

THEY WILL SETTLE

Bond Repudiation Not Contemplated at West Superior.

THERE IS A CHANCE FOR IT

Complicated Situation Precipitated by a Late Decision in the Federal Court.

Special to The Journal.

West Superior, Wis., Sept. 27.—More of the text of the decision in the bond suit against the city has been received here and it looks as though a complicated affair would result.

There is also a belief that the entire indebtedness of the city will be void as a result of this decision.

QUAIL ALMOST WRECKED

BULL'S TORPEDO BOAT DESTROYER

Collision Imminent With Royal Yacht Ophir—Duke and Duchess on the Deck.

New York, Sept. 27.—An official of the royal yacht Ophir is authority for the statement that the torpedo boat destroyer Quail was "within an arm's length" of the Ophir in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The Quail was ordered alongside the Ophir and took off dispatches from the duke, which were to be cabled or mailed to the King of England.

Those on board the Ophir thought it was all up with the little Quail. So close was she to the Ophir that she fouled a rope and her stern was drawn under the bows of the Ophir.

BIG STONE'S COURTHOUSE

Contract Awarded to Stillwater Builder at $30,000.

Special to The Journal.

Ortonville, Minn., Sept. 27.—The county commissioners opened bids for the new courthouse to-day and awarded the contract to Mr. Olson of Stillwater, Minn., for $30,000.

FOUR ROUTES OUT OF OWATONNA.

Special to The Journal.

Owatonna, Minn., Sept. 27.—Gilbert Gutterston, government agent in charge of the free delivery routes, is in the city and will establish four rural routes.

"COUPE!"

"Gosh, 'Mandy, them city keb drivers air a mighty fresh lot," remarked Uncle Eben.

ECZEMA'S ITCH IS TORTURE.

ECZEMA is caused by an acid humor in the blood coming in contact with the skin and producing great redness and inflammation.

BAD FORM OF TETTER.

"For three years I had Tetters on my hands, which caused them to swell to such a degree that they were almost unusable."

She Lived Over 100 Years

Special to The Journal. Charles City, Iowa, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Paula Ham, living for years with her daughter, Mrs. George Goodard, a few miles east of Charles City, is dead.

Held Up but Didn't Have a Cent

Special to The Journal. Mayville, N. D., Sept. 27.—William Scollard, a citizen, was held up by a trio of throbbers and his valuables demanded at the point of a revolver.

No Erie Canal Enlargement Just Now

New York, Sept. 27.—Senator W. F. Higgins, chairman of the state senate finance committee, in response to a question as to whether legislation for the enlargement of the canal might be looked for this session, he said:

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Married in a Den of Lions

Special to The Journal. Spokane, Wash., Sept. 27.—Six thousand people saw O. H. Barber and Miss Helen Kipler married at the Elks' carnival grounds.

The wedding came off without a hitch. The lion Prince and his two consorts, Babe and Juliet, had given indications throughout the evening of being very cross.

Rosewater in Another Fight

Special to The Journal. Omaha, Neb., Sept. 27.—A lively row has been stirred up in Omaha over a speech delivered by Edward Rosewater, editor of the Bee, before a ward club.

"We had to pay off the officers last year. Can you imagine anything more disgraceful? The national committee had to send several thousand dollars to Omaha to please men who held office under William McKinley to support William McKinley."

HENDERSON'S ALMA MATER

FINE NEW LIBRARY IS STARTED

Cornerstone Laying and Address by the Speaker—Great Day for Fayette, Iowa.

Special to The Journal. Fayette, Iowa, Sept. 27.—The cornerstone of the David P. Henderson library at the Upper Iowa university was laid yesterday afternoon with many of the alumni and friends of the college present.

At 1 o'clock S. B. Zigler, president of the board of trustees of the college, opened the exercises on the site of the library building.

RAID ON THE LANDLORDS

SHARP WORK BY SLEEK STRANGER

Posed as a Student and Insisted on Paying in Advance—Madison's Experience.

Special to The Journal. Madison, Wis., Sept. 27.—A smooth stranger, evidently the one who worked Milwaukee successfully a day or two ago, did a profitable business with the "check game" among the Madison boarding houses yesterday.

"I make it a rule to pay cash in advance," he would remark, and then tender a check, always for $5 or $10 more than the amount he would have to pay for a month's rent.

THE VALUE OF TEETH

Sound Molars a Great Safeguard to General Health.

Paris Messenger.

Do you realize adequately the importance of looking carefully after your teeth? There is great wisdom in the following remarks of Sir J. Critchton-Brown, addressed recently to the dentists of Great Britain.

