on the bed, ready for the force of being carried to the ambulance.

In the interval of waiting my father brought to me a message from Tom Chester that he had established an effective escape upon the man across the road. This would be kept up every minute of the twenty-four hours until Hugh Grantland should return, but that they would not arrest him for Grace Draper would suspect something. I wondered what Tom Chester had discovered when he followed the wife of the man across the road down that lonely forest trail.

And then Dr. Pettit, forbidding, yet showing his real sympathy and desire to serve us in our awful emergency, arrived. Assuring me that my father's condition had been omitted brought in the stretcher-bearers from the hospital, and swathing me in a blanket, directed my father to an ambulance as realistically as if he were indeed the victim of a dangerous nervous collapse. The last sound in my ears was Katie's heart-felt wail, and only the thought of my father's danger kept me from rushing back to reassess the situation.

My father and Dicky accompanied me to the hospital, remained there, correctly anxious, in the waiting room, until word was brought them by an unsuspecting attendant that I was comfortable, and that word would be sent them daily of my condition. Then they left and drove back home.

They knew that by the clever arrangement of Dr. Pettit and a private hospital, a vacant private room would be the home for the next few days of a delightfully idle private nurse, whose only duties would be to report my supposed condition from time to time. They knew, also, that by another door, I, in traveling costume, with Robert Savarin bearing my suitcase, had departed in a waiting taxi for the railroad station. My father and Dicky, however, had not time to say good-bye to me, for my departure from the hospital so that I was not in evidence upon the railroad platform at all.

And his thoughtful parting word was that from Lillian—still woefully sick in the hospital—all news of our trouble and my recovery.

My trip South was like a nightmare. I could not sleep or eat, but counted the clicks of the wheels, measuring the miles as Dicky once had done, and dug my fingernails deep in my palms to keep from screaming at my enforced inaction and my impotence to ward off whatever terrible experience my baby boy might be going through.

And then at last, at Aberdeen, reeling, white-faced and staggering with weakness, a kindly porter assisted me down the steps, and I heard a shocked cry, and saw a woman lift me and carry me across the platform to a big, luxurious limousine. Dimly I realized that the supporting arms were those of Hugh Grantland, and I was those of the kindly voice of Mrs. Lukens in the car as she put an arm around me and drew my head to her shoulder.

"Just rest my dear," she said, "and the major comes."

Hugh Grantland appeared a few seconds later, swung my bags to the car, gave a hurried direction to his driver, entered the car and closed the door.

"What news?" My stiffened lips could hardly frame the words.

Hugh Grantland put his hand over my eyes.

"Will you be patient just a little longer?" he asked. "I have nothing certain up to this minute, yet I hope soon to have news that the child is recognized. You must be strong to help your baby if he's found, to continue the search for him if he is not. Drink this now."

Betty Kane Aids.

He had taken from a pocket of the car a patent bottle, which, when uncorked, gave forth the fragrance of strong, hot coffee. I forced down the draught he proffered, and felt strengthened, not so much by it as by his words. And then we were in Mrs. Lukens' well-remembered grounds, had entered her sitting room, where, enclosed in her wheel-chair by the open fire, sat the crippled figure of Betty Kane, the woman I had liked so well during its sojourn in the South.

Hugh Grantland drew up a chair for me opposite Betty's and stood, himself.

"Miss Kane does not know why I wanted her here," he said, "except that it was a matter of life and death to you. She knows, through the newspapers, of the loss of your child. Now, I have recognized the child. It is Betty Kane—that Tim sprit the child away from his home at the instance of Grace Draper, who has some sinister hold upon him, know that you are the only person who has any influence over Tim for good, and I believe you can tell us where he may be found."

Betty Kane's face went white, then crimson, and she poured me a glass of coffee with anguished sympathy.

"Oh, my dear, what you have suffered!" she said. "And, oh, poor, misguided Tim! This means his death, doesn't it?" she asked Hugh Grantland, piteously.

"Or life imprisonment," he retorted crisply. "But—"

"Oh, of course, I'll tell you anything I know!" she said quickly.

"Of one thing I am sure, though," she turned appealingly to me. "Tim would never injure the child, even though he was compelled to take him, if he is anywhere in hiding here, he is at the house of an old colored woman who lives out on the North road up in the hills. Even in the olden times, before Hugh Grantland and I, with three powerful men who had followed us to the Lukens home in another car, were dashing through the night up the road among the trees, the foot of a particularly lonely road, Hugh Grantland halted the car. As we proceeded cautiously on foot up the hill, I listening tensely to Hugh Grantland's whispered directions to me.

"Disguise your voice and ask to buy some milk for a sick child," he said.

There was no need for the disguise, so husky was my voice, and I obeyed him after uttering, "Who dah?" from inside the house.

