FOOTBALL AN ALL-STAR ELEVEN

Four Minn. Players Have Earned Their Places on the All-Western Team.

Flynn Far Above Any Other Guard—Rogers, Knowlton and Van Valkenburg Named.

ALL-WESTERN ELEVEN.
 Center, Ellsworth of Chicago.
 Guards, Flynn of Minnesota and Lerum of Wisconsin.
 Tackles, Maddock of Michigan and Davidson of Purdue.
 Ends, Rogers of Minnesota and Cook of Illinois.
 Quarter, Weeks of Michigan.
 Halfbacks, Heston of Michigan and Van Valkenburg of Minnesota.
 Fullback, Knowlton of Minnesota.

SECOND ELEVEN.
 Center, Gregory of Michigan.
 Guards, McGugin of Michigan and Ahlweide of Wisconsin.
 Tackles, Schacht of Minnesota and Farr of Chicago.
 Ends, Abbott of Wisconsin and Redden of Michigan.
 Quarter, Harris of Minnesota.
 Halfbacks, Heston of Michigan and Vanderbock of Wisconsin.
 Fullback, Jones of Michigan.

In these modern days no football roster can be considered the "real thing" unless it makes up its own all-western eleven. The practice of selecting a star team at the end of each season has been criticized on the ground that no team of individual stars, however brilliant, could hope to defeat an eleven in which team work was developed to such a degree of perfection as in the Michigan aggregation of 1902.

These criticisms overlook the fact that the all-star teams are not designed to be anything but paper aggregations. They are intended simply as a recognition of the ability of the players in their individual positions. They serve that purpose, and are intended to do no more.

Keeping this purpose carefully in mind, the above eleven has been selected. Exception will be taken to many of the selections, for in several positions a number of players were even matched that few would agree upon the best men.

With a view of awarding credit to the most deserving players, moreover, no men have been named who have not played the positions for which they are selected in a majority of the big games of the season. No theories have been advanced in regard to what certain men might do in positions other than those in which they are named. Stahl of Illinois might reasonably be expected to make as good a showing at guard as Lerum. Again, Stahl, in the opinion of many critics, would make an ideal fullback, combining good defensive play with great ability in line-smashing, and being also a punter of more than average skill. Inasmuch as Stahl is barred from consideration for either of these positions.

The eleven named above have been selected entirely from men whose teams were members of the "big nine." At least two deserving players have been left out on this account. Reference to their records will be made below.

Ellsworth the Best Center.
 Ellsworth of Chicago is clearly entitled to the place at center. He has easily outplayed Skow of Wisconsin and Gregory of Michigan, and inasmuch as Gregory had slightly the better showing in the Michigan-Minnesota game, Ellsworth stands practically without a rival. Ellsworth, in addition to stopping plays directed at center, has shown ability to back up the whole line, and has frequently broken up plays set at the ends. Ellsworth's ability as a punter adds to the arguments in his favor, although on an all-star team the liner's ability is supposed to be selected with regard to anything except their ability in their own places.

Flynn and Lerum for Guards.
 Flynn of Minnesota easily stands head and shoulders above the other guards. In fact, he is the only guard of the year who has attracted much attention by his individual work. Lerum of Wisconsin, a member of Chicago and Baird of Northwestern have all filled their positions creditably, but have done little beyond defending their own positions in the line. Flynn on the other hand, has shown remarkable ability in breaking through and getting down the field on kicks, in blocking punts, and in backing up the whole line. He is also an effective ground gainer when called upon. In every game of the year he has repeatedly got down on punts before the Minnesota ends could arrive on the scene of action.

Between Lerum of Wisconsin and McGugin of Michigan, the choice is difficult. Lerum, however, has shown greater ability in breaking through and tackling the runner behind the line. His performance has been fully as good as that of McGugin, and as the latter has shown no ability in breaking through and tackling the runner behind the line, Flynn on the other hand, has shown remarkable ability in breaking through and getting down the field on kicks, in blocking punts, and in backing up the whole line. He is also an effective ground gainer when called upon. In every game of the year he has repeatedly got down on punts before the Minnesota ends could arrive on the scene of action.

