NEW TRAIN PUT ON Great Northern Traffic in North Dakota Grows Rapidly.

On account of the great increase in passenger travel in North Dakota, the Great Northern railway finds it necessary to place an additional passenger train on service on the Dakota division, Aug. 3. This train will leave Grand Forks at 8:35 a. m., arrive Larimore at 9 a. m. and Hennepin, N. D., at 11:30 a. m. Return train will leave Hennepin at 2:15 p. m., arrive at Larimore at 8:05 p. m. and at Grand Forks at 7:05 p. m., daily except Sunday.

This is the second additional passenger train that the Great Northern has placed in service on its Dakota division this year on account of the increase in passenger travel in North Dakota, and at the present time the road is operating eight passenger trains a day, four in each direction, over various parts of its North Dakota main line.

The Great Northern's new night train between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Sioux City made its first start yesterday. The increased passenger travel in southwest Minnesota, northern Iowa and south Dakota, and will prove a valuable feeder to the twin cities.

Record for Regular Trains. On train No. 9, Breckenridge to Neche, recently, the Great Northern has 132 passengers. This is a regular scheduled daily train and the number is the record of any train in the northwest.

GOOD CROPS Country Grain Men All Tell Same Story. Nothing has been disclosed since Saturday that changes the favorable outlook for crops in the northwest. Good weather continues and the new week starts with the outlook fully up to that of a week ago, if not better, as the wheat is so much nearer maturity.

This morning brought in the usual Monday attendance of country grain men at the chamber of commerce. All brought the same story, good crops and the expectation of a bountiful harvest. Local grain men who ran out over Sunday to look around a bit bring back the same story.

W. H. McWilliams, who is in charge of the new line of country elevators being erected by Minneapolis capitalists in the Canadian northwest, is back from Winnipeg. Mr. McWilliams says the crops in Manitoba are on the whole as good as he has ever seen in that section. Everything is down from the line to Winnipeg is activity and bustle. Material has arrived for the greater number of the elevators to go up, and Mr. McWilliams says that at the rate the work is being pushed twenty houses will be ready to receive wheat when the Canadian crop begins to move.

KILLED AT HIS WORK A Fatal Accident in a New First Avenue Building.

Peter Nord, brick foreman employed on the building in course of construction on First avenue N between Fourth and Fifth streets, was almost instantly killed while at work this morning. He was coming down the hoist when his head came in violent contact with a projecting plank. The blow fractured his skull and he died soon after. The remains were removed to the family residence, 3719 Taylor street NE.

A SIX-STORY BLOCK

Building for Wholesale Use to Go Up on First Ave. N.

AT CORNER OF SIXTH STREET

T. B. Walker Chief Party in Deal—Building May Be Finished by January 1.

Still another handsome wholesale house is assured for upper First avenue N. This year, unless present plans miscarry. A deal, practically settled, calls for the erection of a big six-story wholesale block at the Sixth street corner, now occupied by an ancient frame store building for many years the office of the lumber firm of Camp & Walker. T. B. Walker is the chief party to the deal.

Plans call for a building about 100 feet on First avenue and 170 feet on Sixth street of the total least cost, $125,000 and the estimated cost is $125,000. It is understood that the building will be occupied by a new wholesale grocery house. It will have track facilities being reached by a spur track to its basement. It is hoped to have the building finished before Jan. 1.

Decided to make a beginning at least of the proposed Smith & Zimmer building, to occupy the location next to the Hennepin avenue terminus of the Wisconsin Central track, now covered by the Page hotel. Mr. Walker is also heavily interested in this project.

Arrangements have been made for the purchase of the site on the corner of Oct. 1, and it is supposed to begin immediately.

BIG WORK AT SNEILING

$300,000 THIS YEAR AND NEXT

Plans Provide for the Ultimate Expenditure of Three Quarters of a Million.

War department officials say that nearly $300,000 will be expended in additional buildings at Fort Snelling this season and next. Before the military appropriation bill became a law the secretary authorized the erection of a grain storehouse at a cost, approximately, of $30,000. On last Monday he made an allotment of $18,000 for the erection of barracks and quarters for one battery of artillery, of which two barracks will be situated at the post within a year. Next spring, when the work now authorized is well under way or about completed, another allotment of about $80,000 will be made for the erection of other buildings.

