BILLS OF THE WEEK

Vaudeville—at the Metropolitan.
 "Hunting for Hawkins"—at the Bijou.

The attraction at the Metropolitan for the week commencing Sunday, Sept. 15, will be a double bill of vaudeville. The stars during the first half of the week, beginning Sunday, with matinee Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, are Filson and Errol in a two-act play entitled "A Tip on the Derby"; Jesse Dandy, the famous impersonator of Hebrew character, the comedy acrobats Mazzuz and Mazzett in "The Tramp and the Brakeman," the eccentric musical comedians, Sharp and Platt, in a series of musical novelties. The Misses Duke and Harris in a refined singing and comedy sketch, J. Bernard Dyllan, "The Dangerous Man from Denver," the Gregson's up-to-date unique dancers and cake walkers, and Billy Rice, above and beyond all these, she has the soul of a woman. Mary Norman comes from Des Moines, Iowa, and is one of the few prophets who are appreciated in their own country. Special excursion trains have been arranged to run from Des Moines and other points in Iowa during Mary Norman's engagement.

Guy F. Steele's latest comedy success, "A Common Sinner," which comes to the Bijou following "Hunting for Hawkins," is produced for the first time this season, and those who have witnessed a performance say that without doubt it is one of the best and strongest farces ever staged, and worthy of the name of Hoyt. The dialogue, which is of the wittiest, is interspersed with the prettiest dances, the newest songs and the latest success in vaudeville specialties. The part of the leading character in the cast, Colonel Culpeter Sinner, which was especially written to make prominent the idiosyncrasies of that erratic but humorous whiskey drummer, is played by William De Vere.

MISS BERTIE CONWAY,
 With "Hunting for Hawkins," at the Bijou, Next Week.

"Hunting for Hawkins," beginning with a matinee to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 will be at the Bijou next week. The play is written in three acts, and is to be refreshingly original, the dialogue humorous and the situations most laughable. Dick Singleton, a young artist without fame, fortune or family of distinction, but possessing unlimited genuine American "nerve" is in love with Bertha Ashley, the only daughter of Lyman Ashley, an illustrious Wall Street broker. His love is reciprocated and were it not for an obstacle in his path, this story would have never been told. This obstacle is Bertha's mother, a proud, haughty woman who boasts of her ancient lineage and the famous old time king of minstrelsy. The bill for the last half of the week beginning with matinee Thursday will include Mary Norman, the society caricaturist and monologist, the popular sketch team, Davis and Macaulay, presenting a one-act comedy sketch, "One Christmas Eve"; Johnny Page and La Petite Adelaide, late of "The Rogers Brothers in Central Park." In their dancing specialties; the Lookas, America's bag punching exponent; the great comedy trio, Monroe, Mack and Lawrence; Gilbert Brown, the eccentric dancing comedian; the Five Juggling Normans in a club-swinging act; and Carroll Johnson, the famous minstrel star.

whose greatest ambition is for her daughter to wed a man of equally noble birth. Knowing Mrs. Ashley to be an ardent admirer of the famous Boston poet, C. Fussey Sandcroft, and an enthusiastic member of a literature club, named in his honor, Dick decides to tell her that he is a nephew of that distinguished person. He is aware that Sandcroft lives in seclusion and has not left Boston for many years, but he has discovered that he is safely married to Bertha. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley accompanied by Bertha and several members of the Sandcroft club call at Dick's studio to inspect a portrait of Sandcroft, which Dick and Dick takes advantage of the opportunity to tell them of his relationship to the famous poet. But the unexpected happens. Mr. Ashley had just read in the morning paper that Mr. Sandcroft would arrive in New York that day. So it was necessary for Dick to have some one to impersonate Sandcroft to prevent the possibility of his deception being discovered. Just then his old college chum, Mathews Hawkins comes in, and before he has time to say a word Dick grasps his hand, saying "My dear uncle, I am delighted to see you again."

And before the completely dumfounded Hawkins realizes what has happened, Dick has introduced him to the guests as "my uncle, Mr. Sandcroft." Hawkins is compelled to accept pressing invitations to dine with nearly all the members of the club, and after they have departed, Dick explains his plan and induces Hawkins to assist him by continuing the deception, which he, not thinking of the consequences to himself, consents to do. But all this necessitates Hawkins' absence from home, and through a series of unfortunate circumstances, he is unable to inform his wife of his whereabouts, lest the deception might be discovered before Dick has gained his point. So Mrs. Hawkins, becoming alarmed on account of her husband's long stay, institutes a vigorous search for him, in which she interests a number of others, including Mr. and Mrs. Ashley and several of the Sandcroft club, whom she meets when she calls at Dick's studio. Detectives are put on his track and the fun is irresistible and incessant while everybody is "Hunting for Hawkins."