LONG REIGN OF PEACE

Enthusiastic French Soldiers Back From China Predict This.

Marseilles, Sept. 27.—There have been great rejoicings here this week over the return of General Voyron and the French general staff which took place in the province of China.

THREE YEARS FOR THEM!

Special to The Journal. Chippewa Falls, Wis., Sept. 27.—Jesse E. Surtus pleaded guilty to-day to being an accomplice of William Goldberg in breaking into a logging camp and stealing $50, and was sentenced to three years in state's prison.

PASSED.

New York World. Professor—if a person in good health, but who imagined himself sick, should send for what would you do?

AN EXPLANATION.

Aunt Hetty—Jane Smith advertises that he's selling goods below cost.

FIRST QUESTION.

"Well, what alls you?" demanded the doctor, as he entered his patient's room.

ARTHEMETHICAL.

All unconscious of the danger, the little Belgian hare was sporting in the grass.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

GALLANT NEWSPAPER MAN

How a Reporter Outwitted the Captain of a German Steamer.

Allen Sangree, in Everybody's Magazine. To make use of his opportunities frequently requires of the reporter a courage that might be construed as melodramatic.

NO DANGER TO AMERICA'S DEMOCRACY FROM WITHOUT.

Principle Krapotkin's, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

Kansas City Star. Prince Krapotkin, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

NO DANGER TO AMERICA'S DEMOCRACY FROM WITHOUT.

Principle Krapotkin's, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

Kansas City Star. Prince Krapotkin, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

NO DANGER TO AMERICA'S DEMOCRACY FROM WITHOUT.

Principle Krapotkin's, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

Kansas City Star. Prince Krapotkin, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

NO DANGER TO AMERICA'S DEMOCRACY FROM WITHOUT.

Principle Krapotkin's, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

Kansas City Star. Prince Krapotkin, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

NO DANGER TO AMERICA'S DEMOCRACY FROM WITHOUT.

Principle Krapotkin's, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

CONFIDENCE IN OUR FUTURE

He Thinks the "Militarism" Menace Is Not Real-City Dangers.

Kansas City Star. Prince Krapotkin, the Russian exile and social reformer, recently gave a series of addresses on sociological topics in Chicago.

SAW LINCOLN SHOT

Story of an Eye-Witness of Booth's Crime.

LEADER OF THE ORCHESTRA

William Withers Still Living in the Village of Wakefield in New York.

New York Sun.

In the village of Wakefield there is an old man to whom the shooting of President Lincoln comes home with special force.

"In a life of sixty-five years, almost fifty of which have been spent as an orchestra leader, I have seen many strange things, and the shooting of President Lincoln was one of the strangest."

"Laura Keane's company was at Ford's theater and the particular night—it was Good Friday—the play was the 'American Cousin,' with Laura Keane as the star."

"The entrance of the presidential party, which was entirely unexpected, very effectively put an end to our plan. The orchestra leader, who frequently noted that the chief executive ignored it and failed to acknowledge that he understood its import."

"Just how many people were worked by the sharper is unknown, and probably will not be, as many prefer to lose the money rather than make their gullibility known."

"This was near the conclusion of the first act. Just as the curtain was about to be rung down, J. B. Wright, the orchestra leader, who had been sitting in the box, suddenly moved away, and before he had time to return to the box the whistle blew and he had to make the changes for the daily scene."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

"I was dragged to my feet by a detective whose name I no longer remember, and led to the front of the stage. There was great confusion, and the stage was crowded with people who shouted for vengeance."

LIST OF NOTABLE BARGAINS IT WILL PAY YOU TO GIVE A FEW MINUTES OF YOUR TIME TO READ.

Gloves

New fall gloves in all the latest French productions. All the bargains we offer for Saturday.

Ladies' 3-clasp genuine French Kid Gloves in Overseas and P. K. best makes, including Perrier's and the celebrated "Rouellon," latest embroidered backs, all new fall shades; do not pay $2.00 per pair for them elsewhere, we fit and warrant them. Saturday, $1.50 per pair, only.

Extra Special—Do not miss these bargains Saturday. Ladies' 2-clasp Kid Gloves, new embroidered backs, all sizes, in black, brown, gray and mode; we won't mention their values, come and see. The price for Saturday only will be, per pair, only 69c.

Handkerchiefs.

Saturday will be bargain day at our Handkerchief Department. Don't miss the good things.

Ladies' pure Irish linen hemstitched Handkerchiefs, fine, sheer ones, worth 10c each. 5c Saturday bargain, each, only.

Ladies' pure Irish linen hemstitched Handkerchiefs, with handsome hand embroidered initials and wreaths, cheap at 12c. 10c Saturday bargain, each, only.