Such work as is now being authorized is to carry out comprehensive plans for the improvement of Fort Snelling, which will raise it to the dignity of a first class post. It has been approved by Secretary Root. It is expected that to complete the plan will involve an expenditure of upward of three-quarters of a million dollars, and a portion of this will be allotted each year from the general appropriation act.

BOOKBINDERY AT STAKE

J. G. Williams Goes to Law—Art Bookbindery Involved.

Joseph G. Williams has appealed to the district court to settle a controversy between himself and his partner, Fred F. Hennig, involving the Art Book bindery, Williams alleges that while he was in Washington Hennig mortgaged the business, his wife, a chattel mortgage on the whole bindery plant, worth $1,000. This was dated June 2 and on June 11 Mrs. Hennig foreclosed on the mortgage. The plant was sold by the sheriff on June 28 to Herman A. Hennig, a son of Fred F. He in turn mortgaged it to A. L. Broughton, president of the Hennig company. Broughton knew nothing of any of these proceedings until he returned to the city a fortnight ago.

CAPT. COFFIN RETURNS

He Says He Has Been Rusticating in Wisconsin.

Captain Fred Coffin of the cavalry contingent of the police force, is also back in the city. He reported for duty yesterday and was occupying his accustomed chair at headquarters for a time this morning. He says he has been spending his time in Wisconsin. He denies that he took part in any conference between Mayor Ames and Colonel Ames in Chicago.

MUST WAIT A YEAR BIG, NEW ASBURY

Work on the Hospital Being Pushed With Vigor.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WORK

Plan is to Make It a Charity Hospital of the Very Best Type.

One of the busiest spots in the city is on Ninth avenue S, between Ninth and Fourteenth streets, where the new Asbury hospital is being erected. As the building assumes shape, the magnitude of the undertaking is revealed and its importance emphasized.

When completed Asbury will be the largest and best equipped hospital in the northwest, and will be surpassed by few in the entire country. That Minneapolis has such an institution is agreed. The presence of two medical schools with splendid corps of instructors has made this city an important medical and surgical center for a very wide area of country. One thing has militated against Minneapolis. That has been very poor hospital accommodations. Many leading physicians have been forced to private hospitals.

The Commercial Club, having carefully looked into the matter through a special committee, has given the Asbury enterprise its heartiest endorsement by concurring in the following report to the public affairs committee made by the subcommittee on public health:

At the last regular meeting of this committee the board of Asbury hospital presented its claims as a public hospital and requested the support of the Commercial Club in its effort to build and equip in this city a first-class hospital for medical and surgical cases, and said request was the subcommittee on public health, which committee does hereby report and recommend as follows:

That the demand for such an institution in this city requires the outlay and building of the proposed hospital as a matter of public health, which committee does hereby report and recommend as follows:

That the plans are fully in accord with such demands and fully adapted to meet all the requirements of advanced methods of treatment of all such cases.

That what is commended especially the construction of the hospital as regards sanitation and safety of patients.

Therefore, it is resolved that we recommend to the citizens of Minneapolis their hearty endorsement and trust that they will appreciate and approve the same by such substantial gifts as will expedite its early construction and dedication to its worthy purposes.

A TRAIT OF HANNA'S

How the Ohio Senator Makes Fast Friends.

EXPERIENCE OF A MINNEAPOLITAN

How He Sold the Ohio Millionaire a Carload of Rice.

Marcus A. Hanna makes fast friends. They never cease to have a kindly feeling for the man. That is a generalization from the experience of a well known importer and broker of Minneapolis, who quite incidentally in a conversation with friends a few evenings ago, told a story which throws much light upon the friend-making qualities of the great Ohioan.

The broker, at the time of the incident which made him an abiding friend of Mr. Hanna, was traveling for New York hours of the kind of which he is now at the head in Minneapolis. His route took him into the northern peninsula of Michigan, where Mr. Hanna had been and still has extensive interests among which at that time were several large general stores. These stores were good customers of the New York house and on this trip its representative, of course, expected to sell good orders to all of them.

It was a dull day for business, a snow storm blowing without, when he arrived at one of the most important of the stores, and the announcement of the manager that he was loaded up and couldn't take a thing wasn't particularly encouraging. He knew his man, however, and knew it was useless to urge him to buy when he had said he couldn't. Talk drifted from trade to other channels, until the manager said "Come back to the desk; Hanna is here."

