From times of Diana and Queen Elizabeth, when women played at sports in dresses more conventional than practical, we have come by gradual stages to the present day, when women choose their sport costumes for appropriateness as well as smartness. Thus, today, woman's sport costumes are as varied as her athletic activities, and they include every detail from hats and wraps to sheer blouses and smartly fashioned shoes

Smart Sport Suits

FOR style and wear, the rainbow tweed sponsored by New York appears the favorite of the devotees of the courts and links. One particularly vivid conception from Atlantic City displays a swagger tuxedo coat, the collar of which is piped with a wool plaid material which goes to make up a beautiful plaid skirt. Still another is a Parisian sport suit, the jacket of which is of dark red marvella cloth with half-tuxedo collar, belted, and piped in a very conservative fashion in black braid. The skirt is of two-tone black and white check made very plain. And then we have the sport suits of silk shantung.

Silk Dresses

PROBABLY the introduction of silk, the "Queen of Fabrics" to the realm of sports-clothes has won quite as many devotees as has the love of the game itself, for it is indeed difficult to mention a single outdoor pursuit to which a costume of silk does not lend added zest.

The smartly dressed woman, for instance, will select her silk sport dress of canton crepe, Roshanara crepe, shantung, rajah, and the colors to choose from are most fascinating.

Fancy Sport Skirts

MILDLY full, but noticeably. Pleated plaids and fancy stripes are much in vogue. Silks woven in intricate geometric patterns play the role of favorite for the warm weather. Now again, cotton comes to the fore as in models of white gabardine. Drawn work and braid is used extensively and gives that most luxurious effect.

1921 Sport Sweaters

THE 1921 sport coat sweater should have a tuxedo collar and it may be a fancy slip-over effect trimmed with fringe. Belted it must be and very often a fancy weave is effectively used as trimming. Just to be different a model of fiber silk is a slip-over, thirty-eight inches long and hung with fringe. There are other models in crocheted effects and still others that are so much in demand for sport attire.

Riding Outing Suits

THESE have been made famous by the call to the out doors. There is hardly a woman that doesn't use one. Fishing, hunting and camping demand clothes that are serviceable and comfortable and yet good-looking. Our outing suits are made in three grades of khaki and five grades of wool. The 36-inch coat is not only the most popular but the most fashionable and most desired. The breeches can be had in either lace or button bottoms all of which have pockets. To go with these suits we have the khaki hats, khaki shirts, khaki middies, and khaki leggings and puttees. They are just what you need for your contemplated summer trip.

Diana,
with bow in hand, went
clad in homespun flax.

Atalanta
ran the famous race in soft draperies of some unknown ancient fabric.

The Medieval Maiden
rode her paltry beaked
in robes of velvet.

Queen Elizabeth
went hawking in brocades and fine laces.

The Colonial Dame
wore heavy satins when she played at battledore
and shuttlecock.

In Civil War Days
girls played croquet
clothed in flowered taffetas
"stiff enough to stand alone."

Miss 1899
