Miles and the Post Canteen. To the Editor of The Journal:

To the Editor of The Journal:

Last week your paper contained a rumor that Lieutenant General Miles' then unpublished report would strongly condemn canteens, which had leaked out of the adjutant general's office, with an insinuation that he had suddenly changed his views. This the adjutant general himself did when the war denartment took the capteen side reversing Washington, Nov. 2. — Judge George R. Emery of Minneapolis, who has been here in connection with the Seeley-Porter case decided yesterday by Commissioner Jones, is strong in his expression of confidence of President Roosevelt. He had a chat with the president and told him that the west would be for him strong. He said to-day:

side of the canteen, but had been moving for the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Rayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the best of President Hayes, which he requested, the secretary of war take suitable steps, as far to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage at the campus for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, the restriction of liquor-selling in the army for twenty years, beginning with the order of President Hayes, which he requested, to prevent the sale of intoxicating inquota as a beverage at the camps, forts and other posts of the army." Then in 1898 (July 2), he issued an order warning soldiers against the intoxicants in the tropics, and reif found harmful. In his testimony in 1900, before the senate committee, he carefully avoided giving any indorsement to the canteen, though he withheld positive condemnation of it to avoid conflict with the administration. And in a less known order of Aug. displays that he has about the feeling of admiration for Roose-extends to members of all parties. What appeals to our people particularly is his independence in dealing with the Booker T. Washington matter. Doubtless the T. Washington matter and the feeling of the war department to the army asking that the anti-canteen law should be "faithfully and loyally observed." His office has independence in dealing with the Booker T. Washington matter. Doubtless the president wanted ideas regarding the negro race and he saw that they could be obtained better and more easily at the dinner table.

"In Minnesota the president is not known as Mr. Roosevelt, but as "Teddy." Every one has a kind word for him and everyone is pleased to speak of him as if he law until it had been to be a brother.

"In Minnesota the president is not known army posts that was to be used to defend the canteen. On June 14, 1901, in a confirmed interview at Buffalo, he declared he was opposed to repealing the law until it had been to be a brother. posed to repealing the law until it had been fairly tried, and cited the success of railroads in securing abstinence from the employes to expose the fallacy that government provide drink for the soldiers.

The report is but the natural climax of these ever-strengthening anti-canteen opin-ions. Even those too busy to carefully compare the opposing views of Corbin and Miles will at least agree with General Miles when he says: "I do not believe the law should be repealed until it has been fairly tried." Let all who so believe so vote in the mail box by letters to senators and congressmen. -Wilbur F. Crafts. The Reform Bureau, Washington, D.

The Sugar Bounty and the Trust.

To the Editor of The Journal: A recent number of the New York Times, speaking of the sharp competition between cane sugar and beet sugar, quoted President Oxnard of the American Beet Sugar Associa-tion to the effect that the reduction in prices of fine sugars by the American Sugar Refining company was a move to crush out beet sugar production in order that the trust may have no opposition. As fast as they succeed in one place they will carry the war into another locality. Mr. Oxnard was confident, however, that the beet sugar people will be able to take care of themselves. However that may be, the matter is one of local interest and one upon which a few facts may be of value.

of value. When the question of continuing the bounty When the question of continuing the bounty on beet sugar was up before our last legislature, it was opposed by many thoughtless people on the ground that it was only "giving public money away to a corporation," etc. It was maintained that no one got the benefit of the bounty (about $20,000, I believe it amounted to) except the St. Louis Park Beet Sugar company. I knew by experience in former years that every man, woman and child in Minnesota saved money because of the existence of that sugar factory, whether they need Minnesota saved money because of the existence of that sugar factory, whether they need Minnesota saved money because of the existence of that sugar factory, whether they need Minnesota saved money because of the existence of that sugar factory, whether they need to be a sugar factory.

The scheme is plain enough to any one who is not so blinded by opposition to all forms department took the canteen side, reversing seven years' testimony; but General Miles, in an interview with the undersigned on Friday, showed that he had never taken the side of the canteen, but had been moving for the restriction of liquor-selling in the arms. of protection or subsidy by the state or na of a new industry, continue in business under such competition unless aided by the people who are so greatly benefited by its

I trust you will give this view of the subject the benefit of your wide circulation, so that now, while our people are enjoying the benefits brought to them by the St. Louis Park sugar factory in the form of low prices on every pound of sugar sold in the north west, they will resolve to maintain and pro tect that factory and encourage the estab-lishment of others throughout the sugar-beet area. —Wm.