The man from New York was not averse to meeting Mr. Hanna and walked back to the desk. He was met by Hanna, who was a man of imposing "domo" bending over a desk writing a letter. The formalities were gone through with, and Mr. Hanna laid aside his letter writing with as much grace as though it had been a matter of far less importance than would engage him in that occupation and for a far more important purpose than that of meeting a traveling man who had rice and canned goods for sale.

He immediately plunged into conversation, asking his new acquaintance all sorts of questions about himself and his business. In response he was informed that the man from New York was an Ohioan representing a New York house. Mr. Hanna's interest was awakened to a still greater extent by the information that he was talking with a native of Ohio, and after a little more talk he turned to his manager and said: "John, you've given him an order, of course."

"Couldn't do it, Mr. Hanna; we're loaded up," was the reply. "Oh, damn, John, that won't do! A man from Ohio must have an order; can't you take a carload of something?" "What are you selling?" (turning to the traveling man). "Rice and canned goods," he was informed.

"Rice, John; take a carload of rice," said Mr. Hanna to his manager, and the deal was closed, though Mr. Hanna went on talking in a highly interesting manner, helping the salesman to put in the remaining hours of the afternoon.

Mr. Hanna had not forgotten the "order" he had given, and he was now a broker, met Mr. Hanna in Columbus. He felt no hesitancy in approaching the senator. As he put out his hand to shake hands with the senator, Mr. Hanna said: "What are you selling?" (turning to the traveling man). "Rice and canned goods," he was informed.

MINNETONKA

In spite of the calm which made slow sailing a necessity, the annual cruise of the Minnetonka yacht club, Saturday, was a great success.

On Roy Wagner's boat, the Hazard, were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wagner, Misses Marie Raliff and Constance Wells.

The course was from the clubhouse to Chapman's, Bartlett's to Mound City, with Waukegan and Crane island to port, and the starting gun was fired at 11 o'clock, and there was a fair breeze for nearly half an hour. It gradually died down until the judge boat, the Frolic, was obliged to tow several of the sloops and cats. The launches arrived first and the Hoodlum, the Burton boat, was the first sloop to appear around Cedar point, and it was after 2 o'clock when the race was over.

There was a close contest between the Katahdin and the Tanager for the prize, a standard United States pennant, offered for the most handsomely decorated boat. The Katahdin, owned by Lucian Swift, was all in white with foam-like drapery covering the hull and deck and wreathing the stays. Her passengers, Mr. and Mrs. Swift, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Strong, Mrs. Frederick Fayram, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Van Campen and Lucian Swift Strong, were all in white.

In contrast the Tanager was like a flame. Her red hull was polished until it gleamed like fire and red flags and banners floated from the flag poles. Garlands of red roses festooned the canopy and a basket of red roses swung from the bow. The Tanager carried Mr. and Mrs. Anson Brooks and a family party, and was awarded the prize.

The special pennant for the winning sail and cat boats was not awarded as the boats did not arrive at the finish on account of the light wind, and the race was declared off.

Fred Norenberg's new launch, the Winnetona, was hung with garlands of red geraniums and a large deer's head was under the headlight.

L. S. Gillette had his launch wreathed with green and American flags were most effective against the leaf background, and banners and bunting trailed from stern and bow. The launch carried a family party.

James H. Howard had Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stevens, Mrs. Eugene C. Stevens and Blanche Stickey, Gertrude McGee, Jessie Simpson and Lucille Bailey on the Catalpa H, which was elaborately decorated with the flags of nations surmounted by the American colors.

Mr. and Mrs. William Walker had as guests on their new launch, Messrs. and Mrs. George Harrison, Russell Bennett, Mrs. H. G. Harrison and Leon Walker and the Bennett children.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lees entertained on the Asahwa, and the other boats of the family, Mrs. Samuel Arnold and daughter of Toronto, Canada, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Overmier.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Travers had Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stevens, Mrs. D. M. Stevens, Helen Huyck, Brown, Field, Edith Jackson, Carrie Session of Utica, N. Y., and Charles Elliot Thompson.

Roy Thompson's new launch, the young people on his sailboat with Mrs. Thompson as chaperone.
