

A NEW DEPARTURE

A New, Effectual and Convenient Cure for Catarrh.

Of catarrh remedies there is no end, but of catarrh cures there has always been a great scarcity. There are many remedies to relieve, but very few that really cure.

The old practice of snuffing salt water through the nose would often relieve and Washes, douches, powders and inhalers in common use are very little, if any, better than the old fashioned salt water douches.

The use of inhalers and the application of salves, washes and powders to the nose and throat to cure catarrh is no more reasonable than to rub the back to cure kidney disease. Catarrh is just as much a blood disease as kidney trouble or rheumatism and it cannot be cured by local treatment any more than they can be.

To cure catarrh, whether in the head, throat or stomach, an internal antiseptic treatment is necessary to drive the catarrhal poison out of the blood and system, and the new catarrh cure is designed on this plan and the remarkable success of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets is because being used internally it drives out catarrhal infection through action upon stomach, liver and bowels.

William Zimmerman of St. Joseph relates an experience with catarrh which is of value to millions of catarrh sufferers everywhere. He says: "I neglected a slight nasal catarrh until it gradually extended to my throat and bronchial tubes and finally even my stomach and liver became affected, but as I was able to keep up and do a day's work I let it run along until my hearing began to fail me and then I realized that I must get rid of catarrh or lose my position, as I was clerk and my hearing was absolutely necessary."

"Some of my friends recommended an inhaler, another a catarrh salve, but they were no good in my case, nor was anything else until I heard of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. I bought a package at my drug store. They benefited me from the start and in less than four months I was completely cured of catarrh, although I had suffered nearly all my life from it. They are pleasant to take and so much more convenient to use than other catarrh remedies that I feel I cannot say enough in favor of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets."

A little book on cause and cure of catarrh will be mailed free by addressing F. A. Stuart company, Marshall, Mich. and the tablets are sold at all druggists in the United States and Canada.

YELLOW FEVER INSTITUTE

Surgeon General Wyman Favors Such a Project.

New York, Oct. 5.—The New York Medical Journal, Dr. Frank P. Foster editor, publishes to-day a letter written by Surgeon General Walter Wyman, secretary of the treasury, regarding the marine hospital service's yellow fever institute. In his letter Surgeon General Wyman says in part:

"I have prepared and submitted herewith a plan for the organization of a yellow fever institute in the United States marine hospital service, whose object will be to collect all the concerning yellow fever, to designate the specific lines of investigation to be made, and to make the investigations. The members of this institute are to be the medical officers of the United States marine hospital service and others specially qualified. They will be assigned for duty to one of four sections, each section having a special list of topics for consideration. At present the service work on yellow fever is being conducted by a limited number of officers working on more or less independent lines. The institute provides for observation and experiment by a large number of workers in accordance with a general system—in fact organizing and co-ordinating the work that has been going on and which is to be done."

The institute proposes to investigate the transmission of the disease by the mosquito.

Cures the Sick Free

New Treatment for Restoring the Afflicted to Health Discovered by Dr. U. G. Lipes.

THE REMEDY IS FREE TO ALL. Persons suffering from disease in any of its various forms should write to Dr. U. G. Lipes, 148 Stevenson building, Indianapolis, Ind., for the name of the medicine and for the cure of any weakened or unnatural condition of the human body. There is no doubt of the source of the cure, for he has made the study of disease a life work and thoroughly understands the subject. He cures consumption, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, heart disease, kidney and bladder troubles and rheumatism in so short a time that people wonder why they suffered as long as they do.

His treatment for liver complaint, neuritis, nervousness, bad blood, pimples, scrofula, etc., is truly wonderful, and its marvelous power is felt from the very first day's use.

Gout, dropsy, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, dyspepsia, debility or weakness in any form quickly yields to the influence of Dr. Lipes' new treatment.

The doctor's theory is that no matter what the primary cause may be, all disease remains in the human system on account of a disordered condition of the blood or nerves, or both. Taking this principle for a working basis, he devotes his entire energy to the purifying of the blood and placing the nervous system in a strong, healthy condition. He does this by means of a powerful cathartic and resist completely the ravages of any disease whatever. To prove the truth of his claims Dr. Lipes is offering to all sufferers without exception a free trial of his wonderful treatment. He wants you to tell him the nature of your affliction when you write for free treatment.

RELICS RARE AND RICH

A Glimpse at the Collection of Jens Johnson—Bric-a-Brac Picked Up in Northern Europe and America.