Maddock a Star Line-Backer.
 Maddock of Michigan is one of the most powerful line-plungers of the year, and an invaluable head plunger. Inasmuch as the tackle back play, with a tackle to run with the ball, or open a hole for a back, is one of the strongest offensive plays in the modern game, these points must be given equal consideration with defensive play in selecting the all-western players for this position. Maddock, however, has shown great ability in stopping plunges at his side of the line. He unquestionably leads the tackles of the year.

Davidson of Purdue, though playing on a third-rate team, made a great record in breaking through on punts, and defended his position splendidly. He combines great weight with remarkable agility. Schacht of Minnesota is little behind Maddock as a line-plunger, while Farr of Chicago is probably the best defensive tackle of the year.

Four Ends Evenly Matched.
 Four ends—Abbott, Rogers, Cook and Redden—are so evenly matched that little chance for comparison is offered. Rogers is a remarkable head plunger, a good ground-gainer and a strong defensive player. Few gains have been made around his end this year, and nearly all of these have been due to poor support from his halfback and tackle. Cook of Illinois is a fast man on following down punts, and at boxing a tackle he has no superior in the west. Abbott of Wisconsin and Redden of Michigan are so nearly equal to Cook and Rogers that it seems a pity not to pick all four on the first eleven. Weeks of Michigan has fairly earned the position of captain and quarterback of the star team. He has shown good headwork in choosing plays, and also has been remarkably successful in placing his men to meet the attack of opposing teams. Michigan's system of requiring the captain to give signals on both offense and defense puts a great strain upon Weeks, but his individual play suffered little from this added labor. He backs up the line well, and usually handles and runs back punts nicely, although he made several fumbles in the game with Minnesota.

Harris of Minnesota, Fogg of Wisconsin and Maxwell of Chicago are all playing their first year on a varsity team. Harris is the best field general of the lot, however, and in fact he seems to have inherited much of his father's ability in this direction as Weeks. In catching and running back punts also, his work is far above the average.

Heston in Class by Himself.
 Heston of Michigan unquestionably deserves one-halfback position. He is equally good at line-plunging or end runs, and is also a strong man on the broken field his weight, speed and dodging ability make him one of the hardest men in the country to stop. The choice of a man for the other half-back position is difficult. Van Valkenburg, were his defensive work as good as his line plunging, would be the one unquestioned choice. His work in the line for more than thirty yards in one series of plunges, stamps him as one of the greatest men in this respect the west has ever known. On the whole he is entitled to the position.

Hard to Choose a Fullback
 The selection of a fullback who embodies all the requisite qualifications is difficult. In fact, a fullback should be a good punter, although this point may be overlooked if the team includes a kicker in some other position; he must be a good line backer, strong on offense and a good defensive man, Jones of Michigan is the best linebacking fullback, but not particularly strong on defense. Moreover he has played through scarcely one game. The other nearly always alternating with Lawrence. He hardly appears to have the stamina to last through a hard game, and an all-western fullback who cannot stand seventy minutes of play would be sadly out of place. Driver of Wisconsin has been badly off in this form this year, and has been out of the game a large part of the time.

The choice therefore is narrowed down to Knowlton as the only fullback of class who has played enough to warrant his selection. Knowlton is not the ideal man for the place, but is a good punter, and can on occasion kick a goal from placement. His defensive work is particularly strong. Graver of Michigan played only a part of one game fullback but his kicking during that time was of the highest class. If a selection were to be made outside the big nine, Salmon of Notre Dame would be entitled to a place at fullback on his linebacking ability. He carried the ball by successive plunges more than forty yards through Michigan's great line, without being stopped. In other words, he advanced the ball farther in one stretch by plunges through the Michigan forwards, than any other entire team in the west has done. A fullback who could do this in Minnesota or Jones of Michigan can show such a record.

Sweeley of Michigan is not given a place on either eleven, for the reason that his end play does not warrant putting him above any of the quartet of ends named above. Nor was his work at fullback or halfback in previous years strong enough to warrant his selection for one of those positions. His punting is very strong, but that in itself cannot justify putting him on an all-star team.

