The success of the Dramatic Club is assured beyond a doubt. The prompt response to the invitations sent to the associate members is a striking proof of the interest that everybody takes in amateur performances. The club will give its first program Wednesday evening, Oct. 30, in Century hall, and the arrangements are being kept secret there is much pleasant expectation. That it will consist of two plays and an interlude is acknowledged and it is also whispered that the first play will be in the time of Louis XIV, which will allow something magnificent in the way of costumes. Madame Boyd is making the gowns and Phillips has charge of the hats for the interlude, which will be a set, so rumor says, from a popular opera which is enjoying a run in New York. The girls will be charming in white gowns with big black hats and American Beauty roses to furnish bright bits of color and the men will wear black frock coats, gray trousers and silk hats. Miss Newport is coaching the dancers and it is really in half as charming as the rehearsal the second play will be delayed considerably to allow for encores. The hall will be festooned with southern smilax until it looks like a great garden house, and after the performance the door will be cleared and informal dancing will round out the evening. Rossett's orchestra will furnish the music. The full dress rehearsal will be given Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. George H. Partridge on Grove-land avenue.

The plans for the winter have not been fully made, but it is possible that three affairs will be given. The one in Century hall, a second during the holidays and a third after Lent. The holiday entertainment may be given at the Minkakka club. The great dining-room will form the theater and the smaller rooms can be utilized for dressing rooms. Nearly all of the active and associate members of the Minkakka club and the entertainment committee will look after the decorations and the actors can give their undivided attention to the play.
