JANUARY WOMAN'S MAGAZINES

The January Harper's Bazar gives promise of a most interesting year. The opening article is by Olive Schreiner and is on "The Woman's Movement of Our Day." William Dean Howells writes of Henry James's famous heroine, Daisy Miller. Beatrice Williams describes the daily life at Girton college, and the lady mayors of London tell of her experience as London's hostess. Nesbit presents the first number of a serial, "The Red House," which is written in the same style that made the "World-Is Good" stories so popular. The serial, "Bagby's Daughter," is concluded, and the other story is by Harriet Prescott Spofford. Fashions occupy a generous section of the magazine, and something new is suggested for midwinter luncheons.

London Knight reviews the history of the community of Zoar in the January Woman's Home Companion. The strange customs and marriage customs in Persia and Australasia are described. Gustave Kobbé presents a sketch of Mme. Tammes in his series on famous artists in grand opera. The heroine of Bridget Drivers and Mother Bickerdyke is told in the series of "deeds of heroism, patriotism and patience of the women in the civil Spanish wars." There are good stories by Kate Clark, Charles Melville, Frederick M. Smith and Edgar Fawcett. Mrs. Stephen Crane writes of the Society of American Women in London. Fashions, and household subjects are discussed in the department and the magazine, as a whole, is up to the usual high standard.

The January Ladies' Home Journal comes in a gay red and yellow cover and is full of interesting stories by Lillian Brooks. Edna Kipling describes her experience in bringing a lion up "by hand," and Cardinal Gibbons has a word of advice for the restless woman. John P. Mitchell, Jr., tells of James Whitecomb Riley's "home folks." The manner in which Uncle Sam guards his millions is told by John Elfrith Watkins, Jr. The fiction includes good stories by Lillian Brooks, Edna Kipling, Laura Spencer Porter and Frederick M. Smith. Edward Bok has three columns of items on public schools as they are conducted at present, which will make parents uncomfortable. The regular departments begin the year in an interesting fashion.

Mrs. George Cornwallis West has been interviewed by the Good Housekeeping, and her opinions on dress as an educational factor appear in the January number. George Barry Mallon has an interesting article on old Russian copper and Professor H. W. Wiley writes of "Injurious Food Adjuncts." In the department, "Our Educational Sta-

BEST DRESSED WOMEN

England's Representative Holds Her Own With Americans.

New York Sun Special Service

Chicago, Jan. 6.—The best dressed woman of England met the best dressed woman of America Saturday evening. Of course courtesy forbids the dozen spectators of that memorable encounter from expressing any preference between the red velvet and pearls of Lady Algerton Gordon-Lennox and the black lace and diamonds of Mrs. Potter Palmer.

But it is certain that society will discuss for some time over the little detail of the gowns worn at the Palmer mansion in the Lake Shore drive. The occasion was a dinner to the visiting English beauty. There was an extraordinary array of beautiful women and gowns, while the radiance of a thousand costly gems lent splendor to the scene.

It was a battle royal, in which England was represented by one woman while America strove for the supremacy with the united legions of six of Chicago's social leaders. But Lady Lennox had the advantage for all there were fourteen at the dinner given by Mrs. Palmer to Lord and Lady Lennox.

Mrs. Palmer was dressed in black lace and diamonds, and presented a perfect symphony in black and gems.

Lady Algerton Gordon-Lennox was dressed in a gown of red velvet trimmed about the shoulders with mink fur. About her neck was her famous dog collar of pearls. A faultless symposium in red, she was described.

After the dinner the party was entertained in the art rooms, where Lady Lennox said she was pleased with Americans and everybody who had been there. She had had the same expressed his pleasure at the way in which the Americans, and especially Chicagoans, departed themselves. The men unanimously complimented her on her dress, and she was a match for any American woman.

THE DANZ CONCERT

The biweekly concerts given by the Danz Symphony orchestra at the Metropolitan continue to attract large audiences to that playhouse. Yesterday afternoon the concert was given and the program offered proved most enjoyable. It was well diversified and so arranged as to please all classes. The music was completely new, and the program was Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4, Op. 59," for piano and orchestra, which was performed by the full orchestra with Hermann Zoch at the piano, and which was excellently rendered.