"A Common Sinner," which comes to the Bijou following "Hunting for Hawkins," is produced for the first time this season, and those who have witnessed a performance say that without doubt it is one of the best and strongest farces ever staged, and worthy of the name of Hoyt. The dialogue, which is of the wittiest, is interspersed with the prettiest dances, the newest songs and the latest success in vaudeville specialties. The attraction at the Metropolitan for the first half of the week commencing Sunday, Sept. 22, will be Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brune, supported by an excellent company, in a series of SARDOU plays. A magnificent staged production of "Cleopatra" will be the bill for the Sunday night opening, with "Theodora" Monday and Wednesday matinee. Mrs. Brune's portrayal of the title role in "Theodora" in this city last season aroused considerable interest.

Footlight Flashes.
 This has been state fair week in Milwaukee and "The Burgomaster" has been making new records for receipts at the Davidson theater.

Clyde Fitch's beautiful play, "Barbara Fritchie," with its scenes of pathos, comedy and sentiment, will be seen at the Bijou in the not far distant future.

Herbert Kealey and Effie Shannon opened their season at the Detroit opera-house Monday night with the first of their new plays, "Her Lord and Master."

"Across the Pacific," Charles E. Blaney's military play with its wealth of incidental scenery scheduled to appear at the Bijou soon. The piece deals with life in the Philippines.

The highly successful pastoral comedy drama, "The Night Before Christmas," came to the Bijou shortly, fresh from repeated artistic and financial triumphs during its present tour.

The Chicago papers are effusive in their praise of Otto Skinner's revival of Boker's tragedy of "Francesca da Rimini," which will be seen at the Metropolitan for the week commencing Sept. 23.

This season Stuart Robson, who opens in this city on Thursday, Sept. 25, an engagement of three nights and Saturday matinee, in "The Henrietta," has surrounded himself with a company of peculiar excellence.

One of the biggest comic opera organizations ever sent on the road, the Klaw and Erlanger Opera company headed by Jerome Sykes, in "Fool's Quill," will be one of the early season attractions at the Metropolitan.

Among the attractions to be seen at the Bijou soon is included that duo of clever fun makers, Ward & Vokes; Black Pat, the head of a large company of entertainers; "Sis Hopkins," one of the successes of last season and the popular romantic actor, Mr. Robert B. Mantell.

Alan Dale, the famous critic of the New York Journal, says that William Collier is the foremost American comedian, and Collier is to make an extensive tour of the country this season and will be seen in "On the Quiet," at the Metropolitan in this city for the week beginning Oct. 6.

SLUCE BOXES ROBBED
 About $9,000 Secured by Progressive Thieves Near Dawson.

Special to The Journal.
 Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 14.—A number of big robberies have been carried on by thieves on the gold producing creeks back of Dawson this month. They have committed seven big thefts, taking in aggregate more than $9,000. Of this amount all save $500 was in gold dust taken from the sluice boxes of big mines. The police have been utterly unable, so far, to accomplish a single deduction. Nearly all the sluice box robberies have been committed at midnight, while the night crews of miners have been at their midnight meals.

The ordinary custom of the camp has been followed in leaving the sluice boxes unguarded while the night shifts eat, but it appears that the community is becoming progressively to the point where inducements for theft to pass unnoticed.

Late Alaskan and Klondike arrivals report that navigation on the Yukon, especially the lower river, is drawing to a close. The Queen made Mutt glacier on this voyage; that is, approached as near as possible to the glacier, and the steamer was literally filled with icebergs and float ice, and the Queen got only to within six miles. The indications are that no vessel will be able to attain a closer view of Mutt this season.

OSCAR II AT ST. LOUIS

His Grandfather Was Last Governor of Louisiana.

MAY BE OFFICIALLY INVITED
 Sioux Falls Singers Preparing for the N. W. S. S. A. Sangerfest

Ibsen's Health Is Good.
 While strolling through Scandinavia, William Curtis learned that Oscar II, Bernadotte was the last French governor of the territory of Louisiana, which in those days included that part of Minnesota west of the Mississippi river. Bernadotte the first was appointed governor of the colony by Napoleon and was preparing to sail for New Orleans, when Napoleon concluded the sale of the territory to the United States.

