The Epistol Alpha Mu fraternity was entertained Saturday afternoon by Miss Cella Tannar. The parlors were brightly decorated with sweet peas and the dining-room was in the high school colors, orange and black. Games were played and a conundrum luncheon was served. The favors were in the fraternity colors, blue and white, and were presented by the hostess.

Early Autumn Costuming

USEFUL GOWNS THAT CAN BE WORN FOR BOTH FALL AND WINTER

A SMART OUTING SUIT.

Midair is going to be very particular about her fall gowns as she wants something that will stand her in good stead all through the fall season, and that she can even wear in winter with a heavy coat.

She has a wide range to select from, but it is most likely that she will take something in a cord, a plain cloth in blue, green or black, or else in a black and white or brown and white mixture. For daily use and for rough wear the mixed color effects will probably be the most worn.

In cut they show but little difference from the styles of last year. We have skirts made with all kinds of plaits, as well as adorned with braids and strapings of self material.

Jackets, as a rule, blouse slightly in front and then gather in the waist, extending several inches below that point. A great many show the postillon back, and this is not infrequently adorned with gilt buttons or fancy braid.

One very effective suit on this order is of brown and white cheviot. The jacket blouses slightly in front and is trimmed with bands of brown cheviot in self tone, these bands being stitched in white. The form rather a Gibson effect in front, and also around the belt and collar of the garment. Little capes of self material cover the shoulder of each arm, while the sleeves are slightly loose in the upper portion, but rather tight over the elbow, terminating in brown cheviot with the white stitching. Below the waist the jacket terminates in points in front, with postillon back.

The skirt is most effective, and is adorned with long straps of the self material, terminating from twelve to sixteen inches above the ground. At the termination of each one of these straps is an inverted plait, to lend further effectiveness to the garment.

A broad, flat hat trimmed with light-colored veiling completes the costume, that is suitable for mountain wear, golfing or, with a more elaborate headgear, could be worn in the city.

A trio of typical walking suits are of snowflake cashmere, mixed cheviot and blue cheviot respectively. They all have the postillon back, the mannish collar and the loosely cut skirt. Better suits for fall could not be devised.

Garments on this order are not as expensive as many would imagine. Very pretty and serviceable suits that will wear well and look well can be had anywhere from $18 to $25. Of course, you can easily pay double that sum and get your money's worth in wear. But what the average woman of to-day wants is a suit for now—next season she will be tired of it and want something else, and she will then want to feel that she can get one with a free conscience, with no vision of a perfectly good, but somewhat out-of-date, one handy in her closet at home.

Cheviots, ladies' cloth and other wool effects are not to have it all their own way by any means—there are the cord effects and the velveteens to be considered. When it comes to wear there is nothing that will outlast corduroy. Our American girls are notoriously hard on their clothes, and for such as hold up this reputation corduroy is certainly to be recommended.

A very pretty suit on this order is of green corduroy—a decidedly popular color, by the way. It is made with mannish jacket, the collar, lapels and cuffs being of a lighter shade of green stitched taffeta. Both the jacket and the otherwise plain skirt are adorned with box plaits. In the lap of spring, "but it is equally true that Dame Summer often refuses to give place to autumn at the appointed time. And when this happens what a hubbub. The poor summer girl has practically worn out all her clothes and hasn't a "rag to her back." What shall she do? What shall she wear?

The best answer is some kind of a betwixt and between suit that will serve not only now but also later. A very pretty model is of cream colored ladies' cloth, trimmed with braid and polka dot satin ribbon. It is made rather dressy, with something of a train on the skirt, and, altogether, is just the thing for a between seasons gown.

SEPT. WOMEN'S MAGAZINES

Harper's Bazar for September has for an opening feature an article on "Good Taste in Women's Work." Miss M. M. Hall, the artist, Geraldine Rowland writes of art study in Paris and Marlon Foster Washington of "Mother and Child." There are some very interesting fiction sketches in the latest drawings from "Through the Looking Glass," and F. Y. Cory and Sarah S. Stillwell contribute some charming drawings of children. The novel includes the story of Mary E. Wilkins Freeman's stories and another instalment of the serial by E. Nesbit. Louis Fiske Bryson offers some suggestions for the training of backward children. The fashion department has in addition to the new styles, drawings of the coronation gowns worn by some of the women.

The article on the housekeeper's salary in the September Good Housekeeping will furnish material for many an argument. The home of Miss Mollie Elliott Seawell, is pictured and described. Minneapolis people will be interested in an article, "Little Home Makers," which describes a certain branch of public school industrial work in Minneapolis and other school matters are discussed by Clara M. Bostwick and Professor Calvin N. Kendall. The story by the Baroness Von Bulow. The departments are unusually helpful and will be of assistance to both the housekeeper and the mother.

London Knight writes of the year "Stringtown on the Pike" in the Woman's Home Companion for September. Rev. A. T. Clay describes the digging up of a Bible city. Mrs. Walter Camp tells of outdoor sports in girls' colleges and the stories are by Zoe Anderson Norris, Cyrus Townsend Brady, Stanley Waterloo, Frederick M. Smith and Hermon Lee Ensign. A group of prominent educators discuss the question about the girls' college? There is a page of photographs of the St. Louis exposition and any number of pretty fashions while housekeeping suggestions run through several pages. Meredith Nugent tells the children how to make home artillery and Sam Dunn presents one of his puzzles.

CLUBS AND CHARITIES

DISCUSSING CITY FEDERATION
Winona Club Women Preparing the Sea-son's Work

The Winona women's clubs are beginning to prepare for winter work. The study period with most of the clubs will commence at the end of this month. A number of the clubs are preparing for the federation of clubs. This will be specially desirable in view of the fact that the district federation of women's clubs is to meet here in the month of October. Little, one of the prominent club women of this city, who attended the general federation meeting at Los Angeles in the spring, is today in the city. She will appear at the meeting of the state federation at Albert Lea in October. Mrs. Little will tell about the literary work at the Los Angeles convention.

FOR MISS BROOKS

St. Paul People Honor Their Retiring Primary Supervisor.
A group of Minneapolis teachers went to St. Paul yesterday afternoon to attend the farewell reception given by the Women's Civic League and the Grade Teachers' Association in honor of Miss Sarah E. Brooks, retiring supervisor of the primary department of the St. Paul public schools, who leaves shortly to enter upon new duties in the Baltimore schools. The affair was given in the Commercial club rooms and H. A. Boardman, president of the Commercial club, presided over the program of speeches. J. W. J. Corning, Daniel W. Lawler, Rev. T. E. Shields and Governor Van Sant spoke of the esteem in which Miss Brooks is held and she said a few words in response. Miss Nellie E. Fong's ladies' orchestra played and Harry E. George sang. Tea, coffee and punch were served from prettily decked tables and the rooms were gay with garden flowers.
