

MRS. LESLIE M. SHAW

Woman's World MRS. SHAW IS DIZZY

Perturbed by Her Elevation in the Social Scale.

TALKS OF WASHINGTON FUTURE

Guileless Utterances From the Helpful Wife of the Next Secretary of the Treasury.

Special to The Journal.

Des Moines, Iowa, Dec. 27.—The appointment of Governor Shaw to the secretaryship of the treasury has scarcely more interest in Des Moines than the attendant elevation of Mrs. Shaw to the social prominence of the wife of a cabinet officer.

Secret of Her Popularity.

That she has been popular since there is none to gainsay, but it has been due principally to her kindness and gentleness. She now looks forward to the prospect of social activity at Washington with the utmost pleasure, though she manifestly has little conception of what will be expected of her and is more or less bewildered at the outlook.

Hers the Casting Vote.

Yes, I practically had the deciding vote. I did not much like the idea of changing our plans after having made all arrangements to the effect that next month and spending $2,500 in making over our house, but I realized it was 'no great honor to decline and so I decided he should accept. But really now, are you quite sure he is going to get the place after all? He has never yet received notice from President Roosevelt directly and I was asked only through Senator Allison if he would accept it if it was offered. It seems to me it might get fall through. Don't you think so? Well, I suppose it is just a woman's foolish notion. Men and politicians especially, know much more about such things. Perhaps this is the usual way of going about taking an appointment. There is no concealing the fact that Mrs. Shaw is greatly agitated over the contemplated change. She declares she will depart as soon as Governor Shaw does, taking the family and household goods. She does not expect this to take place, however, until after the inauguration of Governor Cummings Jan. 18. She spent the day-to-day in visiting the best local modiste, but says she will wait until she reaches Washington to have her best gowns made.

WHITE FROCKS FOR BABY

Warm Clothing a Necessity for the Children's Welfare. It may not be convenient or economical for all mothers to dress the little ones in white, but they certainly do look more dainty and there is a great variety of inexpensive materials in white from which to choose. As soon as the baby is old enough to creep, she can have little dainty creeping frocks, or even brown Holland ones, to put on over the white frock, and in that way the fashion is not so expensive as it seems. If extra warmth is desired, a thin flannel may be worn under the frock. Long-waisted effects are pretty in short clothes, a waist, a mass of horizontal ticks and lines of embroidery, with ruffles and lace, and the same material, edged with lace, or soft ribbon sashes in bright colors, and for smart occasions shoulder length frocks of ribbons to match the sashes. Colored socks and shoes, the same as for the ribbons, look dainty and cunning. Much of the illness and fretfulness of little children is due to not keeping them warm enough. They are often so uneasily dressed—some parts covered to excess, and others, more vital still, left almost unclothed—that they are in constant discomfort. They cannot tell the difficulty, and thoughtful mothers dismiss the whole subject with the general complaint of crossness. Warm under-fannels and good woolen stockings are incorporated in the winter wardrobe of every child, but it is too common to put them on until the seeds of a cold are sown, which may last for the season, or even for life. If the mother is only beforehand with her calculations for the changing seasons, this might for the most part be prevented.

EAST INDIA CURRIES.

It is generally supposed that curries are of eastern origin, but those highly spiced mutton curries which are so popular in England were introduced by the time of Richard II., long before there was any intercourse with India, under the name of "curry port or sauce." From these powders or essences of spices and herbs that period derived their name. There are several eastern curries, the Malaya or Caylon, the Moll, Kebob and Quozma. Malay curry is composed of coconut milk spiced with mild condiments, and served with rice of which curries, shell and ordinary fish and chicken. The Moll is about the same as the Malay, only almond milk is sometimes substituted for life. It is used with ground rice. The most in vogue among Anglo-Indians. The powder of this is made of freshly-grated coconut with which highly-spiced ingredients are incorporated. It is employed in the treatment of mutton and almost all kinds of rice of which each grain is dry and fully exfoliated. The mutton or veal is cut into small pieces, and there is also some bacon with pieces of carrot and onion and a little ginger. These are placed alternately upon silver skewers, dusted with the curry powder and grilled, and then served with curry gravy. Quozma curry is made with mutton. The sauce is composed of coconut and almond pulp and cream from the cow. Turmeric and sugar boiled together are added, and then seasoned or pointed with lemon or lime juice. This is called a mutton curry because no chill peppers are incorporated with it.

FASHIONABLE FOOTWEAR.

Suede boots for house wear and satin boots and slippers for evening are more popular this season than patent leather, which is so much used for serviceable boots and shoes. The finest kinds are made to match gowns, which the stockings must also match. The idea is met by the hostess merchants, who are showing an endless assortment of silk and fine stockings in dainty patterns and fashionable colors.

BLIND TELEPHONE GIRL.

Miss Abbie Downing of Mattoon, Ill., who is a graduate of the Indianapolis School for the Blind, is said to be the only blind telephone operator in this country. The "drop," or falling shutter, enables her to locate the calls on the board. She has charge of the toll station, and keeps a record of all toll charges. In addition to her business ability she is a musician.

CHILDREN AT THE TABLE.

Children should be early instructed in behavior at table. No amount of subsequent drilling quite atones for early neglect. All manners are not to attract the attention of others. At the family meeting place nothing should be allowed to overshadow the general pleasantness.

WOMEN AS MATHEMATICIANS.

People accustomed to think that women can never be mathematicians will be surprised to know that, according to the annual register of the American Mathematical Society, no less than twenty-two members of that society are women.

BARRED OUT OF S. DAKOTA

Certificate of the National Aid of Topeka is Cancelled.

