DR. CORBETT SUGGESTS GREATER CARE

IN THE USE OF RIVER WATER.

The typhoid fever record for April is pushing that for March and may possibly be tied by one or two points.

Physicians are allowed three days in which to make returns of deaths, and the record for the month will not therefore be complete until Friday night.

Last month there were regularly reported forty cases with twenty-six deaths. Following The Journal's articles calling attention to the exceptional conditions in Minneapolis, also to the fact that the physicians of this city report typhoid cases at all unless fatal, many of the medical men bestirred themselves and sent in reports of forty-two additional cases last March, making a total for the month of ninety-two.

Presumably other cases were not reported last month so many as in the previous month.

Of the twenty-five deaths this last month seventeen were not reported until after the death. In these cases no report was made of the source of infection, as required by the rules; neither it is known what kind of water was used in the families where the deaths occurred.

Physicians May Be Punished. It is possible that the health department may make an example of some of the offending physicians. It is significant that the forty-two typhoid originating in April, in which the character of the drinking water used has been definitely stated, thirty-six used city water.

In six of the other cases the water was from a well, and in one it was from a spring. It is another significant fact that not a single case was reported from the Second ward and only three cases all told from the other wards two each and the twelfth ward seven.

It is natural that the fifth ward should lead all others, owing to the fact that it contains most of the hospitals, and to the further fact that reports do not usually state where the cases originate.

Dr. Corbett's Views. According to Dr. J. F. Corbett, bacteriologist of the health department, too much reliance must not be placed upon the use of spring or boiled waters as a preventive.

For instance, probably nearly every household that uses spring water for drinking purposes continues to use city water for other purposes in the house, such as washing the lettuce, cleaning vegetables, etc., and the germs of typhoid are just as likely to be taken into the system in this way as through the drinking water.

Again, people who are careful to use spring or boiled water at home, drink city water down town, or at their work in the city.

Dr. Corbett is firmly of the opinion that the health department is largely responsible for the prevailing typhoid conditions. His last report was made April 3, and included a review of his investigations for the past year and a half.

The facts show, he says, that the number of bacteria in the West Side station water was, on the average, more than ten times as great as in the other water stations, indicating a marked contamination from sewage.

No sewage bacteria had been found in either the North or South Side water stations, but in the West Side station water, indicating a marked contamination from sewage.

THE DOG WAS LEFT ALONE

FACT POINTS TO A TRAGEDY. Mrs. Rosenfeld Regards It as Most Significant—No Traces of Man or Children.

Not the slightest trace has been found of William Rosenfeld and his four young children. It was a week ago Wednesday that Rosenfeld drove to Minneapolis from St. Paul with his youngest child, a boy called the home of his wife's sister, Mrs. Frank Bigford, 259 Ninth avenue S.

Mrs. Bigford says that Rosenfeld came to the house about 10:30 the evening he had been drinking, but did not appear intoxicated. He said that he had come for the children and that he wanted to take them up north to his sister's.

He made no threats at the time nor in any way did he seem to have any thought of the desperate deed that is now feared he committed. The children seemed glad to see their father, and went away with him, leaving the dog to protect the least.

The fact that the dog that accompanied Rosenfeld to Minneapolis was found in the buggy on the Marshall avenue bridge, leads to the theory that Rosenfeld had refused to believe that Rosenfeld had been away with his wife and children. Even now she says that she can scarcely believe that such has been the fate of the little ones. She says there was nothing about Rosenfeld that was vicious, that he was only a hard drinker, that was his only fault.

Sergeant Gerving and a posse have been searching the banks of the river from the Marshall avenue bridge for miles during the last forty-eight hours, but have not found the slightest clue to clear up the mystery.

No Trace Anywhere. The police of the Prior avenue station, St. Paul, have searched the river bank on both sides of the Marshall avenue bridge and all the ground between the bridge and the place where the buggy was found in the woods have been searched, but there is nothing to show that became the wreckage of the journey.
