New Values in National Silk Week Exhibit

From the first morning of her discovery in the mulberry tree, centuries and centuries ago, the spirit of silk has flitted from age to age, with access to kingly palaces; she has crept into the peasantry of quaint old times; robed in splendor all who have worshipped at her shrine.

Cinderella would never have appeared in such magic splendor had not the innate beauty of silk clothed her with grace and sprayed her with style. Softer than the butterfly and much more radiant, silk sings, and sings, her everlasting chant into the fashions of Milady's ever changeful mood.