Sweden's "Norwegian Carnival" was well liked as novelty; and the Mignon gavotte and the tinkling waltz by Kusner greatly pleased those in the audience who favored the lighter forms of musical composition. The string orchestra played Heilmann's "Rococo," in most delightful fashion; and "Le Roi l'a Dit," and Dupont's "Les Dragons de Villars," two French overtures, were admirably played.

MISS DEIGHTON TO LOBBY

Will Succeed Mrs. Bolden at the Coming Iowa Session.

Special to The Journal.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 6.—Mrs. Evelyn H. Bolden, late president of the Iowa Suffrage association, has announced that Miss Daisy Deighton of Sheboygan, Iowa, will succeed her as lobbyist with the late legislature. Mrs. Bolden won the reputation of being the most skillful woman lobbyist ever before the state legislature. She says that Miss Deighton is competent and will be able to give the work all her time.

Adulterated Groceries.

Special to The Journal.

Minneapolis, Jan. 6.—The Minnesota state food inspector prosecuted and won an important case here. A Chicago firm had, through local agents, sold and delivered to farmers of this vicinity a large amount of adulterated groceries. Before the delivery was completed, the inspector dropped in on the scene, secured samples of the goods and made a complete analysis, showing that the defendant, an agent of the company, sent to fight the case, pleaded guilty after the state food inspector had issued his findings and $40 and costs.

THE FLORODORA FOB, A CLEVER DEVICE

PRETTY and useful trifle in the market of fashion is the Florodora fob. As may be divined, it is suggested by the musical comedy of that name, and designed to accompany the photographs, it suggests founcing petticoats and dainty feet as well. The primary object of the Florodora fob is that of a fancy other fob, the guarding of the little watch carried in the belt; but at the lower end of the wide silk braid, which dangles at the hip with a manlike elegance, there is a grip for the support of the skirt. It is this important feature which distinguishes the Florodora fob from the new thing it is, and with its aid the longest skirt may triumph over rainy days. While one hand grasps the umbrella, the other holds the fob, the automatically lifted skirt presenting, somehow, a look more than ever coquettish.

Gold and silver, and even jeweled albos and buckles, began the Florodora fob to any point of loveliness desired. In other words, sweet woman has added another weapon to her quiver.

A Florodora fob of black silk braid, with dull silver ornaments, is pictured by one of the week's photographs. The gown which accompanies it is an ordinary street costume of heavy blue serge, with a vest of black and white checked velvet and black Hercules braid. The circular skirt has only three seams, two at the apron and one in the center of the back, which is cut with a bell flare. Narrow, rounded basques and a light tucking below the shoulders are stylish features of the blouse-jacket; collars and cuffs are of black velvet.

One of the very inexpensive "outing" hats, seen all the while, is worn by the Lady of the Fob. It is a bunchy turban of black camel's hair cloth, crossed at the top by a wide, flat bow in black and white ribbon. The way it is pushed over the forehead is the correct appeal.

Mrs. E. L. Buchwalter of Springfield, Ohio, a director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has been named a member of the board of women managers of the St. Louis fair.

And here is the true story of how a certain clever Chicago club woman turned the tables on an unbelieving and too confident husband. The said husband is a great believer in hat-tricks, and the unsightly condition of certain unoccupied property in his ward has long distressed him.

"Why don't you men of the neighborhood see what you can do about it?" inquired his wife one day. "I have inquired," he answered, "but the men of the neighborhood have no time to spare for such trifles."

"Why don't you women?" he retorted, cornered.

"I'm not a voter," was her pertinent answer. "But I think I see them accomplishing work of this kind. I'll propose to those voters, now I think of it, and go after that city follows hammer and tong."