This fact suggests to Mr. Curtis that it would be eminently proper for the directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition to hold the N. W. S. S. A. to invite the grandson of the last governor, King Oscar II. of Sweden and Norway, to attend as guest of honor. I cannot say that the king would accept. He is an old man and his health is delicate, but the plan has already been intimated to him, and he is mightily pleased at the possibility of receiving such a complimentary invitation from the United States. If he cannot go himself, he will certainly send one of his sons to represent him, which would be almost as interesting and important. The invitation, of course, would have to come through the regular diplomatic channel. They are very particular over here about such formalities, although at the same time the king is one of the most democratic of sovereigns. He rides in the street cars; he goes about the streets of Stockholm looking into the shop windows, walks in the park frequently with one of his family chums and makes a joke and a hearty laugh as much as any man living. He is particularly fond of American humor, and when he gets Mr. Thomas, the United States minister, off alone he invariably inquires for the latest American story.

If the king himself cannot go to St. Louis (and there is no reason why he should not go) his health will permit for he is a great traveler, he might send his son, Prince Karl, the soldier of the family, a hearty and gallant young fellow, who belongs to the cavalry, but is now a member of the general staff at the war office, and performs his duties regularly like any other member. He stands 6 feet 6 inches in his stockings, is slender and as athletic as an Indian, a horseman, a famous marksman, and very popular with all classes.

His wife is the Princess Ingeborg, a daughter of the crown prince of Denmark. She is a beautiful woman, and has been considered one of the handsomest women in Europe. She is a great favorite here, and is exceedingly democratic in her opinions. She is a great admirer of the czar of Russia, of the King of England, of the King of Greece, a cousin of the Emperor of Germany, and having other very reputable relatives, she commands her high society in St. Louis.

THE NEXT SANGERFEST
 Sioux Falls Singers Engaged in Preliminary Work.
 Wollert Hildahl, president of the Northwestern Scandinavian Singers association and other members of the association in Sioux Falls, are laying the foundation for the sangerfest to be held there next summer. The association has been organized for some time, and can be relied upon to do their work well. It is no simple matter to arrange for the entertainment of several hundred singers and other guests, but the Minneapoliensers are popular in their home town and will have all the people with them.

Secretary Th. Hamann has had printed the songs for the masses, chorals and sangerfest, and is distributing them among the various societies. Such organizations next summer. There is not a more loyal work for the sangerfest to be held there than to have the songs for the sangerfest printed and distributed among the various societies. Such organizations next summer. There is not a more loyal work for the sangerfest to be held there than to have the songs for the sangerfest printed and distributed among the various societies.

IBSEN IS OBSTINATE
 Refuses to Leave Norway on Advice of Physician.
 Although Henrik Ibsen has recovered from his serious illness of last winter, and there are no traces of the paralysis left, his physician is almost in constant attendance, and is distributing them among the various societies. Such organizations next summer. There is not a more loyal work for the sangerfest to be held there than to have the songs for the sangerfest printed and distributed among the various societies.

Ibsen positively refuses to leave Christiania in spite of the advice of his physician, and the request of his family. He will not even listen to the suggestion that he go to Munich, and says that because he is not strong he will for that reason remain in the north, although the physician has advised him to go to a warmer climate. He is very obstinate, and after a cup of coffee makes a very careful toilet, usually wearing a black coat and a white linen tie. He then answers his letters, and afterward goes to his balcony and reads the newspapers and receives the visits of an old friend, who regularly comes to see him.

Sharp at 12 he starts on a drive to a beautiful spot in the park of his city. He drives in his carriage, and walks for a while, returning home in the carriage to eat a very simple midday meal. In the afternoon he rests for a while and then begins again his reading of the newspapers that come to him from all over the world.

Every afternoon, in accordance with an old custom, Sigurd Ibsen with his wife and children, call to see the father of the family. He delights especially in the society of the children. From 5 to 8 he sits again on the balcony, and at 10 at night he is in bed.

Books for the Library.
 Halward Askeland, librarian at the South-side branch of the public library improved the opportunity while absent in Europe to make some purchases for the library board. He secured about 70 volumes embracing the whole range of Scandinavian literature.

Gift to Church and Charity.
 Mr. and Mrs. John Evenson, who are among the oldest members of the Trinity Norwegian Lutheran church have presented the North-western Free church with four lots in South Minneapolis, worth in the aggregate about $1,200. They will be sold as soon as possible, the proceeds to be divided equally between the Deaconess institute, the Sarsal Mission in India, and the Home and Foreign Mission work of the Free Church.

Expelling Finnish Senators.
 The kind of government the oppressed Finns are getting is shown by the imperial order expelling Senators Homen, Heikel, Nummelin and Ramsey for opposing the czar's commands. Their offense, consisted of having become instant, the national army regulations proposed by Russia.

The Pressmen.
 The annual meeting of the Northwestern-Danish Press Association will be held in this
