discontinue their work, rather than abide by the decision rendered, and certain operators have ignored the decision ordering the abandonment of the contract shop practice; and

"Whereas, the maintained operation of the railroads in interstate commerce and the carrying of the United States mails have necessitated the employment of men who choose to accept employment under the terms of the decision, and who have the legal and indisputable right to work that others have to decline to work; and

"Whereas, the peaceful settlement of controversies in accordance with the law and respect for the established agencies of such settlement are essential to the security and well-being of our people; therefore, I, Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, do hereby make proclamation directing all persons to refrain from all interference with the lawful efforts to maintain interstate transportation and the carrying of the United States mails.

Laws Must Come First "These activities and the maintained supremacy of the law are the first obligation of the Government and all the citizenship of our country. Therefore, I invite the co-operation of all public authorities, State and municipal, and the aid of all good citizens to uphold the laws and to preserve the public peace, and to facilitate operations in safety which are essential to life and liberty, and the security of property and our common public welfare.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington the 11th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-seventh.

"By the President: WAREN G. HARDING. CHARLES E. HUGHES, Secretary of State."

TO KEEP UP STRIKE MAIL OR NO MAIL

New York, July 12.—(By A. P.)—President Harding's proclamation on the rail shop crafts strike resulted today in a public declaration by the "strike conduct" committee of the Eastern railroads that they would "continue on strike until a satisfactory settlement is reached, even if every mail train in the district is canceled."

The declaration, issued by John J. Dowd, chairman of the workers' committee, said: "The shop crafts strikers in the Metropolitan district will, of course, obey the letter of the President's proclamation. We believe, however, that the precise meaning of the document should be more clearly defined. To this end we have adopted the following interpretation of the proclamation, upon which we base our policy for this district.

"The President mentioned our 'indisputable right to decline to work.' We believe this right is superior to any presidential proclamation. We assume, therefore, that the President did not intend in other parts of the document to impute illegality to our refusal to work, even if mail trains should be cancelled as a direct result of such refusal.

"The shop workers in the port of New York area will continue on strike until a satisfactory settlement is reached, even if every mail train in the district is canceled. On the other hand, acts of violence or the physical interference with the movement of trains will not be tolerated by the committee.

"As a matter of fact, the absence of acts of this kind in the New York district is the one sensational feature of this strike, which has not appeared in the newspaper headlines. Insofar as President Harding refers to such acts, we heartily concur. The proclamation unnecessary as far as we are concerned."

Rector to Leave Gloucester The Rev. Charles M. Hureck, rector of the Church of the Ascension, Gloucester City, for the last eleven years, will preach his farewell sermon on July 22. The congregation will tender the rector a farewell reception. He has accepted a call to Christ Church, Newbury, and will take charge on August 6.

Ex-Judge Patterson Got Ginsberg Off

Continued from Page One tion, where they have facilities for treating drug users. I sent him there, and he remained there until cured.

Transferred to Prison "Director Warburton then came before me and said Ginsberg was cured and no longer was a fit person to be at the House of Correction. There were some other drug addicts of which the same thing was true. I sent Ginsberg and the others to the County Prison."

"After Ginsberg was sentenced Mr. Gordon told me he was a dangerous criminal, and asked me not to interfere with the sentence subsequently without consulting the District Attorney's office. I agreed that I would consult the District Attorney if the question of releasing Ginsberg arose.

"About a month ago I received a letter from Judge Patterson, inclosing a parole for Ginsberg. The judge wrote that the prisoner had been cured of drug using, and that he had been in the ends of justice had been served.

"Judge Patterson asked me to sign Ginsberg's parole. I felt that it would be wrong to do so at the request of the President Judge of the Court in which the man had been sentenced. I felt that if he really had been cured it would be better to let him out on parole, and I do not wish to be drawn into a controversy. However, these are the facts. It is perhaps not a life or death matter, anyway, as with time off for good behavior and fourteen months out of three years served, the prisoner need not have had so very long a period to remain in jail. As I remember it, there are some other indictments hanging over him, and if he does not behave it will be possible to re-arrest him at any time and try him on these indictments.

"I assume all responsibility for the issuance of that parole," Judge Patterson said today. "It was on my recommendation that Judge Ogley granted it. That recommendation was not made until I had investigated and found that Ginsberg was not a drug dealer, but a drug addict. Addicts are usually confined for a period sufficient to effect a cure. Ginsberg had been confined more than that period, and that had a great deal to do with my recommendation. It must be borne in mind that I was impugned by Ginsberg's brother and other relatives and many friends time and time again, and I told them one and all that it was the duty of Judge Ogley.

Patterson's Explanation "I understand that they went to Judge Ogley and that he refused to grant it unless agreed. This I did in a letter that I sent to Judge Ogley. The judge is not to blame in any sense of the word. This talk of this man being a confirmed convict is all rot, and who have the most indisputable conviction. His people are respectable and I was assured not only by his relatives but by close friends that he would reform. There is nothing unhand about the whole matter."