TICKET SCALPING SCANDAL.
 Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 3.—As a result of the number of tickets sold and the exorbitant prices asked by sellers for the West Point annual football tickets at Franklin field Saturday afternoon, a number of the undergraduates of the University of Pennsylvania will be suspended from the university.

LITTLE HOLLISTER'S FATE.
 Chicago, Dec. 3.—Instead of postponing action until January, the board of athletic control at Northwestern university may decide Coach Hollister's fate this week, and from indications this decision will be that the little coach will be retained as head coach for only this season, will be retired. In his place will be chosen some one who has shown an ability to lead the Northwestern team and demand for their alma mater.

REDDEN IS MICHIGAN'S CAPTAIN.
 Ann Arbor, Dec. 3.—Curtis G. Redden, left end, was yesterday afternoon elected captain of the University of Michigan football team for next season. His nearest rival was Martin Heston, left halfback on the team. Redden, who is captain Weeks awarded fourteen "M" sweaters, the official 1902 team, according to this season's election. Cook, McGugin, Gregory, Carter, Maddock, Sweeley, Weeks, Heston, Heston, Jones, Graver, Palmer and Lawrence, although Palmer did not play in either the Oberlin or Minnesota games, he gets his "M" for work done in the Chicago and Wisconsin games. Lawrence has played in so many games that he is entitled to the honor, while Graver's work in the Minnesota game would give him his "M" if it had done nothing else during the season.

YALE LOSES THREE MEN.
 New Haven, Conn., Dec. 3.—Henry Holt, the Yale center, last night denied that he would return to Yale for another year. He will graduate next June. Holt, Goss and Caproni, who were expected to go into business at once, although there is talk that Chadwick will be chosen head coach next year. This cannot be decided till after the election of a Yale captain for next season, which will take place immediately.

THREE CHALLENGES SENT

Lake City, Excelsior and Calhoun Ice Yachtsmen Want to Race Minnetonka Boats.

At the annual meeting of the Minnetonka club last evening, at the office of Theodore Wetmore in the West Hotel, Alfred Pillsbury was re-elected commodore; H. J. Burton, vice-commodore. George K. Helden was elected secretary and treasurer. T. B. Janney and James Marshall were chosen trustees. Willis Walker will be official measurer. Challenges were received from the Lake City Ice Yacht club and the Excelsior Yacht club for a series of races during the winter. The Calhoun Yacht club sent an informal challenge by telephone, and promised to forward a formal defy later. The Minnetonka club accepted the Lake City challenge and referred the proposition of the Excelsior club to the sports committee. The Calhoun club's defy will be accepted.

WANT PHIL KING TO STAY.
 Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 3.—A meeting of the alumni of the University of Wisconsin will be held in this city on the last part of this week or the first of next for the purpose of considering what is thought by many of the former athletes of the university as a crisis year in the athletic relations of the badger institution. A canvass of those who were favored by the sliding lights of the Madison gridiron team reveals the fact that there is not one Milwaukee alumnus who could be found to be interviewed who was not in favor of the return of Phil King as head coach for next season. While each and every one deprecates the poor showing of the eleven this year not one criticizes King for it, although many of them are in favor of returning to the former policy of the institution of making the success of the eleven the prime factor rather than basing the schedule on a financial consideration.

NEBRASKA AFTER GAMES.
 Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 3.—The Nebraska university is negotiating with the "big nine" for football games next year. Iowa and Illinois are practically certain. Wisconsin may give the selection of a captain for next year's Nebraska football team lies between Halbacks Bell and Bender.

MARCOONS HAVE A BOX PARTY.
 Chicago, Dec. 3.—Although the football season is over, the gridiron warriors at the University of Chicago have not yet descended to the level of ordinary students, but still have a distinct show given them, to which the common "gridder" cannot lay claim. Last night all the football men who have been on the training table at the Midway school were the guests of the athletic management at a box party at the Illinois theater.

Considerable amusement was afforded the country runners yesterday afternoon, when Coach Starr announced the reason for the non-appearance of the Northwestern team for the run Thanksgiving day. Manager Butterworth received a telegram Thursday morning stating that the "team could not come as another of its best men was suffering from a severe case of vaccination, and that in their crippled condition the members of Northwestern team did not feel willing to compete."
