TALKING DOLLS

Girls Are Paid for Filling the Phonographs With Jingles.
Girls with pleasing voices find remunerative employment in factories where "talking dolls" are manufactured. These dolls contain a miniature phonograph, and the girls are kept busy talking into the tiny machines that are afterward fitted into the dolls. They recite the familiar nursery jingles, "Mother Goose" rhymes and other literature for small folk. A tube connects with the mouth of the doll, and through it the phonograph is heard when the doll is wound up.

Since dolls equipped with these and other ingenious inventions have been put on the market, the business of doll making has assumed vast proportions, and in many of the factories women form a large part of the employees. There is constant demand for attractive new features, and the little people of to-day would never be satisfied with the dolls of a few years ago. "The children are so exacting nowadays," said a woman who understands this business, "that if you show them a doll which does not close its eyes when it is laid down they'll invariably say: 'No, I don't want that. I want my doll to go to sleep.' They must have real hair on the dolls, and they are quick to notice whether the tiny toes and fingers are perfect." The work done by women consists largely of the finishing touches necessary in completing the dolls and dressing them. Certain forms of work are assigned to each employe, and in a factory which turns out dressed dolls one girl makes all the ruffles required, another the undergarments, another the hoods, and still another fashions the dress or puts it on the doll. Doll repairing is an exceedingly profitable

MISS MARTINOT'S COSTUMES

Reveal Perfect Taste and Strict Attention to Detail.
Sadie Martinot in "The Marriage Game," is displaying stunning sartorial creations. Her costume for the last act is a morning dress of lavender crepe, embroidered with lace orchids. The effect is very beautiful. With this is worn a lace hat of Louis XV. pattern, and completely covered with violets, hung on falling stems. Miss Martinot's costumes have been entirely designed by herself, and she has devoted almost as much time to their production as to the development of her play. Her well known and justly famous reputation for costuming has enabled her to produce some of the most beautiful creations ever seen on the stage. For every costume she has history and shoes to match the material worn, and where necessary, gloves also. It is questionable if there is a woman star in this country who exercises the same artistic taste and devotes such strict attention to every detail of gowning.

NO HORRID MEN ON SIDELINES

Seniors Said to Have Won Candy Money for a Week's Supply.

Special to The Journal.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Clad in all the accoutrements of the modern football warrior, twenty-two "co-eds" who live in Pearson's hall, one of the women's dormitories of Northwestern University, battled on a football gridiron as marked out in the large garret of the building last night. It was the freshmen against the sophomores. The sophomores triumphed at last, sending Olive Rippepeter out of the freshmen's goal line and Margaret Corkleg boosted the ball between the two movable goal posts. Score: Sophomores, 6; freshmen, 0.
All the necessary preparations had been going on at Pearson's hall for a week. The girls who had been chosen to fight on the gridiron for the glory of their class, singled out members of the varsity eleven from whom they might borrow football togs. The members of the upper classes girded with their usual proteges, seniors with sophomores and juniors with freshmen, and wagers were laid on the favorite team. As a result of the match, it is said that the seniors will have candy enough to last them a week.
Nearly all of the spectators were dressed in masculine garments, also borrowed. Miss Olive Stevenson, who weighs 235 pounds, captained the freshmen team, while Miss Rippepeter led the sophomores.
The sophomores won the toss and chose the north goal. Miss Stevenson kicked off for the freshmen and then the battle was on. The sophomores were unable to gain through the freshmen line, and their plucky halfback captain was forced to punt. Then the freshmen, with their heavier line, started for the sophomore goal, and it was only by a plucky stand near the goal that the second-class team prevented a score. The sophomores started again, and Captain Rippepeter was at last forced over the freshmen line. The goal was made by Miss Corkleg. The exuberant sophomores then swarmed on the field and the truly, ZELMA RAWLSTON, Miss Olive Stevenson, who weighs 235 pounds, captained the freshmen team, while Miss Rippepeter led the sophomores.

MISS ZELMA RAWLSTON.
Many letters are received daily, similar to the following one from Miss Rawlston, from prominent singers and those who use nothing but DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP to prevent hoarseness and coughs.

It cures my hoarseness and my coughs almost instantly. This is the kind of medicine I must have as to keep my voice in condition, as you know my work as a male impersonator is very hard on the voice and throat. I have never found anything that cures as quickly and as thoroughly any affection of the throat as DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP. Very truly, ZELMA RAWLSTON, 74 W 8th st, New York city, Aug 7, 1901.
For fifty years, singers, actors, public speakers and clergymen have used DR. #### LI HUNG CHANG'S AUTOGRAPH

Li Hung Chang has a reputation among his countrymen as a man of work and artistic excellence, and it is said he practices writing as an amusement a certain number of hours every day. The formidable looking Chinese characters which form his autograph are found in the album of Washington woman. When the stately viceroys was traveling in this country in 1896, he spent some days in Washington, and while there was beset by autograph hunters for his signature. It is said there were two or three hundred albums sent every day to the hotel where he was a guest, whose owners offered him all sorts of inducements for his name in ink. But the wily statesman was chary of this favor, and Mrs. Rose A. Brande claims that hers is the only album in which he wrote during his stay in the capital city. Mrs. Brande was so fortunate as to send him a gift which pleased him, and he acknowledged it with his signature. The gift consisted of a magnificent collection of the flora of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, mounted on gold and white cards, and arranged in book form. The flowers were all gathered and mounted by Mrs. Brande's husband, and struck a responsive chord in the heart of the eastern statesman, which he acknowledged by painting the queer looking characters.

Mrs. Ogden Mills' two daughters, Gladys and Beatrice, are among the pretty girls who are to be introduced to society this winter. Miss Violet Cruger, daughter of the clever Mrs. Tams, who is also a wonderful pianist, makes her debut this season, as does also Miss Randolph, the beautiful step-daughter of William C. Whitney. Among the other debutantes are Miss Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rutledge Gibson; Miss Muriel Robbins, Miss Edith Poor and Miss Catherine Dodge.

SINGLE JEWELS WORN.

For jewels for semicircular occasions nothing will be considered so alluring as a single great jewel strung on a chain of gold so fine it is hardly more than a wire. The jewel appears to have no setting at all, and sparkles in the laps of the corsage, on the bare neck or on the forehead between the soft ringlets that escape from the lightly parted hair, with a charming effect.