Fear New Outbreak A fresh outbreak of trafficking in illicit drugs is expected by Assistant Director Tempest as a result of the release of Ginsberg.

"While I have no personal knowledge of the case," said Tempest, "my subordinates report that Ginsberg is the most dangerous criminal. I will watch every step he takes. I was shocked to hear that he had been freed."

"The police have been fighting hard against the drug traffic, and under great disadvantages. It has been hard work to do this. Lately the traffic has fallen off, due to the long sentences given drug peddlers. With Ginsberg released after serving only fourteen months, others will be willing to 'take a chance.'"

Little Faith in Reformation "Ginsberg's lawyer is said to have declared the prisoner had reformed. Maybe he has. But I haven't much faith in the reformation of men of his type. Ginsberg ought to be in jail," Lieutenant Charles Lee, of the vice squad, who caused Ginsberg's arrest, was indignant over his parole.

"Since Ginsberg got out," said Lieutenant Lee, "he has had the nerve to come to this office three times and make demands on me. When he was arrested he had $15 in marked bills in his pocket, which one of my men had passed to him for the purchase of drugs."

"We took this $15 and $15 more we found on him, and sealed the money in an envelope. It was used as evidence against him, and after his conviction turned over to Chief Clerk Gilbert, who put it in the safe."

"Three times Ginsberg has been here to demand that money back. I told him he would have to get a court order for it. He hasn't had the nerve to go into court yet."

Ginsberg, it is said, has wealthy family connections, with a father and brothers highly placed in the business life of the community. One of his relatives is said to be a political leader of prominence.

Another rumor is that extremely large legal fees were paid. Ginsberg was able to raise $10,000 half almost instantly at the time of his arrest.

Mayor Moore's investigation of police affairs was extended to the suspension of Patrolman John Dougherty, of the Frankford station, on the charge that he had worked in the interests of John R. K. Scott in a bigamy case.

William Hensel, 4722 Darrah street, was arrested May 20, 1921, charged with bigamy. He had not seen his first wife for nineteen years and thought her dead. It was charged that Dougherty, who served the warrant, got a fee for obtaining bail through Morris Schiff, a liquor dealer, and also took the prisoner to Scott's office before taking him to City Hall.

Dougherty denied all the charges today. "I am too busy being a policeman," he said, "to be a lawyer's runner. I wouldn't crawl up anybody's back for a dollar."

"The truth of the matter is that I arrested Hensel and took him to City Hall and there met his second wife in the corridor. She wanted to know a lawyer. I mentioned Scott, Stevenson and several others. She had heard of Scott and decided on him."

"I took the prisoner to the station and then because she didn't know where Scott's office, was accompanied her to the building, but didn't go to the office. Hensel was released finally and thanked me and handed me a couple of cigars."

"Then he was rearrested and held in higher bail. He met me on the street and loudly accused me of having received $250 of a fee of $500 which he paid to one of Scott's assistants. I never got a nickel."

Committee O. K.'s Fair in Senate

Continued from Page One request Senator Lodge to defer action on the resolution, and strike it from the committee calendar until such time as the Philadelphia Committee should reach a final decision as to the date and other details.

"Every bit as smart in style as big sister's. For these are of checked gingham in blue, brown, green and red effects. And they are collared in white, with pretty tie belt and a bit of cross-stitching or little frills as trimming. Girls will just love to wear them and parents will like the price—$1.85."

12,000 Women's Mull Sports Handkerchiefs, 5c Less Than Half Price

A former shipment of 8000 sold in a day. And no wonder, for these are worth more than twice the price and look three times the price. All new and fresh and "the last word" as to color and design. Most women will select two or three dozen, for they are really wonderful at 5c each.

John Frederick Lewis, former president of the Sesqui-Centennial Association, appeared at headquarters this morning in good humor and announced that Sesqui-Centennial developments are "moving fast now and we shall get action, and plenty of it, in the immediate future."

He further said that the meeting of the fair directors next Monday will clarify the entire situation and that important action will be taken. I shall celebrate the completion of the World's Fair on time as a great Philadelphia enterprise for the benefit of the entire nation. I call you all to witness that I shall hold a party of celebration when the time comes."

Victor Rosewater, of the fair staff, returned from conferences in Washington on with Senator Pepper and Chairman Brand, of the House Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions, and reported to Mr. Lewis that the legislative situation was now on an understood and definite basis and there would be no future hitch.

Philadelphians want some one to tell them exactly what is needed to make the Sesqui-Centennial a success. Bankers are not cold to the proposition, but they "want to be shown."

This is the opinion of Sheldon Potter, who expressed his views on the best way to arouse enthusiasm for the fair.

ROTARIANS MEET TODAY Plans for those members going to the Rotary Club Convention in Los Angeles will be discussed today at the weekly luncheon of the local club in the Hotel Lancaster. Four speeches will be made by delegates going to the convention, covering the trip to and from Los Angeles, the entertainment planned, the fellowship of the convention and the program at the convention itself.
