

guns and our 8-inch guns. The Colon fired her low gun and hailed down her flag.

Schley's Bearing. Mr. Rayner—What was the bearing of Commodore Schley during this engagement or any engagement in which you saw him?

Witness—His bearing was that of a commander-in-chief of a naval force on that occasion.

The witness said that the commodore had occupied a place on a platform around the conning tower during the engagement.

Mr. Rayner—It has been stated here that the Brooklyn ran 2,000 yards away from the enemy's ships.

Witness—Any witness who made that statement, although he may have stated what he thought had occurred, is absolutely mistaken.

Mr. Rayner—How far did she go from the enemy's vessels?

Witness—She must have gone about 600 yards to the southward, as that is about the tactical diameter of the Brooklyn at that speed.

Mr. Rayner—Did this turn interfere with the Brooklyn's ability to keep up her fire?

Witness—It did not. She continued to fire from her aft turret.

Mr. Rayner—Did the witness concerning his reported colloquy with Admiral Schley during the battle, in which the commodore was reported to have said: "Damn the Texas and the enemy's vessels?"

Witness—No, he did not say that. He suggested the reversal of the starboard engine at the time this turn was made, and that that was rejected by Commodore Schley after consideration and discussion.

Witness—I am very clear on that fact. No signal was made.

Captain Lemly—Are you clear that the colloquy or, when this dialogue, as given by you to-day, was between you and Commodore Schley and not between you and some other person on board the Brooklyn?

Witness—I am very clear on that fact. These were three people interested in that conversation—Commodore Schley, Captain Cook and myself participating in it.

Mr. Hanna—All I want to find out is the occasion for writing this letter.

Admiral Dewey—The court don't want that information. We do not need that.

Mr. Hanna then changed his question and the witness said that he had written his explicit denial in response to a request from Admiral Schley. He continued:

"He wanted me to write a denial of the controversy. I had previously written that I could not deny the statement. A letter followed asking for a denial of the colloquy. I gave him this at the same time explaining that I had admitted to the gist of the report."

Mr. Hanna—Have you anywhere denied the substantial accuracy of the facts as set forth in the report of that colloquy?

Witness—On the contrary, I have admitted it.

Witness said that Commodore Schley had not said, as reported, that the Brooklyn was to near the Spaniards.

Commodore Schley said that he objected to the tone of the newspaper report which had put him, a junior officer, in the absurd position of holding a controversy with the commodore.

Changing the line of examination, Mr. Hanna then asked:

"Did Not Blanket the Texas. When the Brooklyn turned with port helm did she blanket the Texas?"

Witness—No, she did not. Did she go between the Texas and the enemy's vessels?"

Witness—No, she did not. I thought, however, she was going to do it.

Mr. Hanna—Had she turned the other way had there been enough for her to have made such a turn without endangering the Texas?"

Witness—Perfectly, perfectly clear enough space.

Mr. Hanna—How much would she have gained to the northward and westward had she turned with starboard helm?

Witness—She would have gained a position of about 600 or 700 yards nearer the Spanish line.

Mr. Hanna—Would that distance have been reduced by reversing the port engine?

Witness—It would not have been reduced by reversing the port engine.

Witness—The tactical diameter would have been shortened but the speed of turning would have been reduced.

Mr. Hanna—I understood you to say you suggested the reversal of the starboard engine at the time this turn was made, and that that was rejected by Commodore Schley after consideration and discussion.

Are you clear that the starboard engine was not reversed?"

Witness—I am very clear on that fact. No signal was made.

Captain Lemly—Are you clear that the colloquy or, when this dialogue, as given by you to-day, was between you and Commodore Schley and not between you and some other person on board the Brooklyn?

Witness—I am very clear on that fact. These were three people interested in that conversation—Commodore Schley, Captain Cook and myself participating in it.

PACIFICOS THE MURDERERS Further Light Upon the Massacre of Company C.

Manila, Oct. 7.—Major Morris C. Foote of the Ninth United States infantry, who has returned here from the island of Samar, was in Balangiga the day before the disaster.

Major Foote had been fully warned, and had taken what he (Major Foote) considered every necessary precaution.

Information that a plot was brewing among the Filipino natives to murder the American forces, says the mayor:

"We need 100 more policemen. I want them in my business. Many a poor patrolman has to keep awake all night and look sharp to escape the clutches of lawbreakers in a vast territory. Give me one hundred more men and I will cure the town."

These burglarizing gentry out of town. But the powers have not been supplied, and application and placed the same on file with other requests for "work."

The mayor says he can't make the burglars behave. He has asked them to, but they won't mind him. He can't compel them to obey because he hasn't policemen enough to catch them red-handed in acts of criminality.

He has even gone so far as to tell the police to look out for themselves. He has asked them to, but they won't mind him.

SINCE BURGLARS "GOT BUSY"

Citizens Displaying Great Ingenuity in Concealing Valuables and Contriving Impromptu Burglar Alarms.

First Citizen—Good morning, neighbor, how did you get off last night? Second Citizen—Fairly well. I hid my watch in the ash barrel and put the family valuables in the coal bin.

A favorite (family) way of appraising themselves of the approach of a burglar is to sit up all night and "lay" for him.

Another is to hang out cowbells and tin cans on doors and windows.

The weakness of this plan is that the noise disturbs the children and does not curtail the activities of the burglar.

The plan has worked well with the few recruits who have been induced to "burglar" by the wares afforded by the police.

But there is no disposition here to be made of the present "police regulations."

Former Mayor W. H. Bustis and Robert Pratt is that their administrations were never augmented with such an outpouring of the burglarizing spirit as now.

In Mr. Bustis' time many hold-ups occurred and much petty thieving was done, but in those days the country swarmed with idle men who could not get a day's work to save their lives.

They were hungry, penniless and they stole and went to jail willingly, being assured then of a place to sleep and a bite to eat.

But there is no disposition here to be made of the present "police regulations."

Mayor Pratt, too, had a few unlucky experiences with criminals, but nothing to compare with the wholesale burglaries, robberies and miscellaneous thieving which characterizes the recent police records.

But there is no disposition here to be made of the present "police regulations."

Business Is Good. Another thing: It is an ill wind that does not blow right for somebody.

In the past ten days agents of trap guns, burglar escapes, and patent adjustable thief catchers, have invaded the city and found a ready market for their wares.

One of these devices, which sells for $30, is a combined live wire killer and electric alarm.

It can be placed in the hall and the wires strung about the house.

When the family retires for the night, the current is turned on, and any burglar who connects with one of the wires may be removed in a wagon the following day.

The trouble with this device is that it is hard on somnambulists. The inventor frankly admits that connection with one of the live wires will topple a deep walker as quickly as it will a burglar.

However, the machine is all right for people who do not walk the floor nights and who can remember to turn the current off before breakfast.

As a famous Dutch monologist has well observed: "We shouldn't get more nervous about it. We don't need 'em; but let's get 'em anyhow."
