TOWN TALK

Judge Charles E. Bond has returned from a two weeks' trip in Colorado, California and other western states. The funeral of the late Mrs. Louise Chandler Parcher was held to-day, from the residence, 123 W Fifteenth street.

Funeral services for the late Wilmot Price will be held at his home, 622 E Fourteenth street, to-morrow, at 2:30 p. m.

Miss Denia Erum died Feb. 5. The funeral will take place from the Immanuel Baptist church Thursday at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon

The subject for to-night's gospel meeting at the Bethlehem Presbyterian church will be, "Confession, Faith and Salvation." E. C. Oakley will sing "The Mistakes of My Life Have Been Many."

Detectives are in search of the young man who has been passing forged checks in the saloons of the down-town district. A peculiar feature of his operations is that all the checks are for the same amount, $14. Burglars have been operating successfully in the flat district on Fifteenth street. Monday night two grocery stores and a residence in South Minneapolis were visited. In every instance the burglars were successful, but no large hauls were made.

The many friends of Detective Thomas Gallagher presented him with a handsome gold star engraved: "Police Inspector, Minneapolis. Presented to Thomas Gallagher by His Friends." The star was inclosed in an attractive case with the names of those who contributed engraved on the lid.

The executive committee of the Vermonters' Association of Minnesota, which met in the office of Charles M. Drew, in the New York Life, building, yesterday afternoon, decided to hold the annual reunion on Feb. 25, at the Nicollet. The banquet will begin at 7 in the evening. The reception will be held from 9 till 10. The remainder of the evening will be spent in dancing.

memorial services for Queen Victoria were held last evening in St. Paul's Episcopal church, by Clan Gordon. This was the first distinctly religious memorial service in honor of the queen held in the city. The music was furnished by the surpliced choir of the church and Mrs. Maud Ulmer Jones, who sang Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." Rev. F. T. Webb and Rev. William Wilkinson made addresses.

Antoine Chouinard, the tall police officer who used to stand at Sixth and Nicollet and untangle teams and shoppers before the days of Mayor Ames, had such an attachment for that particular corner that he could not leave it. He has entered the employ of the Plymouth as a salesman in the clothing department and is proud of the fact that a change of administrations, though it changed his duties, could not drive him from his favorite corner.

Dr. E. R. Woodard and his coachman had a narrow escape from death on the railroad crossing at Fourteenth avenue S and Sixth street yesterday morning. While crossing the tracks the team suddenly balked. Dr. Woodard jumped from the rig and pulled the animals to one side just as a switching engine backed on the tracks. The carriage was overturned and the coachman thrown to the ground, escaping with slight injury.

MANY BUSINESS

A Searcity of Good Buildings-Good Field for a Large Wagon Factory.

The jobbers of Minneapolis are asking for more competition in a half-dozen lines of trade. Several firms that have grown rich in a field all their own would gladly welcome able competitors to assist them in holding the rapidly growing business of advertising mediums. Many small country towns become known throughout a large section of country because their wagons, bearing brightly painted descriptions as to their manufacturers' name and abode, are perambulating over the country roads. Mr. Dunlop hopes to see a wagon factory with a capacity of 2,500 or 3,000 wagons a year established in Minneapolis at once. He says it is a shame, too, that Minneapolis has no binder factory. He declares there is a fine opening for such a plant, properly managed, ing for such a plant, properly managed, and with sufficient capital to enable it to get well under way.

P. H. 3-4 Gibbons Alive Again

P. H. Gibbons, the former democratic politician and coal dealer of this city, founder of the society of "The Sons of Rest," 'author of "How I Met Red Dog," or "The Life and Times of Charles Astor Parker," has concluded to engage in beastly trade. Mr. Gibbons has organized and incorporated a bill posting company which will do a regular business in town and country bill posting in the state of

The Gibbons' posters will go after all the business in their line that is in sight. Nothing will escape them that offers a fair front for their brushes. Where one bill has been stuck the Gibbons company will try to stick two, in city, country and town. Their operations will cover the state like a G. O. P. campaign. Breckenridge, Fergus Falls, the lines of the Northern Pacific and kindred roads, will show like a circus print shop when the Gibbons Posting Agency gets well under way. While picked men will do the towns and villages, traveling on railroad trains, local agents with ivery teams will be utilized for country work, such as painting signs on fences, reameries, fence rails, big stones, bridges, barns, cattle sheds, hen coops, doghouses

The headquarters of the company will be in Minneapolis, and many responsible men are behind Mr. Gibbons. The Jobbers and Manufacturers' Association want just such a concern where they can get at it handily, and the Gibbons company fills the growth of the vast country to the west of us, the heavy immigration to the northwest in ecent years has been a tremendous factor i settling up the country. The vexed question of freight rates is now fixed on a basis where ve can land goods in Minneapolis at substan tially the same rates as apply for Chicago, and the Soo road stands guard against any combination of the all-rail routes. Thus we are able to compete successfully with the strongest market in the west.

