Question of Pensions.

Taking up the question of pensions, General Torrance related the circumstances connected with the investigation of the charges against former Pension Commis-sioner Evans. Speaking of the report made by the Grand Army's pensions committee, General Torrance said that the acceptance of the resignation of Commissioner Evans by the president immediately followed the presentation of this committee's report to him. Referring further to the effect pro-duced by his inquiry he said:

"One most gratifying result of our investigation was to find that no ground existed for the wholesale charges of fraud so often made against the pensioners. A large part of the last report of Commissioner Eyans was taken up with a recital of cases of fraud committed or attempted to be committed against the government during the preceding thirty years, but soldiers convicted of crime during the year was but one thousandth part of one per cent of the total number of the pen-sion roll. We challenge any other department of the government to make as fa-

They were the last to leave the field and among the last to apply for relief at the names of the government. Fore more than a third of a century they have borne an honorable part in advancing the interests of the country and at this late day when in their old age they apply for help, they should not be regarded with disfavor because they did not apply earlier."

General Torrance declared that no pecuniary compensation ever could be made to those who preserved the union, for that was a debt of gratitude which could not be paid with dollars and cents. The patriotic impulse that moved us lay all on the altar of our country, had, he said, "no fellowship with mercenary motive. We did not belittle the grandeur of the cause in which we engaged by calculating on personal gain. equacy of our pay but added to the dignity of the penalties we suffered. Under the skies thousands of our comrades suffered as prisoners of war, but no com-Release on plaint escaped their lips. terms of renunciation of their fealty to the flag were rejected with their expiring breath. On the field of battle fruitless assaults were often made in the face of certain death, but no one faltered in response to the unwise command. Those were days of unquestioned heroism supreme devotion, and unparalleled sacrifice; and in these latter days the rear guard of that immortal army should exhibit a spirit no less heroic than that manifested by those who fell in the foreground of the conflict so many years ago."

Tribute to Auxiliaries. General Torrance paid high tribute to he work of the women's auxiliary organizations, including the relief corps and the

"Ladies of the Grand Army of the Re-public," and also made an appeal for the proper recognition of the sons of veterans, saying on the latter point: Posterity, for which we fought, not only arrived, but will soon become the exclusive custodians of our country's destiny, and who more worthily than our sons

Kindliness to Confederates. He devoted considerable space to con sideration of the status of the ex-confederate soldier, repeating in spirit his plea of a month ago at manifestation of good and brotherly kindness towards the late adversaries of the members of the Grand Army. He said he had been prompted in making that appeal by the belief that such actions would tend to bring still closer together all parts of the country in the bonds of a common citizenship, and there were already, he added, evidences in the responses received from the southern states that he had not miscalculated. Indeed, he said, with but two exceptions, the entire press of the country had commended the spirit of the letter.

Continuing on this point he said: "It is not expected that the Grand Army of the Republic as an organization will embark in the building of homes for soldiers north or south, but in no possible way can the greatest fraternal organization in the world, more becomingly crown its labors of love in behalf of its own membership than by extending the hand of helpfulness to their fellow countrymen, against whom they were once arrayed in strife. The most disastrous results of a civil war are the animosities and bitter feelings engendered thereby, and I am convinced that one of the most patriotic services we can render our country is to earnestly aid in removing every barrier that separates of estranges the people. The victory at Appomattox will rield imperfect fruit if we do not win the hearts as well as the flags of the men who wore the gray. A union of hearts as well of hands is indispensable to an indisoluble union of indestructible states. No Sectional Lines. 'The Grand Army of the Republic has nothing to fear. It is not trammeled by political creeds, nor embarrassed by secarian controversies, and in the discharge of my fluty neither my heart nor my judgment will consent to return to you the great commission committed to my trust one year ago, without voicing the noble sentiments which I know animate all your hearts and I rest confident in the belief that no influence or conditions north or south can successfully construct or mainspeech, between the surviving veterans of their use

The Surgeon General. Official reports were made by the senior vice commander, the junior vice com-mander, the surgeon general, the chaplain in chief, the adjutant general, the quartermaster general, the inspector gen-eral and the judge advocate general. In his report, Surgeon General W. R. Thrall of Cincinnati recommends that the office of surgeon-general be made hon-orary and that the mortuary and health features which the surgeon general is ex-pected to supply, be furnished by the ad-jutant general. This recommendation is tistics which would be entirely unreliable. The Chaplain's Work.
