MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of... REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

THE ADVICE ROBERT SAVARIN GAVE MRS. RUNDLE.

Robert Savarin adjusted his eyes and slowly scrutinized the group of canvases Mrs. Rundle had painted.

Most of them were pretentious things figure groups and single portraits framed in a style which I guessed, my knew, had meant the sacrifice of necessary food and comforts to the woman who had painted them. But among them were three or four unpretentious, I framed small canvases which appealed to my love of color as the big canvases did not.

A branch of autumn leaves with the sunlight on them, a corner of a garden showing flame-colored poppies bending to the breeze, another clump of stately foxgloves I turned to Mrs. Rundle and, reluctantly, to express the admiration for the small canvases which was her due, when I heard her whisper tensely to Lillian:

"Those little things there are just pot-boilers to me, who come here. Lots of 'em like a splash of color, and so often those sell where the big and good pictures don't get a bid."

Robert Savarin's Verdict She put her hand to her mouth to still the tremble which had come to her lips as she watched Robert Savarin studying each picture closely, conscientiously. I suddenly had the sensation of being in a courtroom, waiting for the life or death verdict of a jury.

The artist finished his task, having apparently given to the tiniest canvas the same consideration he gave to the larger ones. But then he turned to Mrs. Rundle, and I saw that his grave face was unusually animated.

"You have three wonderfully good things here, Mrs. Rundle," he said with the assurance of a man who is master of his craft, an acknowledged authority upon his subject. "But, with a little comprehending smile, 'I am afraid you won't thank me for telling you what they are.'"

She could not show her pallor, her make-up was too well put on, but I knew from her eyes that the blood had left her face and was racing to her heart in the surplus that was being shed.

"What—what—do you mean?" she asked, although I think she knew as well as Lillian and I did, what his meaning was. "But, it is bewildering to change one's whole life plan in a second."

"You have no future in figure-portraits—anything where you have to portray the human form," the artist said. "These pictures," he indicated the ambitious canvases, "may be sold at a good price some day, but it will be simply because of the reputation you will gain in doing bits like these. You can stifle your ambition to be a portrait painter. You have a rare gift for color, and in the effect of life—by Jove! you can see those poppies glowing!"

He had singled out for approbation the autumn leaves, the poppies, the foxgloves, the despised flower studies Mrs. Rundle had termed "pot-boilers." I believed to see at her first great disappointment she was beginning to take courage from Robert Savarin's admiration of the small canvases.

"You think they ought to sell?" she asked with a timidity which I surmised was an entirely new emotion to her.

"If the people here have any discrimination," His eyes swept the room and back to Lillian. "Do you mind?" he asked, remembering her faithful denunciation of Mrs. Rundle for asking him to bid upon the pictures, "if I start the ball rolling for your friend by bidding? Of course, I will stop when you need have no fear, Mrs. Rundle. If no one else bids over me, I shall be proud to have one of these pictures in my own collection."

"Better see the arranger, Eleanor," Lillian interposed quietly, "and ask to have them put up soon, for we have an engagement to meet friends at Palenville and cannot stay in the city more than a few minutes of play in the opening quarter and was replaced by Johnson.

away such advice. But in Mrs. Rundle's glance, when she came back from her conference with Miss Corwin, there was a look of stubborn longing at her big canvases which made me wonder if Robert Savarin had not read it aright. And then Miss Corwin came quickly toward us, followed by an assistant and directed the taking from the wall of the canvas with the flame-colored poppies.

Shop Men Delay

alone," said Mr. Jewell. "They will fight to the last ditch, however, for their rules and for fair working conditions—matters of principle—but the executive committee of the shop crafts were very much opposed to calling a strike on the wage question alone."

Mr. Jewell referred to the recent decision of the shop crafts executive not to call a strike on the wage cut ordered July 1 by the United States railroad labor board, although the men had voted by a large majority in favor of a strike rather than accept the cut.

