GOLF A GRIEVANCE SHY ON TEACHERS

Servant Girls Protest Against Dinner at All Hours.

DELAYS CHARGED UP TO GOLF

Chicago Mails Pronounce the Game a Great Evil—Conciliators With "Nights Off."

Special to The Journal.
Chicago, Sept. 27.—The Working Women's Association has no use for golf, and it doesn't care who knows it. Golf, in the abstract, may be all right, but when the business man leaves his office and hurries to the golf links, returning home at 8 or 9 o'clock for dinner, it rankles in the bosom of the hired girl.

A petition is being gotten up, requesting golf players to occupy their morning hours on the links, when the game will not interfere with the "night off" of the girls. The members discussed their grievances to-night at their regular meeting, and arrived at the unanimous conclusion that golf was at the present time the greatest evil they had to contend with. A preamble to the new constitution as partly finished and discussed, but Ellen Lindstrom, the organizer, was ill and had to leave the meeting early, which prevented its completion and adoption. Before the meeting Miss Lindstrom discussed the dreams and aspirations of the servant girl and the subject of golf.

"When these business men leave the office," she said, "they hurry to the golf links to 'tee off.' They think nothing of their 'night off' and return at 9 o'clock for dinner. That spoils our evening and not only that, but they come marching home with mud and clay on their shoes and walk all over the floors, giving us additional work. Sometimes they have 'burs' from their shoes, which makes the rooms look like woodsheds. Clever 'brassies' and 'lofters,' oh, I am so sick of the sight of them that I think I should like to use a 'niblick' on some of their heads. As soon as I get the girls well organized, I will turn my attention to organizing the 'caddies' and get them to strike against working late in the afternoon. I doubt if that would stop the game, though, as they suppose they would want to take the strikers' places and carry their 'drives' and 'putters.' If they would come home to dinner at a Christian-like hour so that we could get a chance to get out, I would not mind if they played golf all night, but they certainly are trying our patience now."

SHELDON'S PLAN FAILED

Topeka Servant Girls' Club Disbanded From Indifference.
New York Sun Special Service.
Topeka, Kan., Sept. 27.—The plan of the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon to organize the servant girls of Topeka, his home town, along the lines laid out in his latest novel, "Born to Serve," has failed, and the club which was formed six weeks ago with a membership of forty disbanded last night at a meeting at which the attendance consisted only of the officers. Mrs. Lydia M. Barry, who had charge of the work under Mr. Sheldon's direction, says in a signed statement that the scheme failed because the girls for whose benefit it was organized lacked interest in the movement from the start.

THE NEW DIRECTOR HERE

Charles A. Graninger Will Assume Charge of the Apollo Chorus.
Charles A. Graninger, the new director of the Apollo Club, arrived yesterday from Cincinnati. Mr. Graninger has been a resident of Cincinnati for many years. For nine years he has been director of the Orpheus Club of that city. He has been organist of the Second Presbyterian church of Cincinnati for eleven years. For seventeen years he was teacher of piano in the College of Music, and in '96 formed his own school, the Auditorium School of Music, which he has at the present time. Mr. Graninger is convinced that the possibilities of Minneapolis in a musical way are great.

Mr. Graninger says that the Apollo club will give three concerts during the season. The first will take place early in December and the soloist will be the famous baritone, Sig. Giuseppe Campanari. The other soloists and the club selections will be announced as soon as Mr. Graninger has had time to confer with the directory of the club.

SCENES AT CANTON

Bishop Joyce Speaks of the McKinley Funeral.

OFFERED THE CLOSING PRAYER

How the Little Children and the Poor People Honored the Friend They Loved.

"The little children of Canton laid flowers on the bier of President McKinley, one of the gentlest, purest, greatest and best presidents of the United States," said Bishop L. W. Joyce, who returned from the east yesterday. Bishop Joyce offered the closing prayer at the dead president's funeral and read the service of committal at the cemetery which marked the last of earth of the nation's chief.

"The scenes in the home city of the president," continued the bishop, "were the most memorable I have ever witnessed, and no language can give an adequate idea of them. The crowds were tremendous, and every one acted as if he had been called upon to mourn the death of a dear friend, and such William McKinley was to the people of Canton. The poor whom he had often helped were among the most grief-stricken of that vast concourse.

"Not one person in a thousand was able to obtain admission to the church where Dr. C. E. Manchester, the president's pastor, pronounced his grand eulogy.

"During the forenoon of Thursday, a stranger standing on the street remarked with the love that animated all hearts. Quicker than a flash a refined woman, a woman of prominence and social distinction, struck the offender squarely in the face with her clenched fist. A crowd soon gathered and the officers managed to hurry the man away. The woman's action showed the state of mind of all the people.