Special to The Journal. Pierre, S. D., Dec. 27.—Insurance Commissioner Shober has issued an order cancelling the certificate of authority to do business in South Dakota of the National Aid Association of Topeka, Kan., giving as his reason for such action unsound financial condition.

The state treasury to-day called in $25,000 of bonds which are not due for ten years but which the holders have agreed to surrender.

Build Church and Parsonage.

Special to The Journal. Clark, S. D., Dec. 27.—The new Methodist church, to be built in the city, will be completed by the middle of January. The parsonage is also a substantial building. Although lumber is high and workmen scarce, building seems to be the order of the day next to land transfers. The schools have day from apoplexy at the age of 51 years. He leaves a wife and several young children. The funeral will be held on Saturday morning from the Wesley Methodist church, and the interment will be made in the cemetery at Redwood. Two boys by the names of Ober-taus and Mautzki broke through the ice while skating and would have drowned but for the prompt assistance of some men on the shore.

WOOD'S RASH PROMISE

He Says He's About to Found His Last Paper.

Special to The Journal. Ferguson Falls, Minn., Dec. 27.—A. De Lacy Wood, who was until recently confined in the insane hospital in this city, has decided to start a newspaper at White Earth. He announces this will be the last paper he will found.

Died on the Coast.

Special to The Journal. Ferguson Falls, Minn., Dec. 27.—O. S. Sweet received a letter to-day announcing the death of his brother-in-law, F. W. Spaulding, in the state of Washington. Mr. Spaulding was one of the first settlers in this city, having come here in 1872. He was a contractor and erected several of the best residences here.—O. E. Jensen, the Barnesville furniture dealer, took place before Referee Parsons in this city. The evidence went to show that a portion of Mr. Jensen's stock was transferred to a man at Pelican Rapids and afterwards turned over to Mrs. Jensen, who has opened a store since Jensen failed. The attorney for the creditors intimates there will be important developments shortly.

Playhouse as Well as Hotel.

Special to The Journal. Deadwood, S. D., Dec. 27.—There is talk of building a playhouse in connection with Deadwood's proposed new hotel, as the town is without a playhouse, owing to the destruction of the old opera-house by fire Monday night. The Business Men's Club has raised and obtained promises of enough money to put up a building costing $12,000, and it is urged that one part of it be devoted to an opera-house.

A Gopher Girl at the Golden Gate

Correspondence of The Journal. San Francisco, Dec. 15.—The average tourist may see Goat Island, and Yerba Buena by the Spaniards, when crossing the bay going to and from San Francisco. As it appears inhabited from a distance he does not likely to get aboard the new naval training school was completed here about a year ago. Here the government also has a torpedo supply station for war ships, a depot for the boys and supplies of the lighthouse tenders. The only means of getting to Goat Island is by the government boat, that plys between the island, Oakland and Frisco each day. One must apply for a pass to get aboard this little steamer any day, excepting Sunday. That day the general public is admitted without question, as it is the only day of the week that the relatives and friends of the boys are allowed to visit them.

On Sunday the boys are happy, they wear one of the two white duck suits that Uncle Sam provides and compels them to keep spotless. The majority of them seem to be pleased with the life they have chosen. They certainly seem healthy. The school is some distance from the training ship while the torpedo wharf and building are on the east end of the island. Entrance to the school is gained easily, to any other place, a pass must first be obtained from the officer of the day.

Recently the workmen in digging for the foundation of the training school disturbed some graves. They were those of the soldiers interred there when the subjects of the czar came to San Francisco say for hides and pelts, long before gold was thought of in that beautiful land. More pathetic than these strangers' graves, so far from their native land and people, was the coffin that, when opened, revealed the beautiful face of a young woman probably in as perfect a condition as the day it was buried. The metal coffin that inclosed it thirty years before. The plate on the coffin gave evidence that she was the wife of an officer in the United States service. The kidnaped man who found it, removed it to the grave on the hill above the officers' quarters and put a mound over it and some flowers to show that a human being was buried there.

Going back to the Peninsula, I caught sight of some Dewey medals and was introduced to a number of the owners, one being Mitchell, the bugler, who was one of the four on the bridge with Dewey at the battle of Manila Bay. His conversation was very interesting. He is one of the teachers at the training school since receiving shore duty.

A Burial at the Presidio.

The most pathetic scene I came across in California was the burial of thirteen soldiers in the national cemetery at the Presidio.

Our mission there was to find the grave of a Minneapolis boy who died on ship board, three days' voyage from his native land. His sick leave came too late. Once inside the cemetery, we found that a burial was to take place and hastened to attend it. Coarse lumber wagons drew up to the entrance. Two or three boxes were placed on each wagon. Each box was made doubly sacred by its covering, the beloved stars and stripes, for which these men had sacrificed their lives in the distant Philippines. A squad of newly enlisted men had volunteered to act as pallbearers—to these seemingly friendless dead, whose remains were in the vault at the Presidio at the regulation forty days, after being shipped from Manila, waiting to be claimed by friends. As no one claimed them, the government gave them the proper burial. After the thirteen boxes had been placed in the graves prepared for them, the chaplain stepped forward, prayer book in hand, and repeated the one short prayer for all. Opposite the chaplain the venerable superintendent stood, at the head of one grave about the center of the thirteen. He certainly looked solemn and reverential, with bowed head, hat in hand, taking the place of mourner. Though the scene is not an unusual one for him, he seemed to feel its pathos.

I shall never forget the picture he made in that bright morning sunshine. His face, brown from being constantly in the open air, his hair and mustache as white as the ocean's spray. His tall, slight figure was clothed in an old brown suit. His attire was surely not mournful, but I think the little group that stood there felt that he was a fitting sponsor for those absent friends and the handful of earth he threw on the coffin was a last dutiful act, solemnly and respectfully done. Not more than twenty people beside