For several years Jens Johnson of this city has been on a hunt for such relics of bygone generations as have escaped the ravages of time and modern vandalism, and has met a rich reward. He now has a private museum in which are treasures which any antiquarian would covet. The collection was secured, for the most part, some years ago, when Mr. Johnson was land and immigration agent for the Northern Pacific railroad, and not only

The smaller loving cup bears no inscription, but shows every indication of having attained a rare old age. The peasant wood carver who fashioned it with his "tollekniv" had in mind the goose as a model, one handle being the head and neck and the other the tail. It is oval or boat shaped instead of round, as the other two.

The smallest of the three vessels, a round bowl, was picked up by Mr. Johnson traveled all over America, but also in Europe, and particularly in Scandinavia. His museum is very comprehensive, as it includes books, jewelry, pottery, wooden ware, minerals and an odd jumble of curios.

While something of a naturalist, Mr. Johnson's chief pleasure is in securing something which shows evidence of having belonged to former times. He has never made a catalogue of his collection, but there is not a room in his house, 2424 son in Nordfjord. In letters of olden style it says: "At Ol or J's tid, Drik mig Tom. Lad mig faa gas runden om. Which translated is: Of me I am full, drink me dry. Let us go the rounds.

In the Johnson collection there are half a dozen more wooden cups and bowls for drinking ale and brewing punch. Two of the latter will hold several gallons of liquor. One is especially interesting.

"BUDSTIKKE," OR CASE FOR BEARING MESSAGES. (VERY OLD).

Ninth avenue S., which does not contain something to attract the attention of even the dullest observer. Some rooms would fascinate the true collector who would be inclined to envy Mr. Johnson for his good fortune in securing so many prizes that are unquestionably genuine and old. Through the aid of A. H. Opsahl, the photographer, The Journal is able to present half-tone pictures of some of the interesting relics which are to be found in this collection.

Wooden Drinking Vessels.

Quaint are the three wooden drinking vessels shown on one plate. They date from the eighteenth century, the middle one possibly from even an earlier period, as it has the appearance of extreme age. Those were convivial days, as the vessels by their inscriptions were laboriously carved, decorated and lettered solely for the strong ale of those days should be drunk out of vessels in keeping with its excellence. The two others would now be called loving cups. The larger, with its curved handles ending in the conventional dragon's head, which was so extensively used in all ornamentation in the viking age, has seen much service as the underclass of the handles is worn smooth by the hundreds of hands through which it has passed. The handles were clasped between the thumbs and forefingers as the bowl was raised to the lips. Although the bowl holds nearly a gallon, a "good" man was expected to drain it without taking breath. It was doubtless a prodigious task, but there were prodigious drinkers in "ye olden times."

The cup was evidently made by one Jens Johannesen-Sen Nease for his own household, or presented to him, as his name appears very distinctly in ancient characters. Around the rim is painted a quaint couplet, as follows: "Lad Got Ol i Mig runde, Saa kan du mig ifra dig sende. Which literally translated reads: Let good ale into me run, Then you can me from you send."

Mr. Johnson secured this in Stavanger from friends who had picked it up out in the country from peasants who vouched for its age.

LOVING CUPS AND SMALL BOWL OF WOOD.

vorite for mantels and in pottery cabinets. The ware is easier to describe than to classify. The body is of a creamy yellow tint, and the human figures are in the brightest primary and secondary colors. The figures are engaged in a dance, probably at a wedding feast. All are in peasant costume, except a short man in black, who is probably the schoolmaster. The large man dancing so nimbly wears a gray jacket and a bright scarlet shirt, gray knee breeches, blue socks and black shoes with gold buckles. It is a gay costume, but doubtless is a correct copy of the picturesque attire worn by the peasantry in those days. The massive lid or cover is of solid silver, and on it is scratched some initials and the date 1773. A coin in the center shows the profile and title of Christian V. of Denmark.

Some Church Relics. A comparatively modern church now stands in the parish of Invig, not far from Høland, near Bergen, but there was another church on the same spot many years before, possibly centuries. When the new church was built, about a hundred years or more ago, the quaint and curious windows and much of the ancient service were disposed of in various ways to be replaced by something more modern.

That the authorities would allow the rare treasures to leave the church is incomprehensible to twentieth century folk, but they were indifferent doubtless because there was so much that was old about them that they yearned for something new. At any rate, Mr. Johnson secured one of the old windows and a pair of brass candlesticks like the one seen on Dotter. It will be easy to decipher all though it occupies half of one side of the main portion of the box.