Bishop Joyce left in the afternoon for Orchard, Minn., to attend the Minnesota conference which is in session at that place presided over by Bishop Grinstead. Next Monday he will attend the Northwestern Iowa conference at Algona, Iowa, from there he will go to Ripon, Wis., to attend the Wisconsin conference.

UNCLE SAM'S DETECTIVES

L. M. KIRCHER CRITICIZES THEM

He Was Formerly in the Secret Service and Says He Knows Things.

Lawrence M. Kircher, who was identified with the government's secret service twenty years ago, but who resigned his place to assist contractors in getting government work, is at the Hotel Nicollet today.

Kircher has some radical opinions regarding the secret service branch of the national government, and he is not afraid to express them. He makes bold to declare that the entire department is hopelessly inadequate. Favoritism obtains in the department as nowhere else in the federal service, and to be a "government detective" a man must stand in very close to the shadows. Said Mr. Kircher: "The department has been represented as one of great importance. Well, it has about thirty or thirty-five men to cover the entire United States. The appropriation is in the neighborhood of $70,000. The 'detectives' are mostly politicians who have been valuable to Congressmen this or Senator that. The records of some of the secret service men would not look well in print. As a matter of fact these men do nothing but look up counterfeiters in different parts of the country. Their work is easy, for they are permitted to spend money freely, and, of course, it isn't hard to catch criminals when you have unlimited money to spend.

I notice that former Chief William P. Hazen has pointed out, they might as well have been in New York city. They obligingly stopped to one side when the assassin came forward, extending a bandaged hand, a thing no injured man would do. But the detectives were only there to draw their salaries. They should have stood by the president's side and never lost their ground. It would not have required much foresight to have picked out a decent man, with draped velvet facing, and hustled him out of the building.

The entire system is ridiculously inadequate. I say this as a man who knows what he is talking about. I left the service of my own accord twenty years ago, so I have no quarrel with the department. But I happen to know some of the men who are employed in the service and their presence there is a disgrace to it.

If it is wise to have watchful, alert men, ready to send over the country on important secret missions for the government, it would be just as well for congress to pay some attention to the personal character of such men. They are often trusted with information which a dishonest man might find readily negotiable.

I think congress should greatly enlarge the department and equip it with men of brains rather than pull.

Congressman Loren Fletcher was asked what he thought of Mr. Kircher's views and he said: "I think it is a very close corporation," but he knew little of its personnel or management aside from the conspicuous fact that it was a hard body to understand. The congressman expects to see an overhauling of the department before long.

HE HELPS THEM.

Philadelphia Press.
"He's one of those idiotic funny men who are continually making puns, isn't he?"
"Yes, that's his style."
"How is it he's so popular with the ladies, then, I wonder?"
"He is only popular with the ladies who have pretty teeth."

POESY.

"Nobody understands me!" cried the poet, despairingly. "I shall starve."
"For it was against the 'aw to beg, and be was too proud to conduct a series of author's readings."

MPPLS DRY GOODS CO. OPENING

Artistic Softening Effects and Stunning Confections Shown in Alluring Profusion.

For softening effects and artistic arrangement the autumn millinery, shown at the opening of the Minneapolis Dry Goods company, cannot be surpassed. The models come in all the newest shades and styles, and each has an air of individuality that is extremely chic.

There are all sorts of pretty things, in the way of trimmings, to delight the feminine heart. Birds and wings that perk up saucily from drapings; soft, fluffy braids in polka dot effects, and Amazon plumes, that are just the thing to frame pretty faces becomingly; rarely beautiful Arabian laces, as well as Irish point lace are used largely for appliqueing. Velvet foliage in roses is modish as are also gun metal ornaments of various shapes—shields, bars, slides, buckles, especially—and tiny cut steel and rhinestone buckles. One of the novelties in this line is the cabochon around metal or velvet ornament, sometimes hand-painted.

Shaggy goods are very much in favor and among them mohair felts, Angora braids, and beavers, which, after a lapse of fifteen years, have again come to the front on a wave of popularity. These materials come in the new greens, castors, navys, black, and white, although white may not be worn so extensively after the coming of cold weather.

A very pretty material for making entire hats, as well as for trimming, is plaited taffeta. One smart turban of this description has two plaited taffeta rosettes in front, with cabochons as centers, and two glossy, black wings sweeping back over the crown.

A very effective affair is a large black velvet picture hat, with draped velvet facing. The top of the brim is appliqued with Irish point lace, while the crown is encircled with pink roses and pale blue ribbon. The boards in New York. It is white velvet, appliqued in black lace, with a high roll at the side. A large black plume rolls softly over the brim. An odd, little hat is made of plateaux of velvet and tulle, caught in front and at one side with cabochons, and having a knot of velvet ribbon underneath. A pronounced fall style is the massing of trimming under the brim, and a soft pale blue felt, faced with
