The men's too, are more plain with lighter soles, and with small neat military heels.

"Shiay" or "patent" leathers of all kinds are just as popular as ever, "Patent Vici" and "Patent Cali" being the two that wear the best.

Washington Herald has returned from the congressional race. If the judge should make a try, it must be either for the senate or for the house. He is one of the old-timers in the state and has always been on the firing line.

There seems to be a well-defined policy to pass the receiverships of the land offices around. Kelly succeeded Brown at Aberdeen and Morrow followed Case at Waterville. Rice has now been unanimously recommended for Westdahl's place at Huron. The registration at Huron is just now in the balance, with the chances inclining toward the incumbent, Editor Blake. Congressman Burke has been holding out for A. W. Wilmarth, who would be a good man for the place. Wilmarth, however, has antagonized what should have been a strong home following and will no doubt be made to suffer for it. Blake has the senators and the editors, of whom he is one, on his side, and will undoubtedly stay in four years more.

General Maris Taylor will be on the democratic ticket, probably in first place, if he will accept. He is a democrat of the old school and a polished and handsome gentleman. His own party loves him and the opposition frankly concedes his merits. Public affairs in his hands would be perfectly safe. But neither Mr. Taylor nor any other standard-bearer of his party may put up with any possible chance of defeat, even if Major Barrett up the Aberdeen way does continue to dream dreams and see visions.

James M. Brown of the state code commission was operated upon for appendicitis in a hospital in Minneapolis, and is critically ill.

Both Roosevelt and Mark Hanna are popular in South Dakota and it both should go over the state in 1904 there might be some politics worth shaking a stick at. Time was when Hanna was a big game to westerners, but as far as South Dakota is concerned, that passed when he made his speaking tour in the state in 1900 and drove several nails into Pettigrew's political coffin. Now if Mr. Hanna were the successful county wren, a thorough-going home man, he was nevertheless a prominent figure at conventions and editorial meetings, and he will be missed in every part of the state.

State Senator Loomis has sold his bank at Alpena and is preparing to move to Minneapolis, where he can carry on his grain business to better advantage. He has bought a membership in the Chamber of Commerce. His change of business base is a distinct loss for his community and the state at large.

It is not to be a lively campaign year in South Dakota. The republican campaign has dwindled until the seat has been taken out of things, and then, again, everybody is going to be too busy to fritter much valuable time away in quest of political excitement. But it is going to be the biggest kind of a year for South Dakota. Home-seekers are already falling over each other in the general grab game for land, and the builders are already

James M. Brown of the state code commission was operated upon for appendicitis in a hospital in Minneapolis, and is critically ill. Some of his South Dakota acquaintances visited him on Thursday and found him very ill and his physicians fairly confident of his recovery. His home is at Eureka, and a good deal of anxiety has been felt there. His colleagues on the commission are Judge Bartlett Tripp and ex-Senator Moody.
