Society Is Patron of Year's Offerings From World of Music

Society is turning its attention to musical activities this winter with the splendid opportunity of seeing and hearing so many of the world's great artists. America is young in art, but it is not backward in procuring the best in music that Europe produces, and the west as well as the east is taking advantage of the season's offerings.

Great Falls already speaks of being the leading musical city of the state of Montana, with its Musical Arts association, which branches out into all the surrounding towns, and the Tuesday Musical club, the oldest musical organization of the state, now entering its twenty-eighth year. In addition, there are in the city numerous institutions of musical training.

Realizing what a music center means not only to the younger generation but to business men and all those musically inclined, an effort has been made to develop an interest which will assist the Musical Arts association in becoming a permanent organization.

In so doing, boxes have been engaged for the winter's concerts at the Palace theater by Mrs. Herbert Strain, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stephenson, Mr. and Mrs. George Hurd, former Governor and Mrs. E. L. Norris, Miss Lorraine Laiberte, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Coffman, Miss Louise Valverde Kelley and the members of the Saturday Bridge club.

Those who have reserved seats in boxes are Mrs. B. B. Kelly, Mrs. W. K. Flowerree, Mrs. W. W. Cheley, Mrs. Willis T. Burns, Mrs. W. E. Mitchell, Mrs. A. E. Wiggin, Mrs. W. P. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Strain, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Strain, Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Wadsworth, Mrs. J. P. Cooper, Mrs. Alice Calvert Bell, Miss Olive Sorrick, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley S. Ford, Mrs. E. R. Crutcher, Mrs. J. H. Hills, Miss E. Nordquist, Miss Katherine Cole, Miss Van Holt, Mrs. C. D. Ladd, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Raban, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Freeman, Mrs. R. F. Van de Putte, Miss Genevieve Van de Putte, the Misses Gladys and Elaine Heaney.

During the coming week it is expected that there will be several other box parties formed.

Springhorn-Johnson Nuptial Numbers Among Helena Weddings

A wedding last week in Helena which is of equal interest socially here, inasmuch as the bridegroom is from Great Falls and the bride a frequent visitor here, was that performed Saturday evening, October 14, when Miss Marjorie Anne Johnson, daughter of A. V. Johnson, became the bride of Albert William Springhorn.

In an autumn setting of chrysantheums, ferns and palms, the ceremony was solemnized at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, 724 Harrison avenue. The Rev. Laird W. Snell of St. Peter's Episcopal church officiated.

At the appointed hour the bride, accompanied by her father and sister, Mrs. Pohn Lear Tracy, as matron of honor, and the latter's little daughter, Elizabeth, descended the stairs to the strains of Lebeguin's wedding march, played by Mrs. Herbert Mayer at the piano, and Miss Marguerite Weber, violin. The bride was met at the altar by Mr. Springhorn and his best man, H. E. Stewart.

The vows were spoken in the drawing room before a white altar on which were silver stands of chrysantheums and white cathedral candles. Runners of similar formed an effective background. During the ceremony "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" and "Dream of Love" were played.

The bride wore a beautifully fashioned gown of silver cloth, overlaid with net embroidered with silver, and bands of pearls. A coronet veil of rose point lace held in place her full length veil of tulle, of which the distinguishing feature was a panel of rose point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of Opheleia roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Tracy's gown was of green chiffon. Her bouquet was of La France roses. The flower girl wore a dainty

American Husbands Are of 'Tiger-Rug' Variety, Says Writer

Writing on the subject of popularity of the "tiger rug" in recent fiction, Katherine Fullerton Gerould says in Harper's Magazine:

"Since the prehistoric days of the Matriarchate the average woman has enjoyed—in imagination, at least—the legend of the dominant male. In no morbid sense, she has liked the spectacle of a creature stronger than herself. The feminine philosophy may be very pretty; but it does not happen to be true—as the heart of the average woman will bear witness. "If I might be allowed to run in a situation in vulgarly graphic form, I should do it thus. Granted that, as history and literature have always implied, there is a tiger latent in every male, the American tiger man, as you might say, takes herself to the taxidermist, and got herself beautifully mounted as a rug. The American woman then sits on the rug in front of the fire, and digs her little heels into the helpless fur. (There is really nothing else to do with a rug.)

"People always find charm in what they have not, even if they would choose, in preference, what they have. The American woman wanted her rug—and got it. But her imagination was gone inevitably to play about the image of the taxidermist. "She does not really want a cave man—not yet, at least, she is too comfortable as she is. But she likes to think that her man could be a cave man if he wanted to. What she really wants is the true tiger lying down in front of her to dig her heels into, knowing all the time that the tiger could bite if it chose. Chivalry consists in not choosing to bite—not in being unable to. "So you get various writers who cater to the undistinguished millions, pretending that the visit to the taxidermist was only a feint; that the eyes will roll and the claws unsheathed themselves, and the jaws snap. The feminine reader shivers with delight at the anticipation of her rug; she experiences that perfect condition of eating her cake and having it too."

Small Apartment Can Be Made Comfortable and Pleasant, Too

Life in a three-and-a-half is not only endurable, but very pleasant if, so to speak, one cuts her garment according to her cloth. That is, if the three-and-a-half is furnished according to its size and with the right sort of conveniences for crowded-up existence and not filled with odds and ends that cumber up the space and make one wish all the time for "more room."

Even a bed-sitting room and bath is comfortable and pleasant when properly furnished. There are drawers which turn into good beds at night. A bureau is not really necessary when you can have a console table with a mirror over it, and stow away your comb and brush and toilet articles in its shallow drawer during day-time hours. The deep drawers of a desk or a highboy will answer for hosiery and gloves just as well as drawers of a chiffonier would. Any woman neat and systematic by habit, can live very comfortably in one room and bath all winter long and have a cozy living room by day and a pleasant bedroom by night.

When you buy furniture for a three-and-a-half select articles not too large, or if you have your furniture already, store all the things that would clutter up space and that are not really needed. The gate-leg table has become an established institution now and dining rooms are a luxury few people in city apartments can afford.

though one woman has remarked that she is going to have a dining room next year if she has to store her bedroom furniture and sleep on a couch in that dining room and keep her comb and brush in the sideboard drawer. But if you use a gate-leg table for meals, have one that between meals is folded up and set aside. Moving books, lamp and odds and ends from a table in the living room every time you desire to eat soon becomes a terrible nuisance.

IN PROHIBITION TIMES

Some of us miss the added flavor of cherry in our fruit cups. Try using a little grapejuice as a substitute, putting it in when the fruit is prepared and allowing it to mellow with the mixture.

MAILING PACKAGES

When sending parcels a distance through the mail, it is wise to wrap them in several papers, each one addressed and tied, so if the outer wrappings come off the destination will still be known.
