Why Madge Didn't Envy Lillian Her Home-Coming

When I awoke Lillian was gone, and the sun was streaming into the room beneath my lowered curtains. I looked at my wrist watch in alarm. Half after eight! Lillian's train had been gone an hour. Why had I been allowed to sleep so late?

I rushed through my morning toilet as though I were trying to catch a train, and descended to the dining room to find it deserted, but with a single place laid at the end of the table. Voices in the kitchen drew me to that room, and there I found Mrs. Durkee and Edith, enveloped in gingham aprons, busily engaged in washing the breakfast dishes.

"Hello, Lady," little Mrs. Durkee said gaily. "How's your neuralgia?"

For an instant I was startled, then I grasped the fact that Lillian must have provided this excuse for my over-sleeping, and thus had given me the opportunity for a little extra rest.

"St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

"I can see myself waking you!" little Mrs. Durkee cried indignantly. "I know what neuralgia is, and Lillian said you were awake a long time with it. Besides, I'm not going to get breakfast for you. Your grapefruit is on the table, with the electric toaster and coffee percolator ready to turn on. There's fresh coffee in the percolator, and there are eggs here you can cook any way you choose. So you see you won't hinder us a bit. This is Liberty Hall, you know."

"You won't delay us," Mrs. Durkee said in matter-of-fact tones. "I'll get you wash your own dishes, for just as soon as we finish here, Edith is going to get over the house with a dust cloth and a floor brush for the last touches—everything is all ready except that—while I'm going to get all the cooking for the dinner tonight out of the way. Then we'll be free when Lillian comes back at noon with those draperies. And there won't be a thing for you to do until then, so you can just as well go right on over to your own house. What time will Jim and Katie get there?"

"At 10 o'clock," I returned. "But you needn't think I'm going to be put off this way. Surely I can help someone this morning."

"Don't be a darned fool just because you know how to do it," Her Fluffiness retorted. "Here, I'll compromise. You can finish these dishes with yours when you've eaten your breakfast, then Edith can get at the room right away and I'll start getting my things together for my pudding. You won't interfere with me a bit."

"That's more like it," I smiled. "And I know Katie will be glad to get lunch for us."

"Yes, I can see her delight," sniffed Her Fluffiness, "with all that mess over there to clean up. And I'll tell you frankly, I couldn't be bothered with her in my kitchen. She'd drive me wild."

Lillian Cuts Corners

I flushed involuntarily and bit my lips to keep from replying in a way equally felicitous. Even in the days when maids were available, little Mrs. Durkee would never be bothered with one, but I have long known that she cherished a petty jealousy of my success in keeping Katie so long. And she never loses an opportunity to dis-

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.