Ladies' pure Irish linen hemstitched Handkerchiefs, with elaborate hand embroidered initials, cheap at 18c each. Saturday 12c bargain, each, only.

Ladies' pure Irish linen hemstitched Handkerchiefs, with handsome embroidery all around, full laundered, ready for use, cheap at 20c each. Saturday bargain, each 12c only.

Ribbons Fancy Ribbons in new stripes, plaids and novelty effects; also wide plain taffetas in all colors, goods worth up to 50c per yard. Special for Saturday, 25c per yard, only.

Laces Laces Saturday. Wonderful bargains that will disappear in a hurry. So come early and get first pick. Black Escorial Laces, black Maltese Laces, black Real Thread Laces, black Hand Run Spanish Laces, black Spangled Laces, black Chantilly Laces, black Novelty Galoon Laces; they run 2 inches wide up to 15 inch flouncings; they sold up to $3.50 per yard. Just think of it. They go 50c Saturday all in one lot, at, yard.

Linen Dept. Ready-made sheets, 3-in. top torn, not cut; size 81x90, at 55c each.

Also pillow cases to match at, each, 11c. Full size Satin Quilts, $2.50 quality at, each, Saturday only. $2.10

Children's Hose Special for Saturday. The "Fay" stocking in cotton, all sizes, worth up to 45c; 50c each, 17c, or 3 pairs for 50c.

Druggist Sundries Soap; 4711 white Glycerine, per cake 10c. (Quantity limited.)

Notions Dress Shields—Feather weight Nainsook covered, size 3, 4, 5. Special, per pair 10c.

MAIL ORDERS FILLED. 251, 253, 255 NICOLLET AVENUE

PROBATION

original of that famous character passed the greater part of his life in income from the Devil Ritchie, for such was the name, was born in one of a row of cottages known as "Cheat-the-beggars" (from its having the appearance, from the road, of being a big house where largesse might be expected), at Altarstone, in the Parish of Stobbs, Peebleshire, N. B.

He was a misshapen morsel of humanity, under three feet high, and having no feet, only short stumps, slightly turned up at the tips, which were always swathed in puttee-like bandages, in lieu of shoes and stockings. He lived at Altarstone until he was grown up, never having any regular occupation, although in full possession of his mental faculties.

Subsequently he moved to the neighboring parish of Manor, where he himself built the little cottage shown in the photograph, the door to which was made exactly one yard high.

Here he lived the rest of his comparatively short life, deriving his income from the visitors who came to see him. He was not much over 30 when he died, and people still come from distances to see his cottage (the walls and roof of which were raised after his death to enable people of ordinary size, to inspect the interior) and the tombstone to his memory in Manor churchyard.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

THE BLACK DWARF

Tiny Cottage Where Lived the Original of the Character.

Perhaps the readers of Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Black Dwarf," may be interested in the accompanying photograph of the tiny cottage in which the original of that famous character passed the greater part of his life in income from the Devil Ritchie, for such was the name, was born in one of a row of cottages known as "Cheat-the-beggars" (from its having the appearance, from the road, of being a big house where largesse might be expected), at Altarstone, in the Parish of Stobbs, Peebleshire, N. B.

He was a misshapen morsel of humanity, under three feet high, and having no feet, only short stumps, slightly turned up at the tips, which were always swathed in puttee-like bandages, in lieu of shoes and stockings. He lived at Altarstone until he was grown up, never having any regular occupation, although in full possession of his mental faculties.

Subsequently he moved to the neighboring parish of Manor, where he himself built the little cottage shown in the photograph, the door to which was made exactly one yard high.

Here he lived the rest of his comparatively short life, deriving his income from the visitors who came to see him. He was not much over 30 when he died, and people still come from distances to see his cottage (the walls and roof of which were raised after his death to enable people of ordinary size, to inspect the interior) and the tombstone to his memory in Manor churchyard.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

It is only through consolidations of government, says the prince, "loss of local autonomy, such as is witnessed in the formation of Greater New York, or a vast concentration of capital, that the people might lose their spirit and then the danger of militarism would become real. Otherwise, the people will rebel against the usurpation of power very soon."

Prince Krapotkin is not alarmed by the menace which he points out. He believes the spirit of democracy in the United States will triumph over its enemies and will survive the tendency to lose its power through neglect.

It is evident that the Russian has been using his opportunities for observation in America to advantage. His conclusions recall James Bryce's remark in the American Commonwealth, that the abundant strength and vitality of the American people gave him confidence in their future in spite of the dangers to which he felt they were exposed.

He views the situation as an outsider and his conclusion is that there is no danger to democracy from without.

</