An old negro unbarred the door, and I stepped across the threshold.

"Damnation!"

The man named Tim sprang to his feet as he uttered the oath, made a dash for the window, drawing a revolver and shooting past me as he went. Even in that short moment he did not aim at me. As through a veil I saw Hugh Grantland spring to wrest the revolver from him, saw Tim aim at the army officer, and fire, even as

How Hugh Grantland Met Madge and Why He Swiftly Led Her to Meet Betty Kane.

"He may have news by the time I reach there," I mechanically repeated, as my father finished reading the code message from Hugh Grantland, which demanded that I take the first train for Cedar Crest, while pretending—in order to deceive Grace Draper—that I was being taken to the hospital.

"May have news!" As the significance of the words rushed over me I sprang to my feet as if galvanized. With the prospect of something for me to do in my child's recovery, I felt strong and courageous. It was the deadly inaction that had made an automation of me.

"The hospital! How is it to be managed? I'm afraid the authorities will balk at the scheme. If only Dr. Pettit were back. He could arrange it," I said, and Robert Savarin interposed quickly.

"Dr. Pettit returned this morning," my father said gravely. "The one essential thing is that Grace Draper should not suspect anything. Madge's absence can be explained under the cover of illness, but both of you suddenly leaving could only be explained in one way—news of the child. No, she must go alone, and the rest of us must play the game here. Richard, I wish you to be especially attentive to Miss Draper, and make her certain that you have no suspicion of her."

"I'll be—," Dicky began, but under my father's steady gaze his protest died. Not in years had I seen my father breathing such an atmosphere of authority. Dicky yielded to it instantly.

"Very well, sir," he said quietly, and went out into the hall, returning in a moment to announce to me that I could have unobserved passage to my room. Even before he came back, Robert Savarin had gone with the assurance to me that he would make arrangements with Dr. Pettit as soon as it was humanly possible to do so.

"What News?"

From this moment it seemed to me that I was the centre of a maelstrom so quickly did things move. Safe in my room, with the help of Lelia—wide-eyed with excitement at the plan and her share in it, yet wonderfully quick and efficient—I packed for my journey, taking only the most necessary changes for myself, stuffing my suitcase and bag with all sorts of clothing and toys for my baby boy, should this journey mean his restoration to me.

I did not dare permit myself to hope, yet the dim possibility of his recovery gave me unlimited strength. I could have gone to Africa instead of North Carolina if it had been necessary.

Then I dressed, and, putting on a kimono over my clothing, lay down

COMMERCIAL CLUB ENDORSES BONDS FOR HELENA CUTOFF

Help to Be Given in Circulating Petitions for Special Election on New Issue in Cascade County.

Indorsement by the Great Falls Commercial club of a bond issue which will finance the Helena cutoff, between Hardy and Craig on the Helena road, was voted at a meeting of the club's board of directors Monday night at the Park hotel. The action was taken after the club had heard reports on recent meetings of the county commissioners of Lewis and Clark and Cascade counties, state highway and interested citizens, at which would make approximately advanced to its present status.

The decision to submit a bond issue in both counties was reached last Saturday at a meeting of both boards at the Cascade county court house and the club's indorsement carries a program for furnishing assistance in circulating election petitions. The board is required to call a bond election in the form of 20 per cent of the registered electors at the last general election, which the movement for the cutoff was 1,700 signatures necessary in Cascade county and 1,000 in Lewis and Clark.

The plan is to hold an election in both counties on the same date, probably January 14. It is intended that the circulating of the petitions will be completed by October 20.

$100,000 Issue Suggested.
The proposed construction would cost, in round figures, $390,000, which one-half would be paid by federal aid, the two counties sharing the remaining half equally. The amended Townsend highway bill, providing that the government shall bear 75 per cent of the cost of federal aid highway projects has already passed the United States senate and if the bill becomes a law as expected the two counties would bear but 35 per cent of the total cost. It has been suggested that each county

TENTH ST. BRIDGE ROAD NEAR READY

Thousand Yards of Dirt Yet to Be Moved to North Trestle Approach.

Several more days will bring the improvement work on the permanent route to the extent of about one mile at the stage of virtual completion, according to City Engineer M. L. Morris. Traffic is now able to pass from Ninth street over the Great Northern trestle and through the Milwaukee viaduct without difficulty, but approximately 1,000 yards of dirt are necessary to finish off the north trestle approach. Garbage wagons are now using the permanent route to reach the garbage dump.

BONDS TO BE SOLD IF MARKET RISES

County Commissioners Plan to Dispose of $200,000 Road Issues Already Authorized.

