TARRYTOWN EDITOR PLEASSED WITH GREAT FALLS AS SEEN WHEN ASSOCIATION WAS HERE

"We had a fine time," was the comment on the visit of the National Editorial association's visit to Great Falls as written in the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Daily News by Wallace Odell, editor of that sheet. "It was wonderful to see the water bubbling at the Giant Springs, over the bank and into the Missouri river."

In part, Editor Odell's article is: "Great Falls was the last stop for the National Editorial party and those in charge of the tour showed good judgment in saving the best for the last. Great Falls is a splendid city of over 20,000 with well paved streets, fine trolley system, beautiful hotels and moving picture theaters. It is modern in every way."

"We reached the city at 7 a. m. After breakfast, which was an enjoyable affair, we went outside and found cars waiting for us. We didn't wish to take the water from the river and purify it because of the amount of money which would be expended in taking the lime out of the spring water."

"After seeing this wonder, we drove around the city. It has many beautiful homes and all its residential streets are paved and well kept. It also has a splendid park system and a zoo."

Prasada Tribune Plant "We returned to the city and visited The Tribune building. This is the most valuable newspaper property in Montana. The beautiful new building was recently built and we were through it from top to bottom. After that we went up to the radio room. The Tribune being the first paper in Montana to install a wireless set. It was so arranged that President Brimbleton was to send a message to the people of Montana at 12:30, and after we had listened to this message, we went to Hotel Rainbow for luncheon."

Mr. R. M. Armour, in his address to us at breakfast, said that Great Falls boasted of a trolley system that still made money and installed improvements on a five cent fare. "In the afternoon we drove out to the big copper rolling mill. It was a wonderful and interesting sight to see the workmen take a red-hot ingot and feed it through machines until it finally was reduced to quarter inch copper wire. The ingot as it was gradually stretched out and led from machine to machine looked like a red snake as it twisted and curled. We saw them wind wire, make what might be called rope wire and all the processes were very interesting."

"After viewing this part of the plant we were taken to the refinery. It was very hot—almost as hot as the copper looked—so we didn't go in. We drove back to the city and attended a moving picture show. It was nice and cool in the theater and we stayed there until 5:30, when we drove to the Great Falls of the Missouri river."

Tails of Big Falls Dam "It is a great falls. A dam has been built, and 165,000 horse-power plant has been developed. We were told that there was 400,000 horsepower available. Not only Great Falls gets all its power from the falls, but power is furnished to towns hundreds of miles around. If Great Falls had looked ahead and developed this power itself it would have had a mint of money and its property would have been tax free."

"It is a splendid water system and it nets a profit of $75,000 a year on it. The falls are beautiful. They were first discovered by the Lewis and Clark expedition. We went down and through the power house. The gate had been opened above the dam and we had a view of two mighty falls."

"We returned to the club house, where we had dinner. There was music and a radio concert furnished by The Tribune. It was delightfully cool and we were glad to sit and rest."

"At 9:10 o'clock the Montana Power company arranged to illuminate the falls and set off a fireworks display. It was a beautiful sight. It started with a row of red colored lights burning around the whole circle at the top of the dam. I don't know how many feet wide it was, but it looked like a thousand. And then skyrockets were set off from the dam and on the hill. The display lasted for half an hour and then we started back for the city."

"It had been a wonderful day and we left Great Falls with a feeling of regret. We had had a wonderful time. "Our train pulled out at 11 o'clock and the next day was divided into short stops. The first was Havre. On the station platform were guards employed by the railroad. Havre is a railroad town."

View Crops at Glasgow "Our next stop was Glasgow. This was a short stop but we viewed a display of the crops raised in that vicinity and I also attended a farmer's auction sale for a time. I saw a good-looking horse and a cowboy saddle sold under the hammer for $25. Horse are a drug on the market. I was told. "Our next stop was Wolf Point. We were surprised when we reached the station to see at least 50 cowboys and women lined up. A roundup was being held in the town and they had come down to the train to invite us up to the park as their guests. We went and saw some broncho busting, saw men and women ride wild steers and throw them and were very well entertained for an hour. There was a big band of Indians on hand also. I noticed one old fellow sitting in an automobile and he had wrinkles in his face almost half an inch deep. I was told that he was the last surviving member of a band that was in the Custer massacre. He looked as if he could massacre someone.

"We left Wolf Point that night and all the next day we were riding across Montana and North Dakota into Minnesota. The crops in North Dakota looked fine. They have some wonderful farms there and we were told the farmers were pretty happy, for it looked like a good year after several lean years. We reached St. Paul Sunday night and at 8 o'clock the next morning we were in Chicago, and it was goodbye until 1923."

"It had been a great trip and we felt that we had seen, particularly in Yellowstone and Glacier parks, some of America's best scenery."

The Municipal band of Great Falls, 16 members participating, will fill an engagement at the fair the second day. A radio concert by KDYS, The Tribune and The Paris Dry Goods company, is on the program for the first night.
