Telephone Concerts by Air From Forest Service Office Heard by Crowds.

Future possibilities of the wireless telephone were suggested Saturday when a representative of a battery service drove around the city with a wireless telephone receiving messages that were sent out from the forestry office in the federal building.

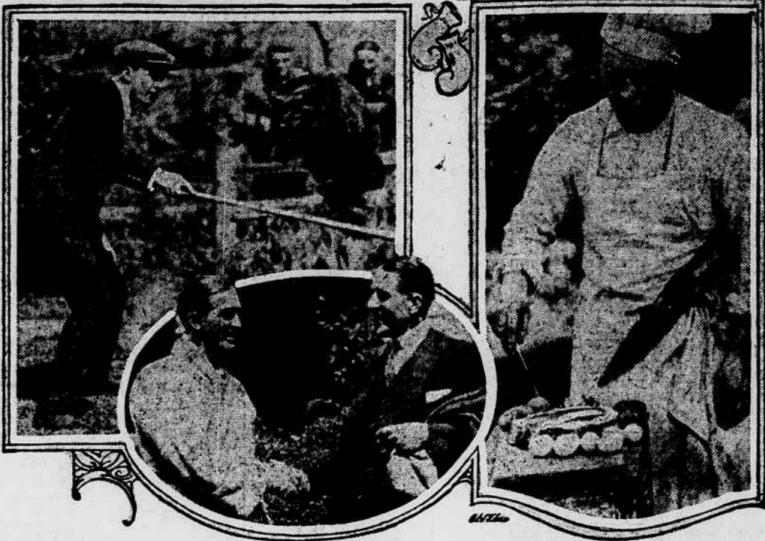

W. B. Willey, district forest inspector and other forest officials believe that in the near future the wireless telephone will be used by the business men when on camping or hunting trips to communicate daily with his place of business.

The demonstration of the wireless from the moving automobile concluded the forest protection program which has been held in Great Falls during the last week.

The week has been a very successful one, said Mr. Willey Saturday in speaking of the forest protection program, "and if the campers who go into the national forests this summer cooperate as willingly and as heartily as the people of Great Falls have with the forest service in making forest protection week a success here, the forest fires, caused by carelessness and thoughtlessness will be reduced to a minimum this summer."

In the past year, it is estimated, 20,000,000 persons have died of starvation in Northern Russia and Poland.

The orders to return were made upon the filing of third party claims. In the Hogan case, Dr. R. J. Reynolds filed his claim for the car, stating that he held a note for $1000 on the automobile. In the Duffy case, Edward Buhler was the third party claimant, and the court recognized his claim. Buhler asserted that he held a $1000 mortgage on the car concerned.

3 NEW HERDS IN COUNTY AS SALE RESULT

Hereford Stock Auctioned at Pavilion Wednesday Adds to Purebred Roster.

Canvass of the list of buyers who purchased registered stock at last Wednesday's auction of Herefords at the Montana Livestock pavilion has disclosed that three new purebred herds were established in Cascade county as a result of the sale. In buying animals offered at the sale, C. E. Lister and Leonard King, both of Monarch, and S. E. McCartney of Great Falls, joined the county's roster of growers of purebreds.

Mr. McCartney purchased eight cows and one sire, and will establish a herd of Herefords on his ranch near Cascade. Mr. Lister and Mr. King each became proprietor of cows entered at the auction. Officials of the pavilion organization say that the record of the sale of cows emphasizes the growing tendency of the smaller operators to grow purebred stock. Cows were in great demand, commanding the average of $45 per head more than the bulls. Twenty bulls were sold for an average of $155, and the twenty cows sold averaged $202 each.

Why Are Your Clerks So Different From Others? This question has been frequently and recently asked, and it occurs to us that many people might be interested in the answer. First of all, our salespeople are not clerks—they are co-workers in the fullest sense of the word and are treated as such. They work "with us" instead of "for us." While it is true that we require a certain high standard of intelligence and right living, the same people in some other store might not be the success that they are here. There must be an institution behind them that stands for something besides mere profit making—a store to be successful must take its place as a good citizen. Everyone connected with the Paris fully realizes that YOU are the "BOSS". YOU pay all salaries and YOUR opinion is responsible for the success that we enjoy. In meeting you every day our co-workers convey the spirit of the store—that of mutual benefit, helpfulness, reliability and satisfaction. When they tell you something it is with the understanding and the responsibility that they are giving you the word of the founders of this establishment. When they show you something it is with the pride that comes from having something worth showing. They share directly in the selection of the merchandise, the styles and the prices that you would like. When they meet you in the store, you are considered as a guest, and the best service is none too good for you. We all live here in the store one-third of every twenty-four hours. It is our business home, and when you call we want your visit to be remembered with pleasure. Those who live out of the city and cannot call personally, receive this same personal attention through our next-train mail order service. Summed up, we are simply conducting a store as we think YOU would like to have it. There are two sides to our counters and we aim to stand on your side and look at every transaction through your eyes. Your opinion is the only one that counts, and because it is favorable, we are inspired to still greater service and achievement. (Signed) THE PARIS DRY GOODS CO.