Provided the bond market shows improvement, during the next few months the county will permit a sale at par the board of county commissioners will take steps to dispose of the $200,000 worth of highway bonds now on its hands. Even though a sale could not be made until it will not be possible to undertake road construction and improvement work until spring, Chairman Ben C. Johnston said Monday.

Four projects make up the present county road building program and it is the commissioners' intention to use the funds realized from the bond sale in building the highway. The program includes construction of a road between Sun River and Simms, between Great Falls and Cascade, between Armstrong and Monarch and between Great Falls and Portage. This proposed work will require the expenditure of virtually all of the $200,000.

In the event that the proposed bond issue plan of financing the canyon cut-off between Craig and Hardy on the Helena road is carried out, Cascade county must improve another stretch of road to allow use of the canyon highway when it is completed. Considerable money must be spent on the road between Cascade and this end of the proposed cut-off, and the commissioners will bear this in mind when the amount of bonds to be voted, are fixed.

WAY IS PAVED FOR COMING OF VETS' BUREAU

Legion Executive Committee Plans for Work of Disability Squad Here.

Tentative plans for handling former service men with disability claims during the visit of the examining squad of the veterans' bureau in Great Falls, October 14 to 19, for the examination of former service men of Cascade, Pondera, Chouteau and Teton counties were made at the final meeting of the newly elected executive committee of the Great Falls post of the American Legion at the Park hotel Monday noon. The members of the committee present at the meeting were Walter Neubert, commander; Loy Moulumbly, Glenn Williams, R. K. West, Harry Trodick and O. I. De Schone.

Squad to Come Here From Helena.
The traveling squad from the veterans' bureau has wired Glasgow, Havre and Missoula. It will be in Butte from September 27 to October 2, in Bozeman from October 4 to 7, in Helena from October 8 to 13. It will come to Great Falls after the completion of examinations at Helena, and remain for the consideration of cases in the four counties mentioned until noon October 19. The Montana American Legion is represented on the board by C. Thomas Busha, Jr., state commander. The veterans' welfare commission is represented by W. T. Parker and Miss Nora May Howard of Helena and the Red Cross by W. T. Temple of Chicago.

In a communication to Commander Neubert from Andy Viland, contact officer of the squad, the officials of the Legion were urged to acquaint former service men with the requirements for proper consideration and completion of their cases.

Men Asked to File Claims.
"It is requested that any former service man who has previously filed a claim within the Tenth district, which comprises Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota, and who now resides in Montana and is not satisfied with his previous award, should notify the veterans' bureau at Minneapolis of his intention of meeting the squad in one of the designated centers to enable the bureau to forward the files of his case to the board," stated Mr. Viland. "If he does not reside in the examining center he will be furnished transportation."

In numerous cases, men have appeared before the squad with disabilities for which they were never treated in the service and, due to the great amount of time elapsing since their discharge, the squad has been unable to make a rating without obtaining additional information as to the time of the knowledge of the disability after discharge from the service. Any former service man filing new claims or re-opening disallowed cases of compensation must have statements from attending physicians, if any, and at least two disinterested parties who have some knowledge of the claimant's disability since his discharge.

Veterans' Mail Headquarters.
The Great Falls post of the American Legion and the Cascade chapter of the American Red Cross will assist the board in the examination of claimants in Great Falls. The headquarters will be at Veterans' hall.

NUXATED IRON
A DRIVING FORCE
BEHIND KEEN SUCCESSFUL MEN AND WOMEN

When you think of the successful men and women you know—people who are doing things worth while—you will find that they possess force, vim and energy—the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed force and energy into the whole system. Three million people use it annually as a tonic, strength and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST
See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

Your old methods of teeth cleaning

See what this new way does. Watch your teeth whiten—how clean they feel. Millions have learned in this way how much film removal means. It is something that you should know.

You must fight film
Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. It clings to the teeth unless you combat it, gets between the teeth and stays.

It forms a dingy coat which dims the luster of the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to film. And, despite the daily brushing, very few escape them. The old brushing methods do not effectively fight film.

New ways to combat it
Dental science has now found ways to combat film. The methods are embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. It has proved so effective that leading dentists everywhere are now advising it. And millions of people have already adopted it.

Pepsodent, with every use, brings five desired effects. It attacks the film in two efficient ways. It keeps teeth highly polished. It stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That to digest the starch deposits which cling to teeth and often form acid. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That to neutralize the acids which cause tooth decay.

Modern authorities regard these effects as essential aids to Nature, in view of the average diet. To bring those effects twice daily means such protection as you have not known before.

See and feel them
The results can be seen and felt. They are delightful, and this 10-day test will bring them 20 times.

Send the coupon for it. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects, and the book we send you will tell you what they mean.

Do this now in justice to yourself. Learn how much this new-day method means to you and yours.
