GROSS EARNINGS BILL IS PASSED

Goes Through the House A-Boosting by a Vote of 78 to 36. The Opposition, Realizing Its Defeat, Did Not Make Much of a Fight.

Which they had come to their respective conclusions. Said Mr. Sweet: "The explanations offered here to-day come chiefly from those who have opposed this increase, and who, therefore, seem to be at least upon the defensive. Why do these members take such a position, if they do not feel the pangs of a guilty conscience? I don't need to explain my vote. I vote yes."

Mr. Dobbins' Amendment. The bill as passed bears two amendments, both friendly and both minor. Mr. Dobbins of Hennepin offered a third introduced in the bill to 5 per cent, but on the roll call Mr. Berg and himself were the only lawmakers to vote for it.

Larson's Effort. The most serious effort to defeat the bill had its origin with Mr. Larson of Redwood. He advertised to the request for a rate reduction, circulated and signed two years ago immediately after the senate had defeated the gross earnings bill of that session.

Mr. Jacobson Replies. The reply by Mr. Jacobson was well considered. He favored a reduction in freight rates. Indeed, he said, the railroads were in a position to reduce their rate 10 per cent and still earn 6 per cent annually.

Armstrong Attacks System. When G. W. Armstrong of Hennepin failed to appear on the day on which the bill was taken from the table, it was announced by his friends that his attitude was altogether friendly yet he voted no.

Who Pays the Freight? "Who pays the freight?" said Mr. Jacobson in substance, in answering Mr. Armstrong. "The farming communities of this state are responsible for 90 per cent of the freight earnings of the various railroads within the state of Minnesota, and in view of that fact the state treasury is manifestly the proper place for all funds yards. Within a few days the Omaha road, Mr. Peterson of Hennepin did not speak sympathetically of his colleague in making a reference to the latter's position. Said he: "I want to say if he thinks he collected from railroad property."

Mr. Sweet Explains. A round of applause, accompanied by laughter, followed Mr. Sweet's explanation of his vote. Half-a-dozen members had consumed the time of the house in defining the various mental processes by which they had come to their respective conclusions.
