Seward School Grade Graduates Tell of Helpful Influences in School Life.

Self Reliance, Faculty of Expression, Perseverance, Etc., Among the Lessons Learned.

This afternoon, at the eighth grade commencement of the south district, a paper was read that will attract the thoughtful consideration of those who are interested in education and particularly in the Minneapolis public schools.

"Last year Mr. Dowling, the speaker of the house in our own state legislature, addressed our class. When I saw for myself what a man with only one leg, one arm and no hand could do for himself, I made up my mind that a boy with all his limbs could do as much. It made me thankful for a good body, for health and a chance to do something. I then realized that every one is his own master. What I shall be depends upon myself—not on parents or teachers or the world.

"One of the girls wrote thus: 'Many beautiful lessons have come to me since I entered the baby-room eight years ago, but no lesson has ever done so much for me as the study of the picture of Sir Galahad. He was a knight, which shows the beauty of a pure heart, is one that does more to influence one's life than all the arithmetic, or grammar, or history a person could ever learn. The weak and the helpless shall be better for my having lived near them. Just the same as the weak and lowly were better for Galahad's help.'

"A boy says: 'Punctuality to the minute, obedience to all rules and cheerfulness in doing our work have all influenced me very much. I learned to look on my work as a privilege and to be glad to have an opportunity of doing something to help myself by doing it.'

"Here is another boy's opinion: 'Many good things have come to me during my school life, but I regard the opening up of the book world by my teacher when she read to us and when she influenced us to get into the public library branch established in Seward school, as the one thing that will help me most in the future. I shall never forget my teacher's reading of the 'Knights of the Round Table.' It was all so beautiful and real. I shall always love Galahad himself. I am very sure my life will be influenced always by the book, by the picture and by the little talks our teacher had with us about it while we read it.'

"A girl gives this opinion of other people's opinions: 'When I leave school, people will hear me speak. They can't see me solve problems. If I can't speak correctly, my instructor will tell the story of my ignorance at once. Grammar, as we had it in our class, will help me to get my English, and, in the meantime, what helped me most. 'And here is how another girl learned a lesson from me curiously: 'The incident that left an indelible impression on my mind occurred during my first year in school. We were drawing. I turned around and saw a boy who was not obeying our teacher's instructions and I forthwith reported the fact. Result? I, not she, was punished. It took me a long time to reason it out, but I learned this lesson: 'To mind my own business.' It taught me I was responsible for my own actions and not for my neighbor's. I shall never lose the value of that lesson.'
