LOCK REFUSED TO WORK

Inner Safe of a Local Bank Guilty of a Shameless Deception.

The safe in the National Bank of Commerce was caught in a little act of deception Saturday night, and yesterday an expert from Chicago labored for twelve hours to correct this fault.

It was discovered Saturday that this iron monster, in which is stored the million fold of the bank, did not lock when the usual knobs were turned. The safe is like a big dynamo in appearance. It is fastened to the wall with three cranks, two of which are shot with three cranks, two of which are shot with three cranks, two of which are shot with three cranks.

As the safe, in turn, is securely locked in a burglar-proof vault, the contents were in no danger, but the officials decided that the device needed disciplining. An expert left Chicago post haste. Yesterday at 9 a. m. he began a surgical operation which necessitated the removal of all the mechanism. It was carefully laid piece by piece on the vault floor and all the available tables were used to hold it. A little spring was broken. This was replaced, the internal organism of the locks was restored and the safe was in working order again at 9:30 p. m.

Linens is always a welcome gift to the housewife of slender means. A new feature in table linens is the round cloths for the new popular circular table. The most expensive of them are those with centers, with deep, irregular lace borders set in like medallions. Among the choice and beautiful designs are the "King Arthur" with perfectly plain centers and lace hanging and borders, and those with designs in lilacs, wisteria, chrysanthemums and American Beauty roses.

There should be a centerpiece of some description on the home table, if it be nothing more than a simple, inexpensive vase holding a few fern leaves. This gives the charming refinement so desirable on the table around which the family gathers daily. One of the daughters of the house with a taste for embroidery should make at least a half dozen centerpieces of linen with scalloped or hemstitched edges, and this forms a dainty foundation for the vase or loaf dish.

If you have some old daguerotypes, glass-covered and gilt-matted, take them out of their embossed leather cases and frame them in some dull shade of close-plaited velvet, with red or dull red, or if you like, in silver or pewter, and you will have a fashionable bit of bric-a-brac, and at the same time preserve an esteemed antique.

A luncheon suggestion useful when tomatoes are in season—and that in the cities is all the year around—is to serve the oyster cocktail in tomato sauce. Select small firm tomatoes, have them ice cold, scoop out the center, and fill with the oysters and seasoning.

A dentist advises that fruit eaten at night presupposes the use of the toothbrush as surely as if candy had been munching. The traces of acids should be removed quite as promptly as those of sweets. Care should be taken, too, as to what is eaten before a teeth-filling appointment. Acids are to be avoided, particularly those that set the teeth on edge. Persons with sensitive teeth will find that this care may save them several pangs.

Delicious fancy cakes are made of one and one-half ounces of rice flour, two and one-half ounces of wheat flour, four ounces of butter, four ounces of granulated sugar, three eggs, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, extract of vanilla, some apricot jam or preserve, and blanched almonds chopped and browned. Put butter into a small saucepan, add thoroughly with a wooden spoon, adding by degrees the sugar. Mix the flour together and divide the mixture into three portions. Add one egg and the third portion of flour. Beat all well and stir in a teaspoonful of vanilla and half a teaspoonful of baking powder.

Butter, some pat-buns, dust them lightly with flour mixed with a little sugar. Put in the mixture and bake in very quick oven. When they are cool, pass some apricot jam through a sieve, then warm in a small saucepan, adding two or three drops of carmine. Cover the tops of the cakes with the jam and then scatter the chopped almonds over the top.

TACTICS NOT ILLEGAL

The Federal Court Passes on a Case Involving Tobacco Trust Methods.

Judge Lochren declared in the United States circuit court yesterday that the conditions imposed upon retail tobacco dealers by the Continental Tobacco company to enforce an exclusive use of the company's goods were legal and not in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law or the interstate commerce act.

The decision was made in the case against the tobacco company and its agent, George McHie, by Joseph P. Whitwell, a St. Paul cigar dealer. The plaintiff charged that the company's conditions with McHie to monopolize the St. Paul trade.

McHie is employed by the company to fix every three months the amounts of tobacco and other stock which he thinks the retailer or jobber should handle during the ensuing three months. In this particular instance he is charged with having fixed the allotments unnecessarily high in order to give his company the whip hand. One of the conditions under which allotments are sold to the dealers is that they sell out at the end of three months; they shall be allowed a 5 per cent rebate on tobacco and 10 per cent on cigars. If a dealer fails to dispose of his allotment he is allowed the rebate only on condition that he will agree not to handle the goods of any other concern.

Mr. Whitwell claims that he was so treated. He sued to recover $2,000 damages. A stay of forty-two days was granted.