Mr. Jewell indicated that final instructions to the men under his might be delayed until after the Pennsylvania railroad hearing before the labor board, Oct. 20. The road has been summoned before the board, so that the board may determine whether the carrier has violated the board order directing a new election of shop crafts' representatives to negotiate working rules with the management.

Despite the insistence of union officials that the strike would paralyze the transportation system of the country, railroad officials steadfastly maintained that they would be able to operate their lines. A majority of them, in statements Saturday night and Sunday, seemed inclined to believe that a strike would not actually be put into effect.

Several took the attitude that the strike would be a strike against the government and not the railroads. Among these was William Finley, president of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad, who said:

"The railroad men, if they strike, will be going against the law of the land and the orders of the United States railroad labor board, created by act of congress.

"We have no controversy with our men. We are merely obeying the mandates of the labor board which, after proper searching and due process of law, ordered wages decreased. The men now refuse to obey the orders of the government, as issued by the labor board."

The officers of the league are the following: Jack Benson, president, W. F. Hicks, vice president, and J. J. Waller, treasurer.

The competition, according to Mr. Linnane, will be handicap, and handicaps will be based on the average scores of entrants. Scores of 165 and over will be rated at scratch and the handicaps will be based on scores ranging between 165 and 135.

LANDIS IS DEFIED BY RUTH AND TWO YANK TEAMMATES

Babe, Meusel and Piercy Pursue Barnstorming Schedule Despite Order Not to.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 16.—Disregarding orders of Judge Keneasaw M. Landis, national baseball commissioner, Babe Ruth, home run star of the New York Yankees, Sunday took part in an exhibition game against the Polish Nationals of Buffalo.

Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy, also of the Yankees, played in the game. Carl Mays and Wally Schang, who had been scheduled to take part in the contest, withdrew after Judge Landis' order. The remainder of Ruth's team were recruited from Buffalo players.

Ruth's team won, 4 to 2. Several thousand people saw the contest and cheered Ruth each time he came to bat. He made one home run.

"I think I am in the right and Judge Landis is wrong," said Ruth after the game. "He had no right to bar us from participation in a post-season exhibition game. We think that our action was for the best interests of baseball."

"I see no reason," said Ruth, "why this rule should be invoked against us when Sisler, of St. Louis, and others who shared in the world's series money, are playing exhibition games un molested by Judge Landis. I see no reason not to play, despite what Judge Landis' views may be."

Ruth and the managers of the Barnstormers said that they would go ahead and play the games they have scheduled. The home run king indicated that he was not worrying over any possible punishment for his action.

Sunday's game was originally scheduled to be played at the International league park, but the management of the Buffalo International club obeyed Judge Landis' order to bar the gates against Ruth and his companions and the game had to be played at another field.

Ruth said that the management of the New York American league club had offered him a sum equivalent to his earnings on an exhibition tour last year. "I would not take it," he said. "Why should I receive a gratuity for doing nothing? I do not want money I do not work for. I want to earn money but I will not take it to abandon a principle."

At Douglas, the pair defeated Roland Roberts and John Strachan, Pacific coast doubles champions, 6-4, 6-8 and 8-6.

ARREST IS ORDERED OF FIGHT PROMOTER

Wichita, Kansas, Oct. 16.—Opposition to holding the Mike Gibbons-Mike O'Dowd middleweight boxing contest here Tuesday night developed several days ago when Richard J. Hopkins, attorney general, in a ruling to James Conley, county attorney, held that the contest, if held, would violate the state law.

A hearing on the subject was to have been held here Monday before the Sedgwick county court.

Attorney General Hopkins directed Sheriff Doug Simmons to arrest promoters of the fight whom he said had already violated the state law regulating prize fights, in that they have promoted and advertised the fight to be held Tuesday night.

Sheriff Simmons said he would immediately secure warrants against officers of the Western Athletic association and proceed with their arrest.

Sheriff Simmons said he was advised by Hopkins that in the event the promoters made bond after their arrest on a charge of violating the state law prohibiting prize fights, they would again be arrested and the fight stopped.

The attorney general told me explicitly to stop it, and I have no other recourse but to obey," said the sheriff.