There is every reason to believe that this "budstikke" is over 200 years old. Memories are strong in Iceland and traditions are carefully handed down. The box was secured by Mr. Johnson from an Icelandic family living near the Canadian border. No certificate is required to establish the relic as an ancient one. The appearance of the wood, the paint, the design, everything about the box attests its great age.

A Hand Made Clock.

A brass clock attracts about as much attention as anything in the collection. It is handmade throughout and was made in Norway as well. Apparently the clockmaker who turned this time piece out in his chief d'oeuvre lived in the eighteenth century. He appears to have been a man of considerable imagination as he has drawn on Greek and Norse mythology, the scriptures and early art for his figures and designs. Nevertheless the clock is a valuable and charming old time piece. It runs still with considerable accuracy and peals out the hours in sonorous tones. The gong is not as soft-toned or musical as those found in modern times, but is hard and assertive and arouses one like a fire bell. Side doors to open every half-hour to permit the appearance of the figures of two apostles.

In Mr. Johnson's cabinet of antiquities are a dozen watches, some of them as big and round as small turnips. None of them is less than a hundred years old. Brooches, buckles, buttons, spoons, rings and rare old silverware also form a part of the collection. Some of the filigree work compares very favorably with the finest which can be turned out to-day. Old swords—rapiers and sabres—pistols and flintlocks, snuff-boxes with quaint inscriptions, a curiously carved powder flask, a big copper horn and a special sword, a single exception, the only publisher who has specially written him on this point. He adds:

By law practice news agents have been allowed what is expressly denied to the publishers themselves, viz., having unsold or return copies sent back to them at the cent-per-cent rate, but it is in plain contravention of the terms and intent of the law. The department is trying to execute the law faithfully and thus cut off some flagrant abuses which have loosely grown up.

REVENGE OF INDIANS

KILL AND MUTILATE VENEZUELAN

Most Serious Feature of the War Between Venezuelans and Colombians.

On the road between Sinamanica, Venezuela, and La Hacha, Colombia, Guajira peninsula, Sept. 29.—With General Davila's column of 1,500 men, with five field pieces, advancing toward La Hacha, this road is still fairly filled with fugitives and wounded Venezuelans from the fighting of Sept. 14 and 15, returning as best they may to Maracabo. Davila's column left Sinamanica yesterday morning.

Counting the Colombian liberals at Trenta, thirty miles from La Hacha, the Caracas expedition and the 800 reinforcements due to leave Maracabo Oct. 1, the Venezuelans and Colombian liberals number about 5,000 men in Guajira.

Venezuela seems determined if possible to retrieve her fallen fortunes at Guajira. If she fails in this endeavor it is believed, even among army officers, that the Colombian forces, allied Guajira Indian and Venezuelan revolutionists opposed to President Castro, will unite and march on Maracabo with good chances of capturing the place.

The most serious feature of the Guajira campaign to-day is the attitude of the Guajira Indians. When the Venezuelans first entered the peninsula they robbed the Indians of their cattle and generally maltreated them. The Indians are now retaliating, cruelly mutilating and murdering many of the numerous fugitives who have been straggling, since the defeat, over the waterless, burning flat peninsula in an effort to reach their lines or the coast.

General Davila's first fight at Curoga was an absolute rout. Five Venezuelan battalions of 400 men each were engaged, and the Colombians are estimated at the same number. It is known that General Echeverria was killed on the battlefield, and not shot by the Colombians.

Six hundred were killed on the Venezuelan side. All the flags of the Venezuelans were lost, as well as General Davila's cannon, variously reported at from five to fifteen.

Such as were not captured by the Colombians were thrown into the river by the retreating Venezuelans. The Indians ambushed General Davila's retreating vanguard, composed of 200 men, and annihilated it.

FROM COAST TO COAST

Telephone Wires Now Strung Except Between Bismarck and Miles City.

Special to The Journal. Bozeman, Mont., Oct. 5.—A new metal-lic telephone line built by the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company has been completed to Butte, a distance of 110 miles, giving the people of eastern Montana direct communication with Butte, Salt Lake and Pacific coast points. It will be but a short time until the Pacific and Atlantic seaboard will be connected by telephone wire, and through a recent invention, persons will be able to talk from coast to coast. The only gap that is yet to be closed is between Miles City in this state, and Bismarck, N. D. As soon as the Northwestern Telephone company builds west to meet the lines of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, a transcontinental line will be established.