From the beginning, all the left-overs are sent to the woman, but this does not mean that the vegetables and fruit are withered or decayed, for many of the varieties are taken in the evening of the day that they arrive at the grocer's shop and none are older than the second day. The woman now makes prices and plucks for half a dozen groceries, from "left-overs," and could increase her business if she cared to. The grocer's profit by the arrangement for they have acquired the reputation of always having fresh fruit and vegetables for sale as well as excellent home-made pickles and preserves. On

CLUB GOSSIP AND STORIES

The most delectable bit of gossip circulating at present about club women is the interesting rumor put in circulation by some paper, somewhere, and behind that, doubtless by some woman who just couldn't keep such an interesting hint to herself, that Mrs. Rebecca Lewis of Atlanta, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is to be married again at an early date, although no information is given as to the fortunate man. It is a fair supposition that interest to the Los Angeles biennial in May, should the president go there as a bride, it is quite certain that, in any event, this meeting will not lack in interest and excitement.

According to reports, California is having club fairs, which will not be wholly uninteresting to the women who attended the last biennial at Milwaukee, where Mrs. Robert J. Burdette was so conspicuous a figure. It is to be suggested for nearly every office in the gift of the organization, although she apparently had no immediate ambition except to secure the biennial for Los Angeles—a point in which she succeeded. Mrs. Burdette is credited by San Francisco Town Talk with laying the wires for the presidency of the federation. The article shows a decided ignorance of federation methods and procedure for the idea of a woman being elected president in the organization that it is bad policy for the hostess state to accept any important office for one of its members. Nevertheless, it is a fair supposition that Mrs. Burdette, president of the California federation, has national ambitions which are likely to be given consideration at some future time.

Mrs. E. H. Walker and sons, Arthur and Harold, of Woonsocket, S. D., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Harmon pending the settlement of the recent loss by fire of Hotel request, wines, cordials and catsup are added to the list by the enterprising discoverer of her special field of activity.

An allied employment is that of a butcher's wife, who makes soup stock from the bones and makes her visits on certain days to her husband's shop. She puts the stock up in jars, neatly labeled, and the butcher has no difficulty in disposing of it to his patrons, who are glad to be saved the trouble of preparing the stock at home. The stockmaker earns several hundred dollars a year, besides being instrumental in procuring new customers for her husband as a result of having stock for sale.

"Mother's helper" is the way in which a Philadelphian woman designates the employment in which she makes a comfortable living. She was a trained nurse for a number of years, but was obliged to give up her profession on account of defective hearing. The idea of her work is to lighten the burden for the mother of a family unable to hire a servant. She describes her duties thus: "I repair the clothes, darn stockings, do plain sewing, such as making sheets and pillow cases, hem tablecloths and towels, assist in the care of children and take charge of them in the temporary absence of the mother. She has regular customers and makes her visits on certain days and at certain hours, just like a music or other special teacher. In addition, she goes when requested as an adviser to young housekeepers and instructs them in pickling and the duties of a housewife, so they may be independent of servants. Also

NEW FIELDS FOR WOMEN

Occupations in Which Profit and Pleasure Are Found.

Last year one industrious American woman made over $700 in an agreeable employment that did not take her away from her home and family. She made a proposition, a couple of years ago, to her grocer that he should allow her to take all vegetables and fruits that were not fresh enough to bring the best prices and preserve or pickle them on shares, and he dispose of the stock in his shop. He agreed and the enterprise proved a success from the beginning. All the left-overs are sent to the woman, but this does not mean that the vegetables and fruit are withered or decayed, for many of the varieties are taken in the evening of the day that they arrive at the grocer's shop and none are older than the second day. The woman now makes prices and plucks for half a dozen groceries, from "left-overs," and could increase her business if she cared to. The grocer's profit by the arrangement for they have acquired the reputation of always having fresh fruit and vegetables for sale as well as excellent home-made pickles and preserves. On

Peace and a Powerful Navy.

We are building up a powerful navy for the express purpose of preserving peace, and every battleship and cruiser that hoists her flag in commission is a pledge that the peace will be kept. In the past few years we have made wonderful advancements in possessions, in commerce, and in wealth, and great as have been the increases in our navy they have been trivial in comparison to the enlargements of our national interests. A great incentive to industry and peaceful arts is found in "Golden Grain Belt" beer, for it makes men strong and healthy and contented. Every glass contains the strength of bread and meat in liquid form—it out, telephone 488 Main and get a case to-day.