Mr. Gibbons was formerly a bosom friend and follower of "Mike" Breslauer, who is cast for the part of "Red Dog" in Charles Astor Parker's memoirs. In the hot conflict of politics these two democratic war horses became estranged. Breslauer's bill-sticking store has long enjoyed a monopoly in this city, and it is said that Mr. Gibbons' determination to go into trade is grounded in a desire to break the financial back of his old associate. He has made some dire threats of what he would do with the postable objects of Minnesota, and before he gets through he expects to "paste" Breslauer good and plenty.

The increase in population in the northwest naturally leads to an increased demand for all kinds of goods in the jobbing line, and while we jobbers aim to keep pace with the demands of our customers, there is necessa-rily an excellent opening for jobbing firms with abundant capital in this territory, and particularly in Minneapolis.

Mr. Partridge adverted to the fact that this city the great manufacturing center of the west. Her great importance as a jobbing center has not been generally advertised, although the fact remains that Minneapolis is the jobbing center of the west outside of Chicago, and to-day offers greater opportunities in the jobbing field for? than any of the cities in her class. Mr. Partridge continued:

New Firms Needed.

There have been comparatively few jobbing houses established here in recent years, al-though the jobbing business has more than doubled in this city in the last ten years. But the increase has been handled by firms that were engaged in the business in its incep-New firms have not entered the field to share in the prosperity. We would gladly welcome a new dry goods house, one with sufficient capital to do a successful jobbing usiness. Large capital is required because mmense assortments are demanded by the rade nowadays. While the twin cities, in a obbing sense, make one market, we should onsider it decidedly to our advantage to have the dry goods market better represented here, even though it may be claimed that there are in Minneapolis and St. Paul a sufficient numer of jobbers in the dry goods line to handl the trade tributary to this market.

Major Heffelfinger expressed himself in a similar vein, although the boot and shoe trade has received a substantial addition n the Grimsrud Shoe company, the new

A Chance for Wagon Makers.

A. G. Dunlop, manager of the Minne-apolis Plow company, says there are at least 15,000 wagons distributed from Min-neapolis every year, but that very few of them are manufactured here. The only two large wagon factories in the state are located at Lake City and Winnona. "A good, live, wagon factory is badly needed in this city," said Mr. Dun-lop, "and it is surprising that some one has not established a plant here. We have everything at hand for the manufacture of wagons,—wood, iron, paint, etc., and the manufacturer, in his competition with eastern makers would have the advan-tage of whatever freight applies on a the firms mentioned has at least a dozen inquiries for room in the jobbing district, but as there are not three buildings available for jobbing purposes, the brokers are unable to meet the demand. They can only point to the activity in the realty market, the prospect for a building boom in the spring, or the expectation that Minneapolis capitalists will invest heavily in new, substantial business houses located well down town.

Many Good Openings.

The live business men all see that there are innumerable openings for new concerns in Minneapolis, especially in the jobbing and manufacturing lines. The proportion of increase in the number of retail stores is largely in excess of that in the wholesale houses. For example, while every dry goods house in Minneapolis has been greatly enlarged and improved in the, last few months, and another large store has been added to the list, but one wholesale house—Wyman, Partirige & Co.— remains the only whole—competition in the northwest. The firm has expanded until it is one of the foremost dry goods houses of the United States, and another addition to its magnificent building on Fourth street and First avenue N is certain to be built in a few months. But the firm is eager for competition. Said Mr. Partridge this morning:

Mr. Partridge Wants Competition.

The percentage of increase in population in the territory tributary to this market has been very great. Aside from the natural

Instead of being fearful that other firms will locate in Minneapolis, they are looking about to extend the right hand of fellowship and to offer encouragement to reliable business houses that may conclude to locate in this city.

There is abundant room in Minneapolis for more jobbing houses and the fact is becoming known throughout the country, Representative real estate firms like the J. F. # Mixed Drinks, Mixed Clients

A professional man from northern Minnesota who strayed into Minneapolis yesterday had taken too much of the juice that inebriates while visiting the legislators at St. Paul. While on his way from the interurban car to a hotel, he was gathered in by one of the new policemen, because his gait was a trifle wobbly.

He realized that he was close to trouble, and he also knew that he did not want to appear at the police court to answer to such a charge in person. He sent for an attorney, and the bond was fixed and approved. The attorney was to appear in court and plead guilty to the charge of drunkenness for the client.